But we must remember, the war isn't over yet. There are going to be many days of sacrifice before the final one of Victory. Here are some of the things we can do to bring it closer:

Buy only what you absolutely need.

Make what you have last longer.

Give ration stamps for everything you buy.

Write often and cheerfully to your man in service.

Holt School Notes

High School

The high school grades for the first half of the school year have been arranged, and these averages indicate that the pupils of the ninth grade are to have the complimentary dinner. The Freshmen averaged 56.9 points, the Sophomores, 52.1, and the Juniors, 46.5, out of a possible 72.

The ten leading student at the end of the first semester ranked in the following order beginning with the highest: Eleanor Ueland Myron Sorter, Alice Peterson, Violet Erickson, Margie Ueland, Maxine Olson, Irvin Larson, Lois Larson, Joyce Moyick, and Blanche Erickson. There are five Freshmen in this list, three Sophomores and two Juniors.

If deportment and attitude are not considered in finding ranks of students, the order of the three classes remain unchanged, with the Freshmen having 36.6 points out of a possible 48, the Sophomores 33.7, and the Juniors 31.6.

In points of attendance the Sophomores led the other classes during the first semester, with an average of 80 days out of 87. The Freshmen came second with 74.8, and the Juniors, with 73.2.

At the beginning of the first semester of school work, Mr. Nelson announced that the class having the highest average at the close of the semester would receive a dinner at his expense. The Freshmen will receive the dinner since they have the highest class average. The Sophomores and Juniors wish to extend their hearty congratulations to the Freshmen.

Fourth, Fifth, Sixth

Vernon and Clifford Reierson are back at school.

We are looking forward to the school carnival.

In sixth grade we wrote some interesting stories abou tfeudalism. We drew some nice feudal castles too.

Some of the pictures we developed are quite clear. We think it is fun to develop them.

The fifth grade read us some very interesting stories about George Washington.

Perfect spelling papers were written by Ruth Larson and Dorothy Sagstuen.

Gloria and Evelyn are trying to break the tie for their reading chart. Donna Hanson may yet go ahead of them.

Mrs. H. O. Hanson is spending the week at the home of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Torrance Lillevold, Grygla.

Redeem Your Bond Pledges

Marshall County is comfortably over the top in actual sales during the Fourth War Loan drive with official reports from state headquarters on February 19 showing purchases of 110 per cent of the $557,500 quota, O. M. Mattson, county chairman, announced this week.

"The percentage will undoubtedly be raised considerably when final tabulations are made at the Federal Reserve Bank, on Feb. 29, as there are large numbers of Marshall county residents who have not yet taken up their pledges," members of the County War Finance committee report.

"Every resident has a duty to perform in fulfilling their pledge if they have not already done so, during the next few days," said Mr. Mattson. Members of the county committe are checking on all unfilled pledges as they represent a black mark against the county as a whole.

Marshall county officially went over the top on Wednesday afternoon last week, with reports since then indicating a slow but steady rise. The last report showed the county to be in 60th place among counties in the state with every county in the state having met its quota 100 per cent or more. Olmstead county led the state in the tabulation with sales reaching 198.7 per cent. Pennington county was in third place with 157.1 percent.

Residents of the county in Saturday's report received Sunday, had purchased $438,790 worth of Series E bonds or 85.7 per cent of the E Bond purchases made during the Third War Loan which totaled $512,121. It is generally expected that the Series E bond purchases during the drive will be close to the fall campaign total if all who have made pledges will complete their purchases.

Because of but minor changes in the tabulation of pledges since a week ago, no detailed tabulation will be published this week, but final tabulation will be published either next week or the week following, but in the meantime, county committee members urge residents to fulfill pledges at once so as to be counted in the Fourth War Loan tabulation.

Ensign Grobey Killed In Crash

Mrs. Alf Movick received the sad news this week that her nephew, Ensign Alves Grobey, fighter plane pilot with the Navy Air Force, was killed in an air crash in Florida Feb. 12th. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Grobey of Everett, Washington. His mother was the former Selma Dovre of Holt.

Mrs. Gullick Swenson, pioneer woman of East Valley, who has been ill at her home the past four years but had been getting better lately, suffered a relapse on Monday and is now very ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Loyd Larson entertained a group of young folks at a valentine party at their home last Friday evening. The time was spent playing games and stunts, after which Mrs. Larson served lunch. The invited guests were Ethel Larson of Thief River Falls, Rueben and Orvis Benitt, Melvin and Lois Larson, Milton Conklin, Clifford Larson, Arthur and Hazel Lunke Verna and Marles Peterson, Mr. and Mrs. Johnnie Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Nohre, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Lunke and daughter.

WAR FUND
1944 WAR FUND

This year, with service flags in windows of nearly every home, Red Cross will mean so much more to Americans. As depicted in this reproduction of a 1944 Red Cross War Fund poster, many windows also will display the symbol of participation in the cause of Mercy and Humanity—the Red Cross.

Red Cross Asks $200,000,000 To Cover Wartime Needs

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Confronted with responsibilities of unprecedented proportions, as the war enters its most crucial stage, and with a staggering task ahead in the post-war period, the American Red Cross opens its 1944 War Fund appeal March 1, confident that the American people will respond to the limit of their ability.

President Roosevelt, president of the American Red Cross, Norman H. Davis, chairman and active head of the vast organization, and Leon Fraser, national War Fund chairman, join in urging the people of this country to help Red Cross reach its national objective of $200,000,000 because of the vital part it must play within the next twelve months.

Chairman Davis, in opening the campaign will stress the fact that with the decisive stage of the war at hand, the Red Cross must assume a greater burden than ever before, and at the same time must provide aid to servicemen being returned in ever-increasing numbers.

Red Cross operations over the entire world during 1943 have dwarfed its activities during the first two years of war.

An even greater burden will be placed on Red Cross services in 1944.

Thousands of American men and women are now in Red Cross service with U. S. troops at home bases and overseas. Field directors, hospital, club and recreation workers are with American armed forces in virtually every command, Mr. Davis asserted.

Both in Europe and in the Far East, Red Cross workers have either gone with invasion forces into new combat areas, or have followed within a very limited time.

On the home front, the Red Cross has broadened its service tremendously. Field directors are serving in every sizable military establishment and camp throughout the country, and recreation and social service workers are located in Army and Naval hospitals.

One of the most important and necessary war-time Red Cross functions has been the collection of human blood for plasma. Thirty-five blood donor stations are now operating.

The dramatic story of the Red Cross Blood Donor Service, through which thousands of soldiers and sailors have been saved from death, began in February, 1941, when the Surgeons General of the Army and Navy asked the Red Cross to procure 15,000 pints of blood. Last year more than 3,700,000 pints of blood were collected for the Army and Navy. This year the goal is more than 5,000,000 pints.

With major battles of the war yet to come, the Army has asked the Red Cross to supply many millions of surgical dressings. American men wounded in battle will depend acutely on the vast Red Cross surgical dressing production program.

Numerous other Red Cross home operations, such as Prisoners of War packaging centers, where more than a million parcels for war prisoners are prepared each month for shipment overseas, are supported by citizen-participation in the Red Cross War Fund.

So extensive is Red Cross service during this war that every American civilian can contribute something to at least one of its functions. To continue this gigantic work, all Americans must assume their share of the responsibility of carrying on this far-reaching service.

The $200,000,000 quota will enable Red Cross to alleviate suffering and pain at home and abroad, and to carry on its vast military welfare service.

Turn In All Used Tubes Now

Mr. Arvid Carlson, Marshall County Salvage Chairman, this week urged that everyone possessing collaspable tubes which formerly contained tooth paste, shaving cream and other products, turn them in to their local dealers at once.

Mr. Carlson pointed out that after March 1st, it will no longer be necessary for purchasers to exchange tubes. However, there is still a sizeable quantity of used tubes in the public's hands which should be turned in to the dealer by March 1st.

Dealers are instructed to ship all tubes on hand March 1st to the Tin Salvage Institute, 411 Wilson Ave., Newark, New Jersey. These tubes if weighing less than 50 lbs. may be sent Express Collect. If over 50 lbs. they should be shipped freight collect. All shipments should be labled Scrap metal -- second class.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Normally U. S. motorists needed 30 to 35 million new replacement tires a year. In 1942 and 1943 combined, only about 17 million tires will have reached vehicle owners through rationing offices.

Koroseal is "Plasticized polyvinyl chloride," a B. F. Goodrich rubber-like material that before the war was used in more than 300 different products. Koroseal has now gone to war.

Wheel alignment means much to tire mileage these days, with so many old cars in service. Frequent checking of camber and toe-in in front wheels will prove a rubber and mileage saver.

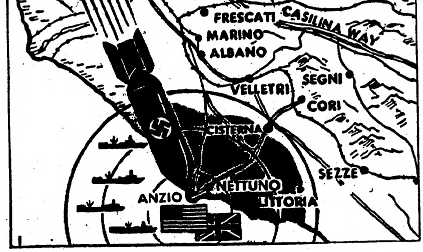
Nazis Pour Troops Into Anzio Region As Battle for Italy Grows in Ferocity; Senate Studies 'White-Collar' Income; Aussie-U. S. Forces Join in New Guinea

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.



Italy—First great armored battle of Italy raged near Anzio, where Nazis strove to knock out Allied beachhead.

ITALY:
Major Battle

For the first time in the Italian campaign, major Allied and German armored forces met on level ground to slug it out, as the great battle for the Anzio beachhead below Rome raged.

To the southeast, bloody mountain fighting continued, with the entrenched Nazis stubbornly resisting advancing U. S. and French soldiers, crawling through fierce machine-gun and mortar fire to root enemy units out of deeply dug defenses.

Determined to fight a major battle in Italy far below the Po river valley in the north, the Nazis poured thousands of troops in the Anzio region, and action rose in tempo after the enemy carefully probed Allied lines for weak points.

Crowded into an area about 30 miles long and 12 miles inland, Allied forces swung into the attacking enemy at close quarters, while their air forces roamed over German positions and communication lines, blasting troop concentrations and supply deliveries.

MEAT PRODUCTION:
Record Levels

Keeping well in line with government predictions of record meat production for 1944, January slaughter of hogs, cattle and sheep set all-time marks for the month.

Partly because of liquidations due to concern over the overall feed situation for the year, 1,141,081 cattle were butchered in January, along with 7,839,352 hogs and 1,932,987 sheep.

Although the government estimated that meat production would rise 8 per cent in 1944 to a record 25,000,000,000 pounds, civilian allocations were set at the 1943 level of 131 pounds of meat per person for the year, with the services, lend-lease and other U. S. agencies obtaining the increased output. Only if the latters' needs were cut, could civilians expect more meat, it was said.

DEMOBILIZATION:
Congressional Plan

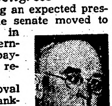
Adequate financing of industry to switch to civilian production, and orderly disposal of war material to prevent upsetting the markets, were proposed by the senate's economic policy and planning committee for postwar America.

The committee's recommendations were embodied in a bill sponsored by Senators George (Ga.) and Murray (Mont.), calling for government purchase of all raw materials or processed goods or extension of advances, partial payments or loans upon contract cancellations.

Regarding the nation's $15,000,000,000 investment in war plants, the committee proposed their sale to private interests, but not if their use should over-expand production. The number of aircraft, aluminum, rubber, magnesium, ship, steel and pipeline plants retained for postwar defense output should depend upon the scope of such a program, the committee declared.

Precaution should be taken against flooding the markets with war goods and depressing prices and production generally, the committee said, and opportunity should be sought to sell such material abroad. Organization of a demobilization board to carry out the program was recommended.

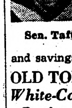
SUBSIDIES:
Opposed in Congress



Sen. Bankhead

Although facing an expected presidential veto, the senate moved to join the house in outlawing government subsidy payments to reduce retail food costs.

Senate approval of Sen. John Bankhead's anti-subsidy bill was scheduled after rejection of Sen. Francis Maloney's amendment calling for the expenditure of $1,500,000,000 for subsidies this year, and Sen. Robert Taft's compromise proposal that the program be limited to $950,000,000.



Sen. Taft

Countering administration arguments that abolition of subsidies would threaten the whole anti-inflation program by leading to demands for wage raises to meet higher retail food costs, Senator Bankhead (Ala.) said that such subsidies would only save each family an average of 11 cents a day, and this at a time when incomes and savings are at record levels.

OLD TOPIC:
White-Collar Wages

Popular as a topic ever since the days of Charles Dickens' stringy Bob Cratchit, low wages for white-collar workers now have come under the consideration of a senate labor committee.

Regardless of general salary increases of 15 to 30 per cent for clerical workers and salesmen since 1941, current earnings of many groups of non-manufacturing employees remain relatively low, A. F. Hinrichs of the U. S. department of labor said.

Although a survey in small towns showed store clerks have received boosts of 15 and 25 per cent and bank tellers increases of 5 to 10 per cent since 1941, straight time earnings of many groups remain less than 50 cents an hour, Hinrichs said. This averages less than $24 for a 48-hour week, and earnings are even lower in some other occupations, Hinrichs asserted.

SOUTHWEST PACIFIC:
Gain in New Guinea

Joining hands near Saidor after more than a month of fighting through rugged jungle, Australian and American forces prepared to lunge northward toward remaining Japanese positions on New Guinea's eastern coast.

First Allied objective was the base of Madang, feeder point for the Japs' inland positions, then Wewak, oft-pounded air base from which the enemy has sent up planes to harass Aussie and U. S. forces operating on New Guinea.

On New Britain island to the east of New Guinea, U. S. air forces continued to smack at the major Jap air and supply base of Rabaul, and at the port of Kavieng on New Ireland to the northeast, also a center of feeder operations for barges stocking enemy strongholds in the surrounding area.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

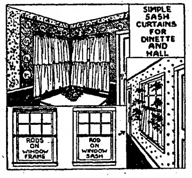
SLED: The Russian army is using an improved sledge driven by an airplane propeller for its mobile machine gun corps. A machine gun is mounted behind armor plating.

BASEBALL: The American league baseball clubs will play 78 exhibition games in their spring circuit, according to tentative schedules. Traveling difficulties may curtail the program.

TOKENS: More ration tokens will be needed than was at first thought, OPA officials indicate. About 2,000,000,000 tokens should be ready for release February 27, and the OPA is having another 200,000,000 made as a reserve. This supply may be increased to 800,000,000, it was said. A larger token, about the size of a quarter, with a value of five points, is being considered.

ON THE HOME FRONT
with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

WHEN we think of the type of curtains used in Early Colonial cottages, crisp frills and ruffles usually come to mind. It is true that ruffled curtains were used in Colonial times but the curtains of the first homes in the New World were of the casement or sash variety. We must remember that as late as the discovery of America glass windows were rare. They were of the casement type with tiny diamond-shaped pieces held together with lead. Simple straight curtains to give privacy were the next logical development.



SIMPLE SASH CURTAINS FOR DINETTE AND HALL
RODS ON WINDOW FRAME
ROD ON WINDOW SASH

Frills and larger panes of glass came later but sash curtains were also used with these new windows. They are also being used with good effect today for rooms where an informal atmosphere is needed. In the dinette shown here the sash curtained windows are bordered with a set of colorful plates.

NOTE—This is the first of a series on modern adaptations of period curtain fashions. There is another interesting treatment of a sash-curtained window in BOOK 1; and the method of lining casement draw curtains is illustrated in BOOK 8 of the series of 10 booklets on sewing for the home. Marines Move in After Record Bombardment

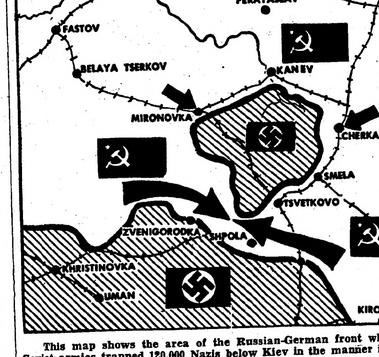
Marine Corp. Elmer R. Burkhalter destroys a partially damaged building on Namur island in the Marshalls with a flame thrower. Roi, Namur and adjacent islands were captured by the Fourth marine division after these areas were subjected to what has been described as the heaviest air and sea bombardment in the history of military operations. In 53 hours 200 tons of bombs fell in this area.

Caught En Route From Japan to Germany

Into a barbed-wire pen march some of the large number of Nazi prisoners taken when three German blockade-runners were sunk by American warships while sneaking across the South Atlantic with vital war cargoes from Japanese ports. In addition to the prisoners taken, hundreds of tons of baled rubber were seized.

Where Reds Cut Off 120,000 Nazis



This map shows the area of the Russian-German front where twin Soviet armies trapped 120,000 Nazis below Kiev in the manner indicated. Ten German divisions were caught in a pocket when Red troops smashed into Mironovka and Zvenigorodka from the west while forces from the opposite direction seized Shpola, Tsvetkovo and the rail center of Smela.

Mud Stops Jeep, but Not for Long

A jeep ambulance on Cape Gloucester, New Britain, is pictured bogged down while crossing a stream with a wounded marine. These Leathernecks soon freed the jeep and it whisked their buddy to a first aid station. Rabaul, the Japanese air base at the northwestern tip of New Britain, is constantly undergoing bombardments from our air force in this area.

THINK ABOUT IT THIS WAY

ALL DAIRY FOODS, to get from the farm to the consomer, MUST make the following movements: (1) production (2) creamery or processing plant (3) packaging, merchandising, advertising, jobbing or wholesale selling (4) retail selling.

PRODUCTION NO. 1 is YOU — the dairy farmers of the Northwest. No. 2 is a variety of independent and cooperative creameries. No. 3 is a lot of reputable companies — both large and small, who facilitate the flow of dairy foods on to No. 4 the ultimate retail sale in the grocery store.

EACH TYPE AND GROUP mentioned above deserves and usually gets a return for its investment and effort in handling dairy foods.

PROGRESSIVE DAIRY FARMERS, through membership of their cooparative creameries, and the membership of these creameries in LAND O' LAKES, control and have a potential return from the first three movements of their merchandise. This method of marketing offers the individual dairy farmer MORE control and MORE potential returns than any other method of marketing dairy products.

Mrs. Loyd Larson spent a few days last week at Crookston visiting relatives.

Locomotives take a terrific pounding as they pull their heavy loads across the country. After each run they must be thoroughly inspected and made ready for the next. The picture shows one of the giant steam locomotives that hauls Great Northern's trains across the Rocky Mountains on a turntable at the railway's roundhouse at Whitefish, Montana.

Reinforcements

Roundhouses aren't very glamorous places. They don't make pretty pictures. The men and women at work in them know the smell of smoke and the feel of grease.

For theirs is the serious and rather grimy business of grooming thousands upon thousands of horsepower, day in and day out—overhauling, repairing, servicing and checking the tons of whirling steel and iron that haul the trains.

They fight too, these men and women—fight time, for engines are desperately needed all around the clock; fight engine failures, for failures delay this grim business of war.

When this country went into the war, the Great Northern had 882 engines. That was fewer—by 513—than were in service during the first World War.

With fewer but more powerful engines, the Great Northern is moving more than twice the traffic it did during the first World War. That gives an idea of what has been going on in its roundhouses and locomotive shops.

When Japan struck at Pearl Harbor several huge Diesel-electric engines were nearing completion for the Great Northern. But almost immediately came the interruption of gasoline and fuel oil deliveries to the East coast by ocean.

This important task had to be taken over by the railroads, and the engines which were built to haul Great Northern freight trains across the continental divide were rushed into action in other parts of the country.

For more than two years the Great Northern has had to do its part of the war job with what it had. Not until recently has there been any relief in sight.

But now three new mammoth Diesel-electric engines are hauling heavy freight trains between Havre and Whitefish, Montana. Each engine rates 5,400 horsepower, measures 193 feet, and weighs 463 tons.

By fall it is expected that ten more of these engines will be in operation on this mountain division. They will release nearly twice that number of steam locomotives for service on other parts of the system.

And that is good news for the determined workers in roundhouses and locomotive shops whose achievement in meeting every requirement for power, when it was needed, has fashioned another brilliant Victory for the home front.

1944 Red Cross Roll Call

The American Red Cross 1944 War Fund Campaign began throughout America on Wednesday, March 1. The slogan for this campaign is "Red Cross at His Side", which so well emphasizes the work of the Red Cross. The main work of the Red Cross during War time is to assist the men and women in the Armed Services. Many homes have one, two and more blue stars, others a few gold stars, which indicates some one or more are making a tremendous sacrifice from that home; others have already made the supreme sacrifice. Another banner appropriately showing that we on the Home Front are "At His Side" is the display of the Red Cross lapel button or the window sticker. We on the Home Front must not fail our men and women who are in the ranks in front of us.

Recently, there was a poster displayed which should make us on the Home Front think which reads as follows: "And if our lines should form, then break, because of things you failed to make, the extra tank, or ship, or plane, for which we waited all in vain, and the Supplies, which never came, Will You Then Come And Take the Blame, For We, Not You, Will Pay The Cost of Battles, You, Not We Have Lost." Who can Buy blood plasma for a wounded soldier? Who can Hire the services rendered by the deft hands, the willing heart and the smiling face of a Red Cross Nurse as she administers to the sick, wounded and dying men? Who can Purchase the meat, milk, butter, candy, cigarettes, cheese, biscuits and the many other things that make up the Red Cross War Prisoners Package that is being sent to the American Prisoners of War held by Germany and Japan? (In a recent letter to his folks, one of our local boys who is a prisoner of War said: "The Red Cross packages are a Godsend?) Who can Pay for a ticket to the 350 Clubs and Recreation centers operated throughout the world for lonely or war-weary service men? Who can fully Appreciate the help given service men and their families; coffee and doughnuts served from Red Cross Clubmobiles in isolated areas overseas, surgical dressings sweaters, Kit Bags, Military Hospital Sunrooms furnished, besides all the services on the Home Front. The answer to the above is obvious - - it cannot be bought, but we can help to finance it.

We are living in properous days. Why? Because of the blood tears and sweat of War. Days of prosperity are here to us at home; to others in the war there is a day of suffering. One cannot with a clear concience refuse to give to the Red Cross in this drive, but rather give more liberally than ever before. This is not only a $1.00 enrollment but each one must give many times that if we are to feel that "We Are At His Side through the Red Cross." One of our local boys stated in a letter from England: "The Red Cross is THE thing". As good citizens and loyal Americans with utmost concern for the welfare of our men in the Armed Forces we must respond liberally. Every worker or wage earner in each household should give. The work of the Red Cross now is definitely for the benefit of those in the Armed Forces.

The Holt District, with Rev. T. C. L. Hanson District Chairman, comprises of the village of Holt and townships of Agdar, East Valley, Excel, Holt and New Sollom. Following are the township chairmen and workers:

Adgar: Christ Nelson, Chr., Melvin Torgerson, Otto Rupprecht and Johnson brothers.

East Valley: John Sorum, Chr. Carl Lunke, Mrs. Johnnie Nelson, Hilmer Swenson and Chas. Skoglund.

Excel: Gus Hillyer, Chr., J. P. Augustine, Mr. Chilgren.

Holt: E. O. Waagedahl, Chr., Mrs. John E. Ness, Geo. Johnson, Henry Nohre and Willie Larson.

New Solum: Emil Anderson, Chr., Clarence Hall, Martin R. Nelson and Emil Shern.

Holt village: Rev. T. C. L. Hanson Chr., Walter Peterson, A. E. Nelson, Walter Larson, Wm. Holst, Mrs. G. I. Sjusseth, and Mrs. Malcolm Magnusen.

Contributions may also be left with Miss Caroline Aspelin at the Marshall County State Bank and with Miss Marles Peterson at the Farmers' Co'op Creamery.

All civic, church and educational organizations are asked to give and have a part in the "Ministry of Mercy" through the Red Cross War Fund Drive of 1944. The drive in Holt will be conducted on Tuesday and Wednesday next week.

The earliest report met with great success in that Mr. Gus Hillyer collected $107 from 29 subscriptions. 16 of the 29 contributions were $5.00.

The fund - - unprecedented in size to meet the unprecedented need - - greatly needs our gifts. This Is My Share! Will You Be "At His Side?" Give Today!

Red Cross Field Men Tackle Yanks' Problems Overseas

On Masera Island, up in the Persian Gulf, where there is not a single tree standing and the wind blows across the island ceaselessly, Red Cross field men brought fishing tackle, books and writing paper to service men. Most welcome gift from the Red Cross was clippers for hair cutting—the boys had been without a barber for months.

In Persia, a Red Cross Field Director was able to locate a soldier's mother whom he hadn't seen for 25 years.

In Africa, Red Cross field men flew in Army planes, hitch-hiked in supply trucks, bumped in jeeps over bombed convoy routes, through blinding sand storms and glaring sun to help men with personal problems and emergency communications, and to deliver magazines and books, cigarettes and chocolate to isolated posts and bases.

In Italy, Red Cross field men accompanied the troops in on the invasion barges.

In India, a sergeant was sentenced to the guard house for disorderly conduct. His officer couldn't understand the boy's behaviour. He was a nice kid—he'd never gone to pieces before.

The officer asked the Red Cross Field Director to see him. The Red Cross man discovered a very worried boy. His wife had not been receiving his allotments, she wasn't well and needed an operation. She thought the soldier must have cancelled his allotments and a misunderstanding had arisen between them so that she was no longer writing him.

The field man got in touch with the Red Cross chapter in the boy's home town immediately, It took care of her, financed her operation and saw that she had adequate funds to provide for herself until the allotment again came through.

When the Red Cross man explained what had happened to the soldier's Commanding Officer, the latter promptly released the boy from the guard house. From then on the boy was all right. His worries were over, and the Army had gained a good fighting man.

All over the world, in every theatre of war and active battle front go the American Red Cross field men—helping soldiers with major and minor personal problems, bringing them recreational items such as magazines, books, comfort articles, athletic equipment, and re-establishing their contact with home. These men share the conditions and hazards under which the soldiers fight. They also share their lives. They are on call day and night whenever they are needed.

G.I.'s overseas have many problems. Often home seems very, very far away. With the Red Cross there at hand wherever he may be, the soldier knows he can always get in touch with home—that he need never feel alone with problems he doesn't know how to solve himself. More than 3,000,000 service men passed through Red Cross field men's offices last year.

On the mud clogged roads of Italy, through the far jungles of New Guinea, on lonely desert posts, Red Cross field men take your place beside your boy. In order to continue this service, the Red Cross urgently needs contributions from the American people to its $200,000,000 War Fund drive this month.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

American Fleet, Planes Strike Truk, Major Japanese Naval Base in Pacific; Tighten Deferment of Farm Workers; Allies, Nazis Trade Blows at Anzio

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

PACIFIC:

Strike Westward

Two years and two months after the Japs' assault on Pearl Harbor, U. S. air and sea forces struck back at the enemy's own big Pacific base of Truk in the Caroline islands, central hub of Jap naval operations for their extended empire reaching into the Philippines and Indies.

Preceding the attack on Truk by several hundred planes operating from carriers shielded by a strong armada of battleships, cruisers and destroyers, long-range Liberator bombers plastered the other big Jap bastion of Ponape in the Carolines.

Centrally located in Japan's Pacific empire, both Truk and Ponape serve as a radiating point for enemy naval and air forces to operate against an attacking force while close to home stations. Loss of the Carolines to the Japs would mean loss of their advantage of operating close to defensive bases, and, vice versa, give the Allies the advantage.

As the Liberators took to their wings to plaster the Carolines, U. S. ground forces were putting the finishing touches to fighting in the Marshalls where small islet garrisons were being rooted out, and in the Solomons, where Allied landings to the north trapped 22,000 Japs holding out on Bougainville, Buka and Choiseul.

FARM WORKERS:

Draft Shakeup

Only those farmers who can produce 16 war units a year will be eligible for agricultural deferment, and the 700,000 farmers now in 3-C for dependency as well as occupational reasons, also will be reclassified and put into 2-C only if their work is essential.

More than 1,000,000 farmers are in 2-C, of which 400,000 are said to be single and under 22 years of age. With the 700,000 presently in 3-C, 1,700,000 farmers considered essential will be put into 2-C and given six-month deferments, with their cases again reopened at the end of that time.

Action on farm workers' cases followed general tightening up of draft regulations in the face of military demands for about 1,000,000 more men by July 1, with city dads no longer deferrable for dependencies and industrial deferments subject to stricter standards.

RUSSIA:

Finns Talk Peace

Russian troops made further gains along the Estonian border on the north end of the 800 mile eastern front, while reports indicated that the Finns were sounding out Moscow for peace terms.

As the Russ continued to chew into Nazi defenses below Leningrad, the Germans fell back to avoid encirclement from the rear, and each step backward found them closer to Estonia and the other Baltic states of Latvia and Lithuania.

Russo-Finnish peace reportedly hung on terms Moscow might offer, with the Finns receptive to proposals based on the 1940 border, but opposed to occupation of their military and naval strongholds by the Reds.

With the Russ again in possession of much of the mining region of the southern Ukraine, Finland remained one of the last sources of nickel for the Germans, and Hitler reportedly sought to prevent Finland's desertion of the Axis to protect these deposits.

EUROPE:

Beachhead Battle

With the sea at their backs, U. S. and British troops traded heavy blows with the Germans on the Anzio beachhead below Rome, as the big battle for the Eternal City raged.

While other Allied troops crawled forward up rugged mountain slopes about Cassino, the forces at Anzio fought with tanks on leveler terrain, countering the full weight of the enemy's famed panzer units.

In assaulting the beachhead, the Germans concentrated on the northern sector, 10 miles above the port of Anzio, through which supplies were streaming to Allied forces. With the area under fire of enemy artillery and bombers, Allied troops fought hard to keep the port open.

Bloody fighting continued on the Cassino front, with doughboys taking one by one concrete houses made into fortified pillboxes by the Germans, and other Yanks struggling up monastery hill to gain command over Nazi positions and the supply road leading to Rome, which lay below.

CONGRESS:

Ban Subsidies

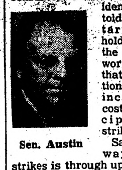
With congress voting against continuance of subsidy payments to reduce retail prices of meat, butter, milk and other food items, GOP house members served notice that if the President vetoed the bill they would attempt to make it part of the measure to extend price control after June 30, thus forcing the President to accept it or kill his whole anti-inflation program.

To assure continued existence of the Commodity Credit corporation in the event of a presidential veto of the subsidy clause, congress wrote in an emergency provision extending its life until permanent legislation could be passed.

In voting against consumer subsidies, congressional foes of such payments said they could only save the average family about 11 cents a day, during a time when national income was at an all-time level. Advocates of subsidies, however, said abolition of such payments would bring about a 7 per cent increase in the price of the foods affected, and a 3 per cent rise in the general cost of living, leading to a clamor for higher wages.

Bucks Labor Draft

While congress was voting down consumer food subsidies, AFL President William Green told a senate military committee holding hearings on the Austin - Wadsworth labor draft that wage stabilization in the face of increasing living costs was the principal cause of strikes.



Sen. Austin

Said Green: "The way to prevent strikes is through upward revision of wage rates, or even more effectively, by rigid reduction and control of prices of the necessities of life."

While Senator Austin (Vt.) contended that a labor draft would reduce turnover in war plants and allow the War Manpower commission tighter control over job placements, Green said the act would amount to involuntary servitude, since civilian workers would have to take jobs in plants operating at private profit.

WAR COSTS:

Cut by Army

Because of industry's speed in developing production efficiency, and also because of the army's insistence that savings be reflected in reduced prices, costs of military goods have been cut by 20 per cent since 1941, Brig. Gen. Albert J. Browning, director of purchases, declared.

In all, savings have amounted to about $9,000,000,000, and an additional $4,700,000,000 will be saved in the first half of 1944, General Browning said.

Because the army has worked for lower costs through price analysts in the purchasing departments, better ways have been found to produce goods more efficiently and with less material to assure profit margins, General Browning said. In cases where costs were not trimmed there was no incentive on the part of management to cut prices, the general revealed.

GOP Candidate

A 76-year-old Los Angeles, Calif., housemaid has filed formal declaration of intention to become a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination. Though she has never held political office, she said: "I want to see the President's job better done, and I can do it better."

FUEL:

Gas From Coal

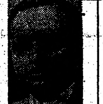
With government officials warning of only a 14-year U. S. oil reserve at the present rate of consumption, Rep. Jennings Randolph (W. Va.) introduced a bill which the house speedily passed, calling for an expenditure of $30,000,000 on the construction of experimental fuel plants to obtain gas from coal, oil, shale and agricultural and forest products.

The U. S. bureau of mines' laboratory at Pittsburgh, Pa., already has developed oil from coal through a chemical process utilizing hydrogen, but costs have amounted to 16 cents a gallon, compared with costs of only 5 cents for getting fuel from oil.

Whereas U. S. oil reserves have been estimated as sufficient for 14 years, the bureau of mines said U. S. coal resources could furnish material for gas for 3,000 years.

Ask Foreign Sources

America's Allies should reciprocate for our heavy drain upon domestic oil resources for providing petroleum for the Allied war machine by transferring a corresponding volume of proven reserves from their fields to the U. S. after the war, the Truman investigating committee declared.



Sen. Truman

Although the committee, headed by Senator Harry Truman (Mo.) said the development of foreign petroleum fields should be left to private interests, it recommended that U. S. diplomacy be directed toward supporting such a program.

Bombing's Big Job

Nearly 60,000 men were in on the RAF's record 2,800 ton bombing raid on smouldering Berlin, which matched the shattering aerial blow at Hamburg, September 22, 1943.

Of the 60,000 men, 7,000 were flying personnel. About 4,000 men were required to load the planes with bombs.

The 1,000 planes used 1,000,000 gallons of gas and thousands of gallons of oil. Machine guns on the planes were loaded with 750,000 rounds of ammunition.

About 43 planes were lost on the mission, the 15th heavy assault on the German capital.

ARGENTINA:

Political Battleground

Having broken diplomatic relations with the Axis, President Pedro Ramirez of Argentina moved slowly before declaring war on Germany and Japan, since the country's military caste opposed such action.

Hints that Ramirez' foreign minister was considering a declaration of war against the Axis inflamed the military caste, known as the "Colonels' Lodge," and forced the president to dismiss his foreign chief and reorganize his cabinet to hold the different elements together.

As Argentina's internal situation boiled, pro-Ally General Arturo Rawson, who led the revolt against pro-Axis President Castillo last June, watched developments from Brazil, where he was reported under surveillance of Argentine agents for expressing strong pro-Ally sympathies, in opposition to Ramirez' policy of strict nationalism.

SCHOOLS

If a choice must be made, the country child should receive a better education than the city child, because his future is more vital to the national life, Dr. Floyd Reeves of the University of Chicago told delegates to the Great Lakes Conference on Rural Education.

Dr. Reeves pointed out that migration from rural areas with high birth rates to cities with low birth rates maintains the population of the big centers. Cities would dwindle and die without this migration.

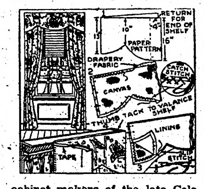
HICCUPS: A 21-year-old New York city girl, hiccuping for 44 days, appealed to the President to obtain a furlough for her physician, who is a captain in the army. She said that the doctor saved her life two years ago by a delicate operation when she was suffering from another prolonged attack of hiccups. The President granted a leave for the officer to treat her.

CENTENARIAN: George W. Camerer, a veteran of the Civil war, who now lives in Jerseyville, Ill., has just reached his 100th birthday. He said he "wouldn't mind joining the army and going to Africa if his feet would hold up." He has 10 grandsons, two great grandsons, and a granddaughter serving in the armed forces in the present World War II.

ON THE HOME FRONT

with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

WE KNOW that the Eighteenth Century is often called the golden age of the cabinet makers. We know that the English cabinet makers, Chippendale, Hepplewhite, Sheraton and the Adam brothers, flourished then and that their work was copied by our own cabinet makers of the late Colonial period. The furniture types of their day have become standard with us but we seldom stop to think about the kind of curtains and draperies that were originally used with this furniture.



Visitors to the reconstructed village of Williamsburg, Va., are often surprised to find that Venetian blinds were the fashion long before the Revolution, and the well tailored canvas lined valance used with floor length chintz draperies also seem modern to them. Yet these were the curtain styles when ladies and gentlemen wore powdered wigs. Valances were made just as we make them today and were tacked to a valance board in pretty much the same manner as is shown here.

NOTE—This is the second of a series on modern adaptations of period curtain fashions. Another version of the shaped type of valance is given in BOOK 5 of the series of ten booklets on sewing for the home. To get copy of Book 5 send 15 cents direct to:

Tomb of King Mausolus One of Wonders of World

When King Mausolus of Caria, a Persian province, died, his broken-hearted wife used up all her money on his tomb. When she died, she was buried in the half-finished tomb, too. The greatest architects and sculptors of Greece finished the tomb.

The four-horse chariot statue in which the king and queen were riding stood 140 feet high on a huge pyramid of stone and left the impression of floating in midair. There were 36 delicate columns to support it.

'Laughing Jackass' Brays; Is One of Meanest Birds

A sassy-looking, colorful bird which makes its home in Australia, frequently puzzles foreign visitors. The kookaburra, as the natives know it, has rightly been called the "laughing jackass," for it makes a sound like the braying of a jackass and it is one of the meanest birds living.

It eats small mammals, killing them by flying high with its victim in its beak and dropping it to destruction.

Are you, too, a disappointed "doser"? Then read this unsolicited letter!

"I'd started working nights, and with my way of living changed around, I soon found I was taking 3 or 4 laxatives a week, and feeling terrible. Then I heard about KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN through your radio program, 'The Breakfast Club.' Since taking my daily helping of ALL-BRAN, I am regular as clockwork. Thanks for what your ALL-BRAN has done for me!" Mrs. Myrtle Wood, 274 Baumanville St., Akron, Ohio.

Yes, it does seem like magic, the way KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN helps so many people. "Gets at" one common cause of constipation—lack of enough dietary "cellulosic" elements! That's because ALL-BRAN is one of Nature's most effective sources of these elements—which help the friendly colonic flora fluff up and prepare the colonic contents for easy, natural elimination! KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN is not a purgative! It's a gentle-acting, "regulating" food!

If your constipation is this kind, eat KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN regularly, with milk and fruit, or mixed with other cereals. Drink plenty of water. See if you don't find real help! Insist on genuine ALL-BRAN, made only by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

A gallon of latex is about one-third rubber and two-thirds water.

GR-S, the synthetic rubber now used in civilian tire manufacture, requires more time in being fabricated at factories. With the equipment and labor shortage, this means that the industry has a tremendous problem ahead of it to make the 30 million new tires scheduled for 1944.

Back in 1823, when rubber shoes were shipped here from Brazil, they were not made according to sizes or for left and right feet. Just thick rubber coverings that were stretched over the regular leather shoes. They were solid in winter, gooey in summer.

Kidneys Must Work Well—

For You To Feel Well

24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at nights, swelling.

Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.

Left: Benedictine abbey on Mount Cassino which was bombed by U. S. Flying Fortresses. This monastery, which was founded in 529 A. President Roosevelt said that the bombing and shelling of the ancient abbey was justified. Crabtree's Idea Might Have Serious Drawback

Old man Crabtree had become a chronic case of "determined to be sick" and had been boring his doctor, young Johnson, with talk of being bedridden for life, death, funerals, etc.

One fine morning he met the physician in front of the drug store and said: "Doctor, I know I'm gonna die before long! Yes, suh, I know it! Feel it in m' bones! I think I'd like to be cremated when I die. What do ye think o' the idea, doctor?"

"Well, Mr. Crabtree," the young doctor replied, "the cremation idea may be all right, but your wife may complain of your leaving ashes around!"

HOLT WEEKLY NEWS

Blizzard Hit Northwest Sunday

The month of March came in last week like a lamb on a lulling breeze but as usual it sprung its big surprise on us on Sunday when it clouded up early in the morning and by mid-afternoon a heavy snow storm hit the state. The snowfall on Sunday was wet and heavy, cooling off during the night with the snow continuing on Monday when the wind rose high and a real blizzard cut loose. The wind stayed up at gale speed through Monday night and Tuesday forenoon. Tuesday afternoon it relented some and by evening it calmed down and the temperature dropped sharply. Thursday was clear and cold.

This was one of the heaviest snowfalls of the entire winter which had been a wide open one and drifts piled to heights of five feet in many places and blocked all traffic. School was closed because of blocked roads.

Pfc. Raymond Sagstuen arrived here last Thursday from Camp Adair, Oregon to spend his furlough with his parents.

TAXES
MAKE GOVERNMENT GO
With the March 15th Federal Income Tax deadline staring us all in the face, taxes are a much discussed subject these days. Make no mistake about it, taxes are necessary—they are the magic oil that makes government go. Without them local, county, state and even the federal government couldn't operate.
Your electric company, the Interstate Power Company, paid $660,753.72 in taxes last year—more than $1,800 a day. It is from such business-managed taxpaying companies that the federal government is getting a big part of the cash to buy ships, guns, tanks, planes and other supplies so necessary to whip the Axis.
In addition, a portion of this tax money helps support your schools, repair roads, provide fire and police protection—thus sharing in expense and maintenance of local and state government.
Yes, it takes taxes to make government go and we're proud that we as a business-managed taxpaying industry are doing our full share.

TELLS HIS CUSTOMERS ABOUT ALL-BRAN

And How It Helped Relieve His Constipation!

Here's a really enthusiastic letter you'll want to read:

"I'd suffered for years with constipation. Took everything from salts to castor oil, and felt run down, always taking so many physics. Then, two weeks ago, I found out about ALL-BRAN. Since I've been eating ALL-BRAN, I have needed no physics, and am starting to feel like a new man. I'm telling my customers on my milk route about your wonderful product." Mr. Leon Swartz, 1738 N. Wilton St., Phila., Pa.

What's the secret of such reports of ALL-BRAN's results? Simply that ALL-BRAN is one of Nature's most effective sources of certain "cellulosic" elements—lack of which in sufficient quantities is a common cause of constipation! They help the friendly colonic flora fluff up and prepare the colonic contents for easy, natural elimination. ALL-BRAN is not a cathartic! It doesn't "sweep you out"! It is a gentle-acting, "regulating" food! If this is your trouble eat ALL-BRAN regularly, drink plenty of water. See if you don't cheer its welcome relief! Insist on genuine ALL-BRAN, made only by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

More than 25 American automotive companies are making military vehicles for United States soldiers and our Allies—and they have first call on tires and other rubber items.

Forty thousand additional miles have been obtained from individual tires in use at Camp Stoneman because of the tire-saving campaign in force there since rubber became scarce. No tricks—just plain tire care and recapping at the right time.

An 875-pound electric magnet attached to an electric truck "sweeps" the floors of a munitions factory of steel litter and serves the double purpose of salvaging metal and preventing tire punctures.

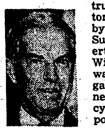
CONGRESS:
Democratic Revolt

Reelected by the senate's Democratic majority as its floor leader after breaking with President Roosevelt on the tax veto, burly Sen. Alben Barkley (Ky.) took back the reins of a balky party, but not without an eye on restoring harmony in its ranks with its principles.

Barkley's break with F.D.R. came as a result of the President's rasping attack on the $2,300,000,000 tax bill, which he said was an "inedible crust" offering relief to "the greedy instead of the needy." It was not the question of the increased taxes but rather of the size and nature of the new levies which promoted the differences between the Chief Executive and congress, and Barkley's position indicated stiffening congressional independence in formulating legislation, rather than an all-out repudiation of Democratic principles.

The same attitude prevailed in the house, where 80-year-old Rep. Robert Doughton's declaration that he "parted company" with F.D.R. on the tax veto set the stage for congressional overriding of the veto.

WAR GOODS:
Sell Surplus



W. L. Clayton

With the U. S. treasury preparing to sell 20,000 horses, 10,000 motor trucks and 4,600 motorcycles released by the army, the Surplus War Property administrator, William L. Clayton, was completing organization of the newly created agency to supervise disposal of all such goods.

Although the treasury already has disposed of 100 million dollars worth of surplus material chiefly to lend-lease and other U. S. agencies, the new unit was established by the President upon recommendation of the Baruch postwar planning committee to supervise sale of excess government goods so as not to glut and disrupt ordinary markets.

Principal task of Clayton's agency will be to determine selling and distribution policies and insist on minimum prices, leaving actual sale of material to the various government departments which originally procured the goods.

EXTEND CCC:
Subsidies Included

With consumer subsidy foes unable to override a presidential veto, the senate passed a bill extending the life of the Commodity Credit corporation until June, 1945, and permitting its use of from 750 to 900 million dollars for paymnts to hold down retail food costs.

Headed for acceptance in the house, whose banking committee approved similar legislation, the bill also calls for continuation of price-support programs to assure farm production, a feature endorsed by those who opposed consumer subsidies or government payments to processors and others to cut retail prices.

A recent check by CCC showed that only one billion of its three billion dollar funds have been obligated and the remainder are available for extended operations. War Food Administrator Marvin Jones' request for an additional $500,000,000 postwar fund was turned down.

AIR WARFARE:
Hit London

Stung by Allied bombers' destruction of their cities, Germany's once-vaunted Luftwaffe appeared in force over London again after a two-year lapse, blasting the British capital with block-busters that ripped up residential and factory areas.

As the Luftwaffe struck at London, big Allied bombers continued their attack on Nazi war-plane plants throughout Germany, seeking to cripple fighter production and reduce aerial resistance to U. S. and British forces when they open the second front.

From January, 1943, to the same month in 1944, the RAF and AAF lost 3,835 bombers in operations over western Europe, it was announced, with 2,688 of the craft being British and 1,147 American.

Open Fighting

With their lines lying exposed in the broad Roman plains, both German and Allied forces alike came under the heavy fire of artillery and aircraft around the Anzio beachhead, and the enemy's armored moves met stubborn resistance from U. S. and British troops.

To the southeast, wet weather muddied the mountain-sides and slowed up Allied advances against the Germans around Cassino. So bitter was the fighting in Cassino itself where the Nazis clung to part of the town that a U. S. Doughboy with Yankee wit reported to his commanding officer that ". . . Today, we captured a parlor, bedroom and kitchen . . ."

PACIFIC:
Closer to Tokyo

Surging beyond Japan's crumbling outer Pacific defenses, U. S. carrier forces struck within 1,400 miles of Tokyo to blast at the Mariana islands, so called gateway to the enemy homeland.

While planes from the carrier force ripped Jap defenses in the Marianas, other U. S. air and naval units continued hammering down enemy resistance in the New Britain area, blasting shipping centers used as feeder points for barges supplying embattled Nipponese troops in South Pacific outposts.

As U. S. naval and air forces tore up the Marshalls, Carolines and Marianas, the enemy's vaunted navy and aerial auxiliary still showed no face to scrap, with the Tokyo radio telling its listeners that the Jap chiefs will order a fight only after drawing the U. S. from its bases.

ARMY BEEF:
Small Plants Tapped

To assure the military services of needed supplies, the War Food administration prepared to order 3,000 small packing and slaughter plants and local butchers to set aside 50 per cent of their "army style" beef beginning April 1.

At the same time, WFA announced manufacturers of cheddar cheese will be required to reserve 45 per cent of their March and 55 per cent of their April production, compared with 35 per cent for January and February.

Since the small packers and butchers sold their entire output to civilians, their reservation for the services is expected to cut into domestic supplies. Previously, the government obtained its beef from about 425 federally inspected plants, but decided to tap the other sources upon the belief that more than normal numbers of cattle were being marketed in the smaller centers.

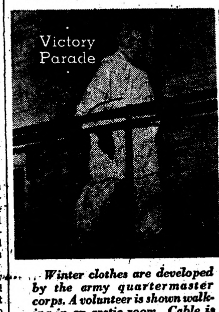
BUGLE: Plastic materials have solved another problem—this time in the brass musical instrument field. The army has been short of bugles because of a scarcity of brass. A plastic bugle has been developed that sounds as sweet as the metal ones. Besides that, it is only half as heavy, needs no warming up on cold mornings, and costs less to make.

MARS PLANES: The naval air transport service will put 20 of the new model Mars planes into service as soon as they are finished. The new JRM-1s are primarily designed for cargo carrying, but are quickly convertible to use as hospital ships or troop transports. They can carry 145,000 pounds of cargo, such as field guns, jeeps or engines, or 132 men, as transports.

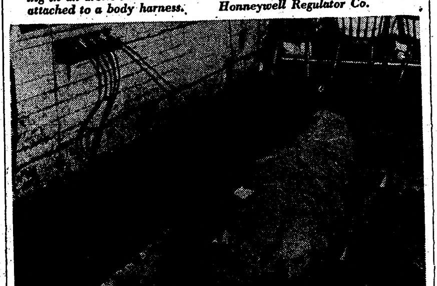
Clothes Help Fight World War II In Frigid Arctic Areas

It has been said that "clothes make the man." It takes more than clothes to make a soldier. But since he must fight in the frigid temperatures of the arctic, his clothes must be designed to keep him warm enough to think and fight efficiently whether he is bucking a North Atlantic wind or an Aleutian island snowstorm as in the picture above.



Winter clothes are developed by the army quartermaster corps. A volunteer is shown walking in an arctic room. Cable is attached to a body harness.

Body heat passes to an electronic potentiometer developed by the Brown Instrument Co., a division of the Minneapolis-Honneywell Regulator Co.



The potentiometer measures body temperatures in a few seconds. On the floor in above picture is a sleeping bag containing a soldier wearing a harness. Room temperature is 40 degrees below zero.

ECONOMIC FORMULAS 'MISSED THE BOAT'

WASHINGTON.—Full employment has been placed alongside international peace as an equal objective of the British government for the postwar world in an official pronouncement by the chancellor of the exchequer, Kingsley Wood.

No doubt our government also will seek "full employment at all costs" with equal ardor. But in the full employment discussions, both here and in Britain, the talk is of new sensational artificial methods of achieving this result—a $25,000,000,000 annual federal budget to finance public works, a 20-hour work week (yes 20) and various other devices.

The groove in which all this conservative and liberal thinking is going is the one we dug for ourselves in the last depression—the line that everything which happened in the previous thousands of years of the world was wrong, that this is the age of the liberation of man in which economic formulas are the solution to all problems, that the former natural laws of both God and Nature are henceforth to be repealed by what the economists call "the supremacy of economic man."

THEY ALL FAILED

This is strange in view of our recent experiences with economic formulas. Not one has worked among the many we tried in the last 14 years—the gold buying policy to raise prices, the ever-normal granary to provide eternally balanced food production; the public works expenditures, deficit financing, the Keynes plan, the shorter work week—all to restore full employment, but they did not do so.

Some of these steps proved politically popular temporarily, but did not achieve their economic purposes. As economic formulas, they did not do the job. Yet the postwar full employment remedies now being offered propose to go further along this narrow rut in which we have been unsuccessfully plodding for 14 years.

Now they talk of nearly tripling the old New Deal peacetime spending budget, and cutting the 40-hour work week in half, with no greater assurances that these new steps would work any better than the old.

If any government wants to provide full employment in the future, it must first free itself from these unsuccessful grooves of thought, break out of these reactionary shackles of the mind and search for valid ways and means that seem likely to do the job.

What makes full employment? Good business. Nothing else ever made it in a democracy. What makes good business? The expectation of the people that they can make a profit. No other formula in a democracy ever made people spend and invest, buy and sell.

MAINTAIN PROFIT MOTIVE

Governments then must direct their search for full employment into one line—maintenance of the profit incentive. If they want formulas, they must seek new ones to keep an expectation of profits in the public mind.

The line on which they are now going lies clearly in the opposite direction. A $25,000,000,000 budget would require such heavy taxation upon the people as to make their wages (profits) worth less and be so onerous on business as to discourage the expectation of profits. In fact, the higher you raise taxes, the less chance there is of profit, good business and full employment. In following this line, you defeat your own objectives.

A 20-hour work week? That is "share-the-work," not full employment. Does this suggestion search in the right direction when you consider the fall of France, due to her inability to get production on the 35 and 40-hour week? Are we, in this war, winning on the production front by reducing the work week, or are we not now proving conclusively that full production (with full employment) requires a reasonable work week?

A 20-hour work week would cut salaries in half, leaving that much less to spend, that much less to produce, that much less to buy. It would be a depressant to full employment.

Clearly it appears to me our thinkers are on the wrong track. Let them look in the opposite direction and devise means of maintaining a constant, steady "expectation of profits" and that is all they will have to do.

I have heard of neighborhood prattlers—not in my neighborhood, however—spreading drivel against bond buying on the ground that there will be inflation.

Maybe there will be a limited amount of price inflation, or, at least, continuation of the inflation we have experienced in this war. Everyone knows that. But these bonds are being bought not only by 60,000,000 people, but by every large corporation and investor in the country. The wise financial brains fully realize the possibilities of inflation.

Star Dust
STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

SINCE his return from his recent overseas trip Joe E. Brown has been the talk of New York — being modest, he's told the people fortunate enough to hear him, things that he should say to the entire United States. He has traveled more than 100,000 miles, entertained more than two million men, on all fronts. The man is terrific; it's no wonder that a psychiatrist who followed him through hospitals in the South Pacific reported a 71 per cent improvement in the patients' condition. He entertained men everywhere—in the front lines, on ships, in canteens.

JOE E. BROWN

His new radio show, on the Blue network, is a quiz show; too bad he's not doing an additional one, so that the public could hear what he told newspaper people.

The "vicious circle" that's supposed to be show business isn't so vicious for Xavier Cugat, who became a movie highlight after repeatedly starring on the bandstand of the New York Paramount theater. Now that he has a handsome contract with Metro, Cugat has been rewarded with a ten weeks' personal appearance contract, at $12,500 per week—at the Paramount theater, where he started to fame!

Lauritz Melchior, Metropolitan tenor who scored such a hit clowning with Fred Allen on the air, has signed for his first motion picture—it's Metro's "Thrill of Romance," featuring Esther Williams, the swimmer. He'll play an opera singer.

"All the other fellows razzed this chap," said the soldier who'd just come out of Halloran hospital. "He sat down on the side of my bed and played cards with me and talked, and was swell. I didn't know who he was then. Found out later he was Frank Sinatra."

We won't see Rosalind Russell in "Sister Kenny," after all that preparation, because it's been indefinitely postponed. But it's going to be too bad if she's assigned to "Roughly Speaking" instead, because that's a perfect story for Bette Davis.

James Cagney has started his personal appearance tour of U. S. army and navy bases in the European war theater; expects to remain abroad for three months. He rehearsed six weeks with a dance coach before leaving Hollywood, on a cavalcade of American dancing from George Primrose to Fred Astaire.

Shopping for lingerie with his wife, Geoffrey Barnes, he of the ominous voice on "The Mystery Theater," yielded to the temptation to use his radio voice on the elevator operator. Barnes says he never had an easier time getting out.

Next time you hear Cary Grant in a radio play, picture him acting out all the dialogue as if he were before the camera. When he's out of a scene he walks into the wings, mingles with the supporting players, and contributes to the off-stage sound effects.

After finishing the hilarious "The Miracle of Morgan's Creek" Preston Sturges left Paramount; now he's gone into partnership with Howard Hughes, who'll be his financial backer. That combination should produce some startling pictures!

Dimitri Shostakovich's Eighth Symphony will be given its first performance in the Western hemisphere over the CBS network on Sunday, April 2, by the New York Philharmonic symphony. Bill Downs brought the symphony back from Moscow.

ODDS AND ENDS—That Flying Fortress named for "We, the People" is still blasting away at the Germans . . . While Bob Griffin was recovering from a plane crash on CBS's "Mary Marlin" he was down with jungle fever in "Valiant Lady" . . . "The Silver Theater" may move from Hollywood to New York, to present well-known stage players in its Sunday dramas . . . One-third of the principal players in "The Robe" will be new to the screen; Producer Frank Ross believes the story demands fresh faces . . . Jack Benny has checked off the Warner Bros. lot, after completing his starring role in "The Horn Blows at Midnight."

FARMERS PLAN TO AVOID BOTTLENECKS IN FERTILIZER USE

CHICAGO.—If plant food to feed Uncle Sam's mammoth war crops is to flow from factory to farm without crippling bottlenecks, the cooperation of farmers in making early arrangements for their fertilizer supplies is essential, according to a statement made public here by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee.

"Because of labor shortages in fertilizer factories and the uncertainties of transportation," says the statement, "it is no longer possible for producers to concentrate their fertilizer distribution season into a three-or four-week rush period.

"Only by moving considerable tonnage ahead of the usual season can the industry meet agriculture's demand for plant food. Because of present war-time conditions it is no longer possible for producers to get extra factory help to fill last-minute orders, or trucks to ship them.

"Every ton of fertilizer purchased early, shipped to the farmer and stored in his barn ahead of planting time, will help take some of the strain off factories and transportation systems later on. The farmer who delays ordering his supplies until he is ready to plant his crops faces a very good chance of getting no fertilizer at all.

"The farmer's ability to produce bumper crops for the war program depends on the productivity of his soil. And this soil productivity, in turn, depends on whether the land receives a sufficient supply of necessary fertilizer elements. By taking immediate steps to obtain supplies, the farmer can make certain that his soil receives the necessary plant foods."

When your boy and the kid next door march up the gangplank, going overseas on an important business trip, there's one part of home that goes with them . . . the American Red Cross.

You can't be there in person to encourage and comfort him. But you can be there by proxy. It'll be you, working through your Red Cross, who serve him coffee and doughnuts at the end of a mission—it'll be your lifeblood in the form of plasma that goes to the battlefield—it'll be your kindness that visits him in the hospital with words of cheer and gifts—it'll be your parcel of food that goes through barbed wire to him if he becomes a prisoner of war. All this—plus friendly interest, recreation, advice . . . little things which add up to something big—is your gift to our boys.

For you and the folks next door are the American Red Cross. Your spirit of good neighborliness founded it. Your volunteer services operate it. Your dollars keep it active wherever he may be.

So give today to the American Red Cross 1944 War Fund. Keep your Red Cross at his side.

Holt School Notes

High School

On account of the enforced vacation of last week the tests for the fourth six weeks period are being given this week, though the period ended on the tenth of the month. Report cards will be issued next Wednesday, Mar. 22.

The gross receipts of the Carnival amounted to $195.29, and expenses totaled $46.84 leaving $148.45 with which to purchase film strips. The teachers and pupils wish to thank the people of Holt and community for their whole-hearted cooperation.

Having heard that some report cards will show red marks, students are wondering just who have invented failures in deportment, attitude or class subjects. Mr. Nelson declares that many of the high school students cannot concentrate and that few pupils spend sufficient time in study.

The ten high school students who receive the highest averages for the school year will receive special recognition at the close of the school year. Possibly this means another dinner, or a big picnic, or a special gift for each honor student.

Because our high school students seem to have the wrong ideas regarding the priviledged use of the library, students have been asked to sign a library pledge, and those who violate this promise will be forbidden the priviledge of the using the library.

Seventh, Eighth

The past week we have been having six weeks tests.

Walter Fluke won the $5 in defense stamps at the carnival.

We are starting a new project in school. We are using the clippings from the Current Events paper.

Our room had a movie on the "Conquering of the Desert" on Tuesday.

Fourth, Fifth, Sixth

We wrote many six weeks tests this week.

On our duty chart we are trying to see who can get the most gold stars. We don't want to get a green star because that means poor.

The fourth grade is working on a chart about Minnesota. It is divided into eight parts.

We are glad that Ruth Larson is well again and attending our school room.

Honor spelling students last week were: Robert, Dorothy, Harold, Arthur, Betty Evelyn and Gloria.

Keith Movick is news reporter now.

Attended L O L Convention

Walter Larson, manger of the Farmers Cooperative Creamery and Adolph Steinhauer spent few days last week in Minneapolis attending the Annual Convention of the Land O' Lakes Creameries, Incorporated. Mr. Larson reported that the crowd was a lot smaller than former years but, there were about five thousand farmers and their wives at the convention.

A Good $10 Bill

In these days when money is talked about in astronomical figures, a $10 bill still looks pretty good to most of us. It means something at once in terms of food or clothing or other things we want to buy. But billions are beyond most people; just something super-big that the government deals in.

Did you ever wonder how much larger a billion dollars is than a million? It takes just as many millions to make a billion as it does pennies to make a $10 bill. Or figure it this way:

When our government debt becomes 358 billion dollars, as Senator Byrd says it will, we can divide the amount by America's 135 million population and find that the debt exceeds $2,500 for every person living in the United States; $10,000 per family of four. Then we begin to see what this war means in money; why we should work to finish it.

Not Impossible

But, big as this debt will be, we can pay it if we can keep business and industry going full blast in peacetime as well as in war time. And this leads us into post-war planning.

If war does not last too long, there will be a short time, right after it closes when we Americans will have more money saved from full employment than there will be things to buy. But this will only make for a post-war boom; an inflation to be followed by depression unless we get ready now to keep factories going and payrolls alive.

But keeping factories running and the country prosperous calls for a lot of things. First of all, the government should do its part. Government has to give private business its chance.

No Simple Recipe

Sound post-war prosperity does not depend on any one thing, but on a combination of many things. Some of these are easy to understand and can be controlled, which is good. For instance, the quick change-back of industrial machinery to civilian use, so it can serve as a part of our free economy—that's an aim we will all approve, I am sure. It means jobs. It means income for workers, goods to buy and markets for what farmers grow.

How fast this change-back can be made, and how well, depends almost wholly on the government, on the policy it adopts in terminating war contracts, what it does with government-owned tools and equipment now covering many acres of factory floor-space; how it gets rid of huge stock-piles of war materials, and how it uses the billions of dollars worth of government-owned factory buildings.

There is a common-sense way to solve all these problems and still not gum-up the workings of open competition. After the war the government should not (1) hold back money due on war contracts until the last rivet is checked, (2) leave government-owned tools and equipment in the plants to hinder immediate reconversion, (3) glut markets with cast-off goods nor start "projects" to plague legitimate business.

Freedom From Fear

Simple and vital as all these matters sound, they still can get bogged down in the marshes of bureaucracy. There should be a fixed policy to prevent it. Only Congress can make certain that the first necessary steps are taken to give America victory in peace as in war.

Will American workers be jobless when peace comes? Must American farmers expect their selling to cease when firing ceases? Neither is necessary. I think Congress ought to take action now, before a crisis arises, so that an unmistakable policy may exist to be enforced. . . . Most of us will be glad when we don't have to hear so much about billions but I, for one, hope to remain on hand-shaking terms with an occasional $10 bill. If the right things are done now, we all may.

Holt Doubled Red Cross Quota

Rev, T. C. L. Hanson, chairman of the Red Cross Drive, reports that Holt raised $228.90 against a $100 quota.

One of the largest crowds that have been in town for some time was here on Thursday last week when farmers from four townships surrounding Holt, were in here to sign-up for their gas and tractor fuel for 1944.

John Alton, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Alton W. Carlson was baptized at his parents home on Thursday of last week. He was born on February 8, 1944, and his sponsors were Mr. and Mrs. Edward D. Anderson of Thief River Falls and Adolph S. Herseth of the Navy Pre-Flight School in Iowa City, Iowa.

Mrs. H. O. Hanson is spending this week at the home of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Torrance J. Lillevold at Grygla while Mr. Lillevold is on a business trip to So, Dakota.

Harry Engen hired out last week as a brakeman with the Great Northern Railroad down at Grand Forks. He made his student trip over the week end on the Warroad run thru here.

Pvt. Raymond Sagstuen and Marles Peterson visited at the parsonage Wednesday evening.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

National Income Reaches Record Level; Reds Press Closer to Baltic States; See-Saw Fight Marks Anzio Beachhead; U. S. Reinforced in Admiralty Islands

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Marshall Islands—Caught off Jaluit atoll in Marshalls by U. S. naval planes, this Jap freighter was strafed and bombed and set afire.

NATIONAL INCOME:

Record Level

Boomed by the war effort, the national income of the nation's 50 million workers soared to 142 billion dollars in 1943, with about two-thirds of it spent for goods and services, the department of commerce announced.

Reflecting the country's full swing into high speed production during 1943, income increased 26 billion dollars over 1942, but reflecting the continued shortage of civilian goods, expenditures only went up 8½ billion dollars.

From July to March, government spending reached 60 billion dollars, with 56 billion dollars paid out for the war effort. During this period, government receipts totaled 25 billion dollars, leaving a deficit of almost 35 billion dollars. Because of the recent fourth war loan drive, the government had a cash balance of 19 billion dollars.

Beverage Purchases

Of the 90 billion dollars that consumers spent for goods and services in 1943, six billion dollars were expended for alcoholic beverages, the department of commerce revealed. This brought expenditures for liquors up to $46 per person, compared with $39 in 1942 and $26 in 1939.

Despite the record expenditures for alcoholic beverages, however, less liquor was actually drunk, price increases accounting for the rise. Less than 74 million gallons of hard liquor were consumed in 1943, compared with 88 million gallons in 1942. Wine consumption dropped below the 1942 level of 112 million gallons.

Total beer consumed increased during 1943, however, chiefly because of a rise in demand from 10 million to 44 million barrels of the bottled type.

SOLDIER VOTE:

Compromise Bill

In an effort to give servicemen overseas every chance to vote and yet protect states' rights in supervising elections, congressional conferees drew up a compromise bill.

Under the bill, servicemen overseas from states with no absentee voting laws could use the blank federal ballot with only the names of the political parties designated if their governors approve, or, servicemen from states with absentee voting laws could only use the federal ballot if they fail to receive their state ballot by October 1.

So far, 20 states are reported to have adequate absentee voting laws, while nine others are considering such laws or about to convene their legislators to take up action on the issue.

RUSSIA:

Fighting; Diplomacy

Nibbling deeper into Nazi defense lines, Red troops pressed ever closer to the Baltic states of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, while German forces clung bitterly to their positions behind Russian forces at the southern end of the 800 mile front.

In Finland, there was agitation for better peace terms from the Russians as a basis for withdrawing from the war, with opposition to Moscow's proposals for restoration of the 1940 borders and discussion about disposition of northern Finnish territory.

Crossing the Narva river, Red troops advanced 15 miles into Estonia, while other Russ forces converged on the Latvian gateway of Pskov. Far to the south, the Reds met bitter German resistance as they tried to whittle down Nazi lines to the rear of General Vatutin's troops in Poland.

EUROPE:

Hold Ground

Gen. Alexander

With concentrations of heavy enemy artillery pouring shells onto their beachhead, and with strong German armored forces stabbing into their lines, U. S. and British troops under command of Allied Gen. Harold Alexander held their own in see-saw fighting below Rome.

Meanwhile, Allied bombers continued to blast at Nazi fighter-plane plants in Germany to reduce aerial resistance to a second-front and further attacks on European war industry.

Three times the Nazis lashed at Allied lines below Rome with tanks after heavy artillery preparations, and three times gallant U. S. and British troops gave way, only to bounce back in savage counterattacks restoring lost ground.

PACIFIC:

Gain Admiralties

Fighting with their backs to the wall in Japan's crumbling string of defensive outposts, enemy troops bitterly resisted U. S. landings on the Admiralty islands to the north of New Britain and the Solomons.

Bringing in strong reinforcements, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's command maneuvered the Japs into spreading their limited strength, however, and robbing them of concerted striking power.

As U. S. doughboys tightened their grip on the Admiralties, American warplanes ranged the whole breadth of the battle area, continuing to pound the big enemy base of Rabaul on New Britain, former feeder point for Jap barges supplying outlying islands. Occupation of the Admiralties put U. S. bomber forces directly in the path of enemy cargo shipping sailing southward to Rabaul, further weakening the once formidable base.

AGRICULTURE:

Corn Ceiling Sticks

Shortly after OPA had advised the Chicago Board of Trade president, Philip O'Brien, that the $1.16 price ceiling on corn would stick through 1944, the War Food administration announced allocation of wheat for food, feed, alcohol, export and lend-lease would begin before June.

In testifying before a senate agriculture subcommittee, O'Brien advocated a $1.45 corn top to relieve the drain on wheat for feeding hogs, since price supports on pigs make it more profitable to fatten them than sell grain on the market.

O'Brien's statement that the country was consuming more wheat than it produced was substantiated by department of agriculture statistics which show that over one billion bushels of the grain disappeared in 1943 against harvesting of 850 million bushels.

Support Egg Prices

Continuing its policy of supporting egg prices at parity, the War Food administration announced that it would pay an average of 30 cents per dozen for the period ending April 15.

Since January 1, WFA bought the equivalent of 3,980,000 cases, or 119,400,000 dozen, of shell eggs. Actually WFA purchased only 280,000 cases of shell eggs, although its acquisitions of dried eggs were the equal of 3,700,000 cases.

Continued WFA carlot purchases will be on the basis of U. S. wholesale No. 1 and No. 2 extras, with 45 pounds minimum net weight.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

LEGISLATION: To discourage governmental agencies from issuing directives that do not express the intentions of congress, Rep. Wollcott of Michigan suggested at a committee meeting that hereafter all acts when passed have this footnote added: "By God, we mean it!" He also proposed that all legislation be written in words of one or two syllables.

JET PLANES: An article in the official publication "Air Force" states that the new jet-propelled planes can travel at least a hundred miles faster than the present propeller-driven planes. This is because air becomes compressible at speeds of 450 miles per hour, and the effect becomes apparent on the propeller. The jet-driven plane is not bothered by this phenomenon.

WHEN a product wins and holds customer-preference year in and year out you know its leadership is established on merit. On every score, by every yardstick of value, it has met and passed the test of critical public appraisal.

Since Firestone developed the first practical pneumatic tractor tire 12 years ago and put the farm on rubber, farmers have shown an ever-increasing preference for Firestone Ground Grip Tires. SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

In 1912 tropical Americas produced their greatest output of rubber—62,000 tons. It is expected that we will have imported 41,000 tons from these countries in 1943, an important supplement to our synthetic supplies.

Some experts estimate that there are around 300 million Hevea (rubber) trees in Latin America. Most of them are in jungles, difficult to get at.

"Alcohol and driving don't mix" may still be a worthy admonition, but nevertheless, millions of gallons of alcohol are needed as a raw material to make synthetic rubber for the production of tires now so essential to driving.

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Match Good for 600 Lights

A rival of the match invented by an Austrian scientist, is a lighting-stick capable of being used 600 times. Its stone-like stem is made up of chemicals, and burning gases develop when it is struck. As the burning gases raise the temperature, nitrogen gas is released in sufficient quantity to choke the flame after allowing time to light a fire or a cigarette.

Jar Rubbers Are Different This Year

It is now thought that red rubber will be available for jar rings this year but there will be no cause for alarm if the rubbers you buy turn out to be black. It is the rubber, not the color, that counts. True, you may be a bit startled when you open your first package of the war models. "But what of it?" asks Gladys Kimbrough, Home Service Director of Ball Brothers Company, "Our grandmothers got along well enough with lipless rubbers and so can we."

Months ago, manufacturers began experiments to learn how to make jar rings that would conserve both rubber and food—the government set its scientists to the same task. One of the first things upon which all agreed was that lips are unnecessary for opening jars. The point of a thin knife can be run under the rubber to make a tiny space for air to seep through and break the seal. It is then easy to remove cap or lid. It was also agreed that jar rings could be a small fraction of an inch narrower but the thickness must remain at the pre-war standard.

War-time rubbers will keep jars sealed air-tight, but they won't stand abuse. To get good results, break yourself of that never-good habit of stretching to test and follow these four simple rules:

1. Wash and rinse rubbers. Boil them to sterilize if you can fruits the old-fashioned open-kettle way. If processing is to be done, drop the rubbers in boiling water and set aside until needed.
2. Have rubbers wet when they are used—and be sure that each rubber lies flat on the sealing surface of the jar.
3. Partly seal all jars before processing.
4. Screw zinc caps and bands on glass top seal closures slowly when sealing, as quick or jerky turns cause rubbers to slip out of position.

Farms Acquire Conveniences

Conveniences in farm homes have been steadily increasing in recent years, according to a seven-year study of 1,262 Centre county farms made at the Pennsylvania State college by J. E. McCord, professor of farm management and agricultural economics. The number of furnaces doubled during the seven years. Radios increased 20 per cent and running water increased 5 per cent. The number of farms equipped with electricity increased from 41 per cent to 55 per cent.

Labor Organization Meet Here

To Farmers of Marshall County:

Nineteen forty-four will be a hard year as far as labor is concerned. Married men are being drafted, and from all appearances the deferrments for farm labor will be tighter and fewer.

The number of units required for deferrments have been raised. There will not be enough machinery to meet the demands. All in all this years crop will have to be produced with a short labor supply.

The demands for food are greater than ever before and if we are to meet the production goals for 1944 every man, woman and child must do his part.

The Extension office of this county has the responsibility of organizing and supervising the recruitment and placement of farm labor.

In order that every farmer knows the seriousness of the situation, I have called a series of meetings to discuss this with you and ask that you assist with organizing this county so that labor will be available where and when needed.

The meetings for the east end of the county will be as follows:

Holt School, Friday, March 31 at 8 p. m.

Newfolden School, Thursday, March 30th at 8 p. m.

Gatzke Hall, Monday, April 3, at 10 a. m.

Middle River, Monday, April 3 at 2 p. m.

Grygla, Tuesday, April 4, at 2 p. m.

Be sure to attend the meetings.

R. A. Reierson,
County Agent.

Holt School Notes

High School

The Physics class has completed its laboratory work on magnetism and has begun to experiment with electricity. Forty experiments have been performed and ten others will be completed before the end of its course. The class has just received a set of achievement testers in physics, to be used in review.

Report cards were issued on Tuesday afternoon. These show that the following were honor students: Maxine Olson led the school with 23.8 points. Then followed Alice Peterson, 23.6; Margie Ueland, 22.8; Eleanor Ueland 22.6; Joyce Movick, 22.4; Myron Sorter, 51.8; Violet Erickson, 20, Lois Larson, 19.9; Delores Engen, 19.

The Sophomores surpassed the other classess in student average for the fourth six weeks period, with 18.2 points. The Freshmen averaged 16.8 points, and the Juniors, 14.5 points. No students were given failures in class studies, and there was but one incomplete. This will be cleaned up in a few days.

In average daily attendance the Juniors led the other classes with 23.3 days out of 26, a percentage of about 90. The Sophomores followed, with 23 days, a percentage of 88, and the Freshmen 22 days at a percentage of 84.6.

The General Science class is now studying the physical geography of the earth, having completed several experiments in electricity.

The Freshmen class in Business Proceeding, is studying insurance and will follow this with a consideration of the functions of a bank, the kinds of bank, bank accounts and clearing houses.

We return to the old time schedule Monday the 27th. School will open at nine in the morning and close at 3:30 in the afternoon with 30 minutes for lunch from 12 to 12:30. Newfolden has thus decreed; Holt must obey.

Seventh, Eighth

Fourth, Fifth, Sixth

We saw a movie on Tuesday about the development of transportation.

Honor spelling students last week were Donna Hanson, Vernon Larson, Amelia Anderson, Betty Ness, Arthur Peterson, Boy Fricker and Dorothy Sagstuen.

The sixth grade is studying Longfellows poem, "The Wreck of the Hesperus". In the fourth and fifth grades we are trying to have 100 on each page of our language work books. If we do, we may color an Easter egg in our pictures.

RACC Loans For Farmers

The Regional Agricultural Credit Corporation will make loans in 1944 in Marshall County to finance the production of crops and livestock that otherwise would not be produced, according to an announcement made by Chas. N. Kranz, Chairman of the Marshall County USDA War Board. "The program is desiged primarily, he said, "to increase the production of turkeys, eggs, milk, soybeans, potatoes, flax, wheat, feed for livestock and purchase of feed for livestock where necessary."

In announcing this decision, Chairman Kranz said that sometime ago the Minnesota State USDA War Board reported to the War Food Administration that credit of the kind requested is necessary to needed production, Following the recommendation of Marvin Jones, the War Food Administrator, Secretary of Agriculture Wickard designated the State of Minnesota as a region in which the making of RACC loans is necessary,

The Marshall County A A A committee wish to emphasize the fact that anyone contemplating an RACC loan to finance full production which they plan and are capable of carrying out, must first contact and make an honest effort to secure their loan thru the existing sources of credit such as commercial banks, agricultural credit corporations, production credit associations, Farm Security Administration, and the emergency crop and feed loan offices as loans are limited to those persons who actually cannot obtain a loan elsewhere.

"To qualify for a loan the applicant's farming operations should show a reasoable possibility of sucessful production. Loans will carry full personal liability and, in general, the minimum security required will be a first and paramount lien upon the crops to be produced; or upon the livestock which will consume the feed produced or purchased as a result of RACC loans, together with such additional security as may be necessary to afford reasonable assurance of repayment of the entire obligation. There will be no limited liability loans this year similar to the F-2 advances made last year for the production of certain creps.

Farmers Union Had Meeting

Mrs. V. F. Kruta of Gatzke sent us the following report on the Farmes Union meeting held at Grygla recently:

Over 150 Farmers Union Leaders and members from eastern Marshall county gathered there to hear about their organization.

It was brought out that in order to keep their Farmers Union growing, the locals will have to take it upon themselves to keep their memberships up and to expand.

One feature of the program was the explanation of the relationship between the locals, the county, state and National organization. Legislation was another matter that was discussed.

Another item that was brought out at the meeting was the high personal property taxes. They claim that by abolishin, money and credits tax, the money had to be raised somewhere, so they levied it on the little fellows.

Mrs. O. Moline and Donna of Crookston visited at the O. T. Ness home Friday.

Higher Postal Fees March 26

Effective March 26 letters which have been mailed for rural route for delivery and for delivery in cities having carrier service will be 3 cents in place of the 2 cents as formerly. This is one of the changes provided in the new revenue act passed by Congress on February 25th.

Postmaster Inga Berget calls the attention of patrons to this and to other changes in postal rates.

The law states that "first class mail for local delivery, except that on which the rate under existing law is one cent for each ounce or fraction thereof and except on postal cards, the rate is three cents for each ounce or fraction thereof."

An increase in airmail rate is to be eight cents where it previously has beed six cents. This is for continental United States, including Alaska. That rate is also in effect between points on islands of the United States. The raise does not affect airmail letters sent by members of the U. S. military forces, which will continue to be 6 cents.

Postage on all mail matters of fourth class is increased 3 per cent. Fractions of half cent or more being computed as 1 cent, but in no case shall increase per parcel be less than 1 cent.

Money order fees are increased to a minimum of ten cents, ranging up to a fee of 37 cents for orders from $80.01 to $100. New minimum fees include registry, 20 cents; insurance, 10 cents; and COD parcels 21 cents.

Mount Vesuvius Erupts Again

Mount Vesuvius near Naples in Italy has exploded again in its worst eruption since the time of before the birth of Christ according to press reports. It is pouring forth a flow of lava that rolls 70 feet thick and has buried two big towns in its path and is threatening another. Thousands of people have been left homeless and lost all they had. Smoke has been so thick in Naples that all traffic has been at a standstill.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Authorities expect that Latin-American countries will contribute 35 to 40 thousand tons of crude rubber during 1944. In 1941 the U. S. and Canada used 800,000 tons of rubber, and current requirements are larger.

The Quartermaster Corps has developed a rubber and canvas Army boot for tropical wear. The sole contains both crude and reclaimed rubber, and is not affected by jungle moisture and soil chemicals.

Over seven billion passengers were transported by motor bus in 1942, compared with about four and a half billion in 1940, reflecting the curtailment of passenger car use by rubber conservation.

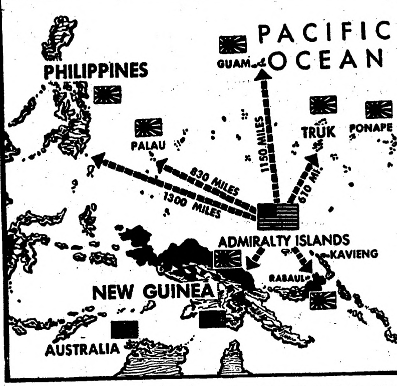
What Capture of Admiralty Islands Means



The capture of Momote airdrome on Los Negros island in the Admiralty group by U. Sixty-five whales of the blackfish type washed ashore at Bull's Island off the mainland of the coast of South Carolina, about 25 miles from Charleston. EUROPE:

See Zero Hour

As the Axis radio dinned that the invasion of Europe could be expected at any day, huge fleets of heavy U. S. and British bombers escorted by fighter planes continued to pour fire and destruction on the enemy's industry and defense installations, with Berlin the No. 1 target.

Expecting the grandest amphibious assault in military history, the Nazi high command continued to boast of its steel and concrete coastal fortifications equipped with long and short range rocket guns, and, declaring the impending hostilities were to determine the future fate of Germany, insisted that they must fight it out in their deep defenses rather than make a wholesale retreat.

In Italy, strong armored German forces jabbed at stubborn U. S. and British lines on the Anzio beachhead below Rome, while heavy slush and snowfall slowed Allied advances on the bloody Cassino front, where bitter house to house fighting again was resumed after a long lull.

GREAT BRITAIN:

Coal Strikes

Laying down their tools in dissatisfaction over recent national wage adjustments which failed to take account of their work in excessive dust and water, an estimated 87,000 Welsh coal miners walked out of 156 pits and were joined by thousands in other English and Scottish fields as the government pondered taking over the properties.

Formerly, the Welsh were paid a weekly bonus of $1.20 or more in addition to their regular wage of $18.07 for working under unfavorable conditions, but when the government recently raised the minimum pay of all the nation's miners to $20, no adjustment was made in their compensation.

With war industries, railroads and special overseas shipping threatened, the government insisted the men return to their jobs before it moved to meet the Welshmen's demands, and also strove to iron out complaints of piece-workers that the new minimum wages gave straight-time miners producing less equal compensation.

War Production

Fully girded for war since the declaration of hostilities, Great Britain's bustling industrial machine has turned out 83,000 tanks, armored cars and gun carriers; more than 115,000 guns of more than 20 mm. caliber; nearly 5,500,000 machine-guns, rifles, submachine guns and automatic pistols; more than 1,000,000 vehicles and almost 90,000 aircraft.

With the U. S. producing the major bulk of the Allies' merchant shipping, British yards have concentrated on naval construction, with the result that His Majesty's fleet is greater now than at the beginning of the war.

Because of Britain's concentration on the production of heavy bombers, it has been able to supply three-quarters of the total structural weight of the Royal Air force, with the U. S. providing 18 per cent and British dominions 6 per cent of the remainder.

PACIFIC:

Big Base Crumbles

Once Japan's big nerve-center in the South Pacific, Rabaul, had become increasingly untenable for the enemy under the heavy fire of U. S. bombers and fighter planes.

Formerly a beehive of activity with Jap cargo ships carrying material into the port for transfer to smaller barges used to supply troops in the battle zones, U. S. fliers returning from raids over the New Britain base reported that big ships no longer could be seen.

Further demonstrating U. S. superiority in the area, American troops battling in the Admiralty islands to the north of Rabaul were supplied by cargo vessels sailing right into the fighting zone under protection of warships which encountered no resistance.

U. S. Interests

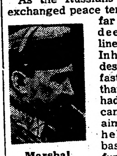
As high U. S. officials prepared for conferences with British leaders in London on America's postwar role in the Pacific, congress moved to appoint a 21-man committee to look into this country's military and economic interests in that part of the world in peacetime.

The whole question of America's future position of the Pacific was drawn into sharp focus with Australia's and New Zealand's declaration that these two countries are to be defensive centers for islands to their east and west, and use of any territories during time of war does not entitle a nation to claims or rights on them.

Not only is the U. S. concerned in the establishment of military bases in the Pacific for defensive purposes, but it also is anxious to provide equal opportunity for such American interests as airlines.

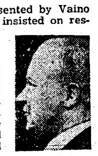
RUSSIA:

Race Against Thaw



Marshal Mannerheim

As the Russians and Finns had exchanged peace terms, Red armies far to the south bit deeper into Nazi lines in the Ukraine. In headlong smashes designed to beat the fast-coming spring thaws, the Russians had scored significant breakthroughs aimed at German-held Black sea bases and poised further threats to the Nazi legions in the Dnieper bend.



Vaino Tanner

The Finns represented by Vaino Tanner had earlier insisted on restoration of the prewar borders and declared they could not consider ejecting the Germans from the country without risking civil strife with Nazi sympathizers in the army, commanded by Field Marshal Mannerheim.

Instead, the Finns had proposed to negotiate with the Germans for restoring their troops, either through Norway or neutral Sweden. Or if this failed, they had hoped merely to isolate the Nazis in the north.

ORCHIDS: American soldiers in Italy are showing a decided preference for orchids as Easter flowers for their sweethearts, wives and mothers in the United States. Red Cross workers who are arranging to have the flowers purchased and delivered, report that these exotic blossoms are leading the more conventional roses, lilies, and gardenias in soldiers' choice.

BISHOP: The Rev. Thomas N. Nicholson, retired bishop of the Methodist church, died at 88 in Mount Vernon, Iowa. He was bishop of Chicago from 1916 to 1924, and of Detroit from 1924 to 1932. He served as president of the Anti-Saloon league. Before his episcopacy, he held several pastorates and was president of the Methodist college at Mitchell, S. D.

"ALL-BRAN WORKED WONDERS FOR ME!"

Says Constipation Sufferer

There's real hope for common constipation sufferers in this unsolicited letter!

"Thanks for what KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN has done for me. I'm 75 years old. Had been taking pills and salts almost every night. 6 weeks ago, I started eating KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN every morning. Soon I had regular movements without any trouble. I can't praise ALL-BRAN enough. It sure works wonders for me." Mr. E. C. Zook, Box 114, Fairbury, Ill.

How can such amazing results for thousands be explained? Scientists say it's because KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN is one of Nature's most effective sources of certain "cellulosic" elements, lack of which in the diet is a common cause of constipation. They help the friendly colonic flora fluff up and prepare the colonic wastes for easy, natural elimination. KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN is not a purgative. Doesn't "sweep you out"! It's simply a gentle-acting, "regulating" food.

If you have constipation of this type, eat KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN regularly with milk and fruit, or mixed with other cereals. Drink plenty of water. See if you, too, don't get real help! Insist on genuine ALL-BRAN, made only by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

STATE DEPARTMENT STYMIES ROCKEFELLER

Aides to Nelson Rockefeller think the administration blundered in failing to defend itself better against the charges of Latin American extravagance made by Republican Senator Hugh Butler of Nebraska. Inside fact is that Rockefeller prepared a rebuttal to Butler's blast against our Good Neighbor spending, but it was killed by the state department.

The rebuttal had been prepared as an article for Reader's Digest, under Rockefeller's by-line. Rockefeller showed it to two advisers, John Dickey and Anna Rosenberg, who both okayed it. Then it was sent to the state department.

There, Hull's public relations adviser, Michael McDermott, advised against letting young Rockefeller step out as defender of the government's foreign policy. He urged that this prerogative should be reserved for Cordell Hull alone.

So the article was killed, and the next issue of the Reader's Digest, instead of carrying a government rebuttal, carried another blast by Butler, with an editor's note saying that Rockefeller had been given a chance to reply, but declined.

So readers all over the country are beginning to think Senator Butler may be right.

LOS ANGELES STRIKE

The army, which seized the Los Angeles Water and Power system as a result of a strike by electrical workers, hopes to turn it back to the municipal authorities about the time this appears in print.

When the labor department reports on this strike, its figures will show that 2,300 men went out. Real fact, however, is that many times that number were thrown out of work by the stoppage of light and power.

Reason the war department stepped in was that the strike had closed: 84 aircraft plants; 38 navy plants; 14 army service forces plants (ordnance and quartermaster).

Though the general public knows only of such prominent cases as the army seizure of the railroads, actually the army is being forced to take over many properties tied up by strikes. It has become a pattern. Labor unions make use of it to threaten management.

Ten mills were tied up in Fall River, Mass., because of a mere jurisdictional dispute between an independent union and the CIO. The army was obliged to step in, and is still in. The same thing happened at Peabody and Salem, Mass., in a dispute in the leather industry between an independent union and the CIO. Also, the army has been obliged to take over the Western Electric plants in Baltimore because of the notorious "back-house" dispute.

War department officials are getting worried over this trend. They have become the Department of Emergency Labor. They don't like it. They want to fight the war, not fight labor.

ON THE AIR FRONT

Recently, U. S. fighter planes set up a new record by penetrating a distance of 550 miles into Europe—1,100 miles round trip.

This has been published, but what may not be realized is that fighters are working this run in relays. Three different teams of fighters go out toward the target at different times, using the following pattern:

1. The first team goes out with the bombers, and protects them halfway to the target, meeting and engaging the German fighters.

2. The second team, starting later, catches up with the bombers at the halfway mark and escorts them the rest of the way to the target. Thus, they arrive at the halfway mark without having to combat Germans all the way, and so have fresh supplies of gas and ammunition, while the first team, with exhausted supplies, turns back.

3. The third team starts still later, and meets the bombers at the target. Here they drop their belly tanks, take over the hot fighting above the target. With fresh supplies, they relieve the second team, which turns home.

Generally, the first team consists of Thunderbolts, the second team of the faster Lightnings, and the third team of the still faster Mustangs. Since all fighters are faster than bombers, they can go out and catch up with the bombers at any agreed point.

This technique has greatly extended the range of fighters and greatly increased the protection they afford for the bombers.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Ed Stettinius says the Soviet forces have been able to maintain good communications, partly because we have sent them 189,000 field telephones and over 670,000 miles of wire—enough to go around the world 27 times . . . Equally impressive is the quantity of barbed wire lend-leased to the Soviets—216,000 miles of it. "It is significant," says Stettinius, "that after the fall of 1942, the Soviet army stopped asking for barbed wire in large quantities."

ELABORATE box-like cornices to cover all rods and fixtures used in hanging curtains were the height of fashion in the formal rooms of the mid-Victorian period. They were often made of carved wood or of metal in intricate designs. Again they were padded or bedecked with tassels and fringe. The front of the cornice was called the face. The ends were called returns. Cornices are still used in simplified forms for our own windows and these terms are also used.

This sketch shows three different treatments of box cornices for modern windows. They all give a professional effect, yet any amateur may make them. The diagram shows grooves cut on the inside of the returns to hold wooden rods or slat to be used instead of metal rods for hanging glass curtains and overdraperies. If you already have double curtain rods, just leave them in place and fit your cornice over them. If you decide to paint the wood instead of covering it, the color may match the room woodwork or it may repeat some color in the drapery material, as shown at the right.

NOTE: This is the fourth and last of the series on modern adaptations of period curtain styles. If you are interested in making scalloped wooden cornices you will want pattern 207 which contains designs of scallops which may be used to cut dozens of different types to fit windows of any size. Palm of Victory

The palm is a symbol of victory and was adopted by the early Christians to represent the triumph of the faithful over the enemies of the soul. It is the special badge of martyrs, and the Congregation of Rites, 1688, regarded the representation of a palm on a catacomb tomb as proof that a martyr was interred there, but this was later declared untenable. The palm tree gives shade and fruit and hence is emblematic of God's protection and grace.

Jar Rubbers Are Different This Year

It is now thought that red rubber will be available for jar rings this year but there will be no cause for alarm if the rubbers you buy turn out to be black. It is the rubber, not the color, that counts. True, you may be a bit startled when you open your first package of the war models. "But what of it?" asks Gladys Kimbrough, Home Service Director of Ball Brothers Company, "Our grandmothers got along well enough with lipless rubbers and so can we."

Months ago, manufacturers began experiments to learn how to make jar rings that would conserve both rubber and food—the government set its scientists to the same task. One of the first things upon which all agreed was that lips are unnecessary for opening jars. The point of a thin knife can be run under the rubber to make a tiny space for air to seep through and break the seal. It is then easy to remove cap or lid. It was also agreed that jar rings could be a small fraction of an inch narrower but the thickness must remain at the pre-war standard.

War-time rubbers will keep jars sealed air-tight, but they won't stand abuse. To get good results, break yourself of that never-good habit of stretching to test and follow these four simple rules:

1. Wash and rinse rubbers. Boil them to sterilize if you can fruits the old-fashioned open-kettle way. If processing is to be done, drop the rubbers in boiling water and set aside until needed.
2. Have rubbers wet when they are used—and be sure that each rubber lies flat on the sealing surface of the jar.
3. Partly seal all jars before processing.
4. Screw zinc caps and bands on glass top seal closures slowly when sealing, as quick or jerky turns cause rubbers to slip out of position.

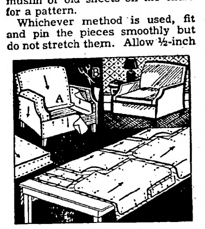
Making a Slip Cover For Favorite Chair

THERE are two ways to make a slip cover. One is to pin and then cut the actual material right on the chair; the other is to cut muslin or old sheets on the chair for a pattern.

Whichever method is used, fit and pin the pieces smoothly but do not stretch them. Allow ½-inch seams and a 4-inch tuck-in around a spring seat. Notch the seams to show how they should be joined. When fitting a pattern, mark each piece with an arrow, as shown, to indicate which way the grain runs.



At the bottom of the sketch the pattern pieces are shown pinned to the material. If figured fabric is used, be sure to place the pattern pieces so that the design is centered for the back and the seat of the chair.

Nazi Forces Retreat Toward Rumania As Russians Regain Rich Farm Lands; Allied Troops Drive New Wedge Into Germans' Main Defense Line in Italy

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Italy— Row on row, these little white crosses in Mount Soprano cemetery mark the graves of fallen American Doughboys in Italy.

OPA:
Renewal Sought

Claiming that OPA has held wartime price increases to half the level of World War I, Price Administrator Chester Bowles appeared before the senate banking committee to testify for continuation of the agency for another year.

Chester Bowles

Following early increases to iron out prewar depression prices, the cost of living has been held absolutely stable during the last 11 months, Bowles said.

Asking for retention of present powers, Bowles said OPA would continue with present techniques for keeping down prices, including subsidies, which he called essential.

Cattle Subsidy

To bring cattle off the range and prevent a market glut in the fall, OPA considered increasing packers' subsidies by 30 cents to enable them to offer higher prices for the stock during spring and summer.

At the same time, government officials considered placing a floor under medium and lower grade cattle whose quality may be affected by the tight feed situation, with floors for the spring and summer above those for the fall.

While increased subsidies were being considered for cattle, lower subsidies were being studied for hogs, in line with government policy for decreased pig production. Now $1.30 a hundred pounds, the hog subsidy may be cut by 30 cents.

SOLDIER VOTE:
President Gets Bill

Passed by congress, the compromise soldier vote bill, allowing use of the short federal ballot if certified by the governor and state ballots are unobtainable, found its way to President Roosevelt's desk for signature or veto.

Once outspoken in his opposition to a bill limiting soldier voting to state ballots alone, the President took up the compromise measure with caution before acting, wiring all 48 governors to report to him whether they would permit use of the short federal ballot, which only lists the presidential and congressional offices without including the names of the candidates.

If the governors O.K. the short federal ballot, servicemen will only be able to use it if their states have no absentee voting laws, or if they have applied for state ballots but have not received them.

RUSSIA:
Free Ukraine

Germany's remaining foothold in the Ukraine was loosened as Russian troops smashed into Nazi lines along the Bug river, and as the enemy's forces fell back toward Rumania, the Reds regained the rich farm and mineral land.

As Russia scored its military success in the south, Finland in the north turned down Moscow's armistice offer, based on restoration of the 1940 borders and internment of German troops entrenched in the little country.

Russia's southern drive carried Red troops to within 30 miles of the prewar Rumanian border, while farther to the northwest, they were within 100 miles of the old Czech and Hungarian frontiers.

EUROPE:
Drive Wedge in Italy

Having driven a wedge into the German's main defense line by leveling Cassino with a devastating aerial attack by heavy bombers, Allied forces fought hard to advance up the road to Rome and get at the rear of the enemy hemming in U. S. and British troops on the Anzio beachhead.

Although the thunderous leveling of Cassino left that once-fortified village standing directly on the road to Rome a pile of jumbled mortar, Nazi guns established in the surrounding hills continued to rake Allied troops, making progress slow.

Preliminary to the big showdown in the west, Allied bombers continued to roar over Axis Europe, ripping at Nazi channel defenses, France's network of rails over which the enemy plans to shuttle troops to meet invasion armies, and German industries turning out the weapons of war. To counter the raids, the Nazis sent up swarms of fighter planes, and great sky battles raged.

PACIFIC:
Troubled War-Lords

As U. S. army and naval forces kept up a running fire over the entire Pacific area, Japan's jumpy little war-lords had this to worry about:

Continued Allied bombings of Weewak, New Guinea, and Rabaul, New Britain, feeder bases for Jap troops in those regions.

U. S. control of the Admiralty islands lying along the supply route to Rabaul.

General MacArthur's increasing isolation of the 30,000 Jap troops hemmed in on Bougainville island in the Solomons, with the U. S. fleet and air force in control to prevent major reinforcement or general withdrawal.

Navy and army bombers continuing attacks on the Jap fleet's big outpost of Truk, guarding the entrance into the waters of the enemy's South Pacific empire.

DRAFT:
Tighten Deferments

In order to meet the services' demands for 1,160,000 men by July to bring military strength to 11,300,000, local draft boards have been directed to tighten up on all deferments, particularly for those in the 18 - 25 age group.

Gen. Hershey

Under the new directives issued by Selective Service Chief Lewis B. Hershey, only indispensable employees, regardless of family status, are to be deferred, and only the state draft head or national headquarters is to pass on any deferments for the 18 to 25 year age group.

Only farm workers producing 16 units will be eligible for deferment, and careful consideration will be given to the cases of 470,000 farm workers under 26.

While Selective Service pressed for more men, General Hershey said few of the 3,485,000 4Fs will be found acceptable for military service. Only about 11 per cent of those with dependents, including fathers, have been taken thus far, he said, and only about 1 in 10 will pass physicals.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

PENNIES: Since the copper situation has improved considerably, the War Production board has decided to permit addition of enough of the red metal to pennies to restore the old copper-zinc ratio of 95 parts copper to 5 parts zinc. Production rate currently is at 150 million one-cent pieces per month. It is expected that the annual output will exceed a billion steel pennies.

FOOD PROCESSORS: There will be a need for at least 700,000 seasonal workers in canneries and other food processing plants this year, Paul McNutt, manpower commissioner, says. This is 100,000 more than were needed last year. Students, women, and part-time workers will be the only source, he believes, though prisoners of war and soldiers on leave can be called upon.

Jap Equipment Captured in Burma

Yankee Pitcher Gets Rubdown

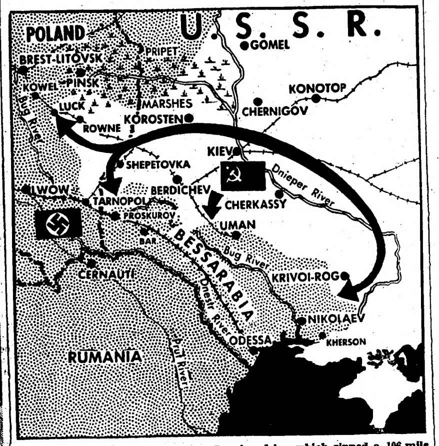
Red Army Rolls on Towards Rumania



This map shows how the new Russian drive which ripped a 106-mile gap in the German lines south of the Dnieper bend, placing some 500,000 German troops in danger of capture or slaughter, may carry the Red army to the border of Rumania. From the north below the Pripet marshes, one spearhead strikes towards Rumania via Tarnopol while another strikes towards Luck.

Wanna Lobster, Mister?

This little Indian boy dived into the sea and returned with this lobster, which he graciously offers to Pvt. H. Fordy, of County Durnham, England. The village to which the little turbaned lad belongs was recently visited by 50 British soldiers, who toured the fishing hamlet, hundreds of miles from anywhere, and were later entertained by the villagers.

Kidneys Must Work Well-
For You To Feel Well

24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.

Buried Erect

So that they may face the day of resurrection on their feet, the dead of New Guinea are buried standing up.

Household Hints

Why not use that old piano stool in the attic for a dressing table seat. Upholster the top and attach a ruffle of chintz, or other fabric harmonizing with the room furnishings, to the outer edge to cover the legs.

A girl's skirt can be made out of a pair of men's pants that are worn out in the seat. Use the bottoms of the pants for the top of the skirt and the top of pants for bottom of skirt. This makes a four-gore skirt.

In pressing hems, press from the bottom up. Pressing around the bottom of the skirt stretches the hem out of shape.

Soft soap is all right if it works. And this time it does. Nails and screws are much easier to drive if rubbed over a cake of soap first.

When making doughnuts, put them in a covered dish while still warm and they will keep fresh for some time.

When the glaze begins to wear off wringer rolls and they lose their grip, a light sandpapering with coarse sandpaper may help. Use sandpaper with discretion, of course, and then wipe off with a damp cloth.

Bring baby's bonnet back to shape after washing by drawing the hood over an inverted mixing bowl of appropriate size.

Worn sheets can be cut to suitable lengths and dyed for window curtains, or they can be used as covers for dresses and coats.

To restore the fluffiness of chenille and candlewick which has been washed, shake vigorously from time to time while the articles are drying. When completely dry, brush with a whiskbroom.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Window screens, rust-proof and flexible, that will roll up like shades are among the rubber products promised for post-war service by B. F. Goodrich technicians.

In 1942, automobile graveyards wrecked 2,043,000 cars. It is estimated that 1,196,000 cars will have ceased their rubber-wearing activities in 1943 through the medium of the wrecker.

Don't forget the spare in rotating tires, for rubber not in service ages more rapidly than when in actual use.

Atleast 16 Latin-American countries have soil and climatic conditions suitable for the growing of rubber.

GOP Leader Places Faith In Simple Election Formula

Harrison Spangler, Party Chairman, Sees Republican Victory as Result of Complete Effective Local Organization.

By BAUKHAGE

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

On a recent sunshiny Washington afternoon, I made a pilgrimage to the Republican National committee headquarters. As I entered the white-pillared portal of the modest little house they have rented on Connecticut avenue, a number of thoughts, which may be omens of good or ill in the coming election, floated into my ken.

The house was once a private home but now it is situated amidst shops and restaurants and looks across the avenue toward a towering apartment house taken over by the Civilian Defense administration.

As I ascended the stairway to the second floor office of Chairman Harrison Spangler, memories rushed about me and I was transported back to the days when the Republican party was suffering in the slough of its deepest despond. The rooms about me then housed one of the many trade organizations created by that wonderful and awful National Recovery administration presided over by the late and stormy General Iron Pants Johnson.

And later, as I chatted with Mr. Spangler, I was reminded of another circumstance, gently symbolic of the days when the elephant sulked, impotent and neglected, in his tent—the Republican committee was forced to move some two years ago from its snappier, modern quarters on Lafayette Square where it could gaze longingly at the White House on the right hand, and not too hopefully at the United States Chamber of Commerce on the other. The reason the committee had to move was because it was only a tenant on Lafayette Square and the CIO (which had tossed a million into the Democratic electioneering fund) was the landlord.

Tempora mutantur.

But if the times and the quarters have changed, so have Republican spirits. "Roosevelt won't carry two states (or was it five?)," I was confidentially informed by one of the modest laborers in the GOP vineyard.

Harrison Spangler made no tall predictions to me. He made no predictions at all. He simply told me about what he is doing, the results so far obtained. He has a simple faith that results already achieved are the precursors of victory.

Well-Used Word

Spangler's forte is organization, and that's the word he uses most.

"The precinct is the squad," he said. "If you have good squads, you have a good regiment."

He has reduced the training of the squad to a very simple formula. Get one energetic worker and assign him or her 20 Republican voters. See that they vote. Mark Hanna used that system. It works. Iowa (Spangler's own state) uses it. Many others do.

The important word in the last sentence is "do." Important because Spangler used it in the present tense. In the days of the Blue Eagle, and for many years thereafter, any statement about an effective Republican political organization had to be used in the past tense. But tempora mutantur, again. Spangler believes that times have changed and have been changing for some time.

Chairman Spangler is not starting at scratch with his organizing; 26 states which have elected Republican governors, he pointed out to me, already have pretty good machines which are working now.

The chairman is a typical, successful businessman of a middle-sized town (Cedar Rapids, Iowa) in the Middle West. His speech and his speeches are pretty much basic English except when he "rises to pronounce" on party principles. Then he uses good old substantial political phrases marshaled in the conventional manner. But like all pre-convention committee chairmanships, his job is eschewing the over-specific. He can talk about candidates, but not a candidate, pro or con; he can talk about platforms but not about planks.

He is, according to his associates, a man of action. Already he has visited all of the northern states and that is what he is still doing, dividing his time between the field and the Washington office. He likes best to meet with a small group of leaders, about 30. He also makes his contacts with non-political organizations. (He, himself, is an Elk and a Mason.)

The Farm Problem

The farm organizations will be handled en masse. Representatives of all the farm organizations have been invited to attend a meeting in Chicago early next month in order to express their views for possible incorporation in the party platform. They will meet with members of the Republican postwar advisory council's committee on agriculture. Its chairman is Governor Hickenlooper, who succeeded the late Senator McNary, father of the farm bloc.

Agriculture is one of the eight "problems" listed by the advisory council at its meeting in September, 1942. The others are foreign policy; postwar industry and employment; social welfare; federal administration; finance and currency; labor; agriculture; and international economic problems.

A staff of experts under Dr. Neil Carothers, dean of the school of business of Lehigh university, has been assembled, who assist the council, which hopes to produce timber for the party platform by scientific methods.

Chairman Spangler admits that we face a world in which conditions which will affect the election in November are likely to change radically, perhaps before the conventions; certainly before the elections. But he believes that insofar as possible, the various "problems" listed by the advisory committee should be threshed out in as much detail as possible before the convention so that they will not have to be dealt with superficially at the last moment by the platform committee at the convention.

Votes and Relief

"We made several surveys covering different periods in the East a few years ago," he said, "and we found that the New Deal vote rose in direct proportion with the amount of relief in the community. The people were grateful for the help they got and gave Roosevelt the credit; they forgot that it was the people's money they were spending. When they are able to pay their own bills, earn enough for what they need, they want to be independent. They want to shake off government control and regulation."

Mr. Spangler and his associates believe that the Republican party will win—first, because of the energetic response of people which has made the rebuilding of an effective political organization possible; second, because they consider trends already evident are a factual indication of a turn of the tide.

Mr. Spangler did not attempt to argue the case of the Republican party, nor are these columns a place for such a political debate, but anyone can see that he and his staff believe that they share a popular feeling that "the times have changed," "et nos mutamur illis" (and we are changed with them). The "we" meaning a voting majority of the American people.

Of such is the optimism which fills the workshop on Connecticut avenue where the one concern is the practical side of politics—there, where the shadow of the Blue Eagle once fell across the portals, not even the flutter of a ghostly feather can now be detected.

Service Education

To facilitate the educational program for servicemen overseas, the United States Armed Forces institute has set up branches in five theaters of war—Southwest Pacific, South Pacific, Middle East, European and Alaskan theaters. Members of all branches of the American armed forces serving overseas may now apply directly to the new branches for the same courses that are given in the states through institute headquarters at Madison, Wis. The curriculum covers the range from grammar school to university subjects. An enlisted man may apply for as many courses supplied directly by USAFI as he wishes for only one enrollment fee of $2. For self-teaching courses, text books and materials are supplied free of charge.

Temperature of Theater Goes Up With Excitement

The emotional excitement of a hair-raising Wild West show or a tense love scene has been known to raise the temperature of a theater from 8 to 10 degrees. Temperature rises similarly in auditoriums while following a heated debate, an eloquent speech, or a stirring song.

Eyesight of patrons is also believed to be improved when the film is accompanied by the stimulation of music.

CHAPTER 2—H. F. No. 1

AN ACT RELATING TO ELECTIONS AND TO FACILITATE VOTING BY MINNESOTA ELECTORS SERVING IN THE ARMED FORCES OF THE UNITED STATES AT THE PRIMARY AND GENERAL ELECTIONS OF 1944, MAKING AN APPROPRIATION THEREFOR AND REPEALING CERTAIN LAWS.

Be It Enacted by the Legislature of the State of Minnesota:

Section 1. In recognition of the state's responsibility to enact appropriate legislation to facilitate so far as practicable the voting by its qualified electors who are serving in the armed forces of the United States, at elections held within the state, the legislature by this enactment makes necessary adjustments in the absent voting law and in the election statutes to provide adequate time for the preparation and transmission of ballots to such electors within and without the United States and for the return of such ballots in due time to be recorded at such elections. All county and local clerks and all election officials throughout the state are directed to cooperate to the fullest possible extent in order to effectively carry out the purpose and intent of this act.

Sec. 2. This act applies only to the primary and general elections to be held in 1944.

Sec. 3. Except as modified by this act, the provisions of Chapter 345, Laws 1939 and acts amendatory thereof, and other statutes relating to elections shall remain in full force and effect.

Sec. 4. The term "armed forces" as used herein shall refer to and include the Army and Navy of the United States, or the Merchant Marine of the United States, or the American Red Cross, the Society of Friends, the Women's Auxiliary Service Pilots, the Salvation Army, the United Service Organizations and all other persons connected in any capacity with the Army or Navy of the United States.

Sec. 5. Registration for the primary and general elections to be held in 1944 may be made by or for any member of the armed forces over 21 years of age or who will attain the age of 21 years on or before July 10, 1944 desiring to vote at the primary election on said date, and any member of the armed forces over the age of 21 years or who will attain the age of 21 years on or before November 7, 1944, desiring to vote at the general election, by the member of the armed forces himself or by a parent, spouse, or a brother, sister, or child over the age of eighteen years, by filing in the office of the County Auditor of the county of which he was a resident prior to his entrance into the armed forces, a request for ballot in substantially the following form, whether said request for ballot is upon a form prepared and distributed by the War and Navy Departments or otherwise:

(State title of office. If officer of armed forces, must be a commissioned, non-commissioned, or petty officer not below rank of Sergeant or its equivalent. Affix seal, if any.)

Any such communication or request filed with or received by the County Auditor after January 1, 1944 shall be registered by the County Auditor in a permanent record kept by him for such purpose, and the entry of said name in such register shall constitute the only registration necessary to entitle any member of the armed forces to vote at the primary or general elections to be held in the year 1944. Registrations under this act may be challenged in the manner provided for in Laws of 1939, Chapter 345, except that the County Auditor shall not be required to give notice to the voter, and all reasonable doubt shall be resolved in favor of the validity of such registration. If it appears from the communication or request that the applicant is not qualified to vote at the primary election but will be qualified to vote at the general election, then no primary ballot shall be forwarded to the applicant, but such communication or request shall nevertheless constitute a request for ballot for the general election. Should any such request or a communication in the form thereof be addressed to the Secretary of State or any other election official, the same shall immediately upon its receipt by said election official be forwarded to the County Auditor of the county of residence of such registrant, as specified in such request, and shall have the same force and effect as if it were addressed to the County Auditor. The County Auditor shall, in no event, send more than one set of ballots to any member of the armed forces for each election.

Every County Auditor shall forthwith prepare at the expense of his county a sufficient supply of blank forms to be used to request that ballots be furnished a member of the armed forces and shall furnish such blanks to any person applying therefor.

Sec. 6. The County Auditor shall, as promptly as possible, mail an official ballot, or ballots if more than one are to be voted at the election, to every absent member of the armed forces who has been registered in accordance with the foregoing provisions. Registration for the primary election shall entitle the registrant to receive a general election ballot without further application, notwithstanding that the registrant may have failed to vote in the primary election. Said ballot or ballots shall be mailed by air mail, postage prepaid, in an envelope upon which shall be printed "OFFICIAL BALLOT." There shall also be sent in the same envelope a return envelope addressed to the County Auditor of the county in which said vote is to be cast, upon which shall be printed "OFFICIAL WAR BALLOT" and upon the back of which shall be an affidavit in the following form:

THIS FORM MUST BE COMPLETED IN ORDER THAT THE ENCLOSED BALLOT BE COUNTED:

I,.......... do solemnly swear that I am over the age of 21 years or will be 21 years on or before July 10, 1944 ....or on or before November 7, 1944 ....(check one); that I am a citizen of the United States; that for more than six months prior to my entrance into the armed forces I was a resident of the State of Minnesota; that for more than thirty days prior thereto I resided at.......... ....; that I have not cast another vote or returned another ballot for this election to any voting district; and that I am otherwise qualified to vote the enclosed ballot which I personally marked and sealed in this envelope without exhibiting it to any other person, or which, in case of my physical incapacity, has been marked for me and sealed in this envelope under my personal direction.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this..........day of..........1944.

....
(State title of office. If officer of armed forces, must be a commissioned, non-commissioned or petty officer (not below the rank of Sergeant or its equivalent). Affix seal, if any.)

NOTE: Temporary change of dwelling place made necessary by military service does not affect the voter's residence.

Priority in mailing shall be given to all ballots to be sent outside the United States. In the event the Government of the United States or any branch, department, agency or other instrumentality thereof shall make provision for sending of any voting matter provided for in this act through the mails postage free, or otherwise, the election officials of the several counties of the state are authorised to make use thereof.

No envelope, return envelope or explanatory note shall contain the name of any person who is a candidate at the election to which the enclosed ballot pertains.

Sec. 7. Any affidavits made by an absent voter pursuant to the provisions of this act may be executed before a commissioned officer, warrant officer or non-commissioned officer not lower in grade than Sergeant or its equivalent navy rating, or any other person authorized to administer oaths.

Sec. 8. The ballots used under this section shall conform to the requirements of Chapter 345, Laws 1939 and acts amendatory thereof, except that if modification of the size of ballot or envelope, or weight or color of paper, is necessary to conform to mailing requirements of the federal authorities, state and county officials in charge of the preparation of such ballots and envelopes shall cause such modifications to be made. Ballots shall be marked pursuant to instructions contained thereon and shall be returned in the return envelope provided therefor.

Sec. 9. Upon receipt of the returned ballot, the County Auditor shall stamp upon the ballot envelope the date of its receipt in his office and shall check the elector's name with his temporary registration book to insure that the ballot is from a voter entitled to vote and that he has not already returned another ballot for the same election. Any discrepancy or disqualifying fact shall be noted by the County Auditor on the envelope. In other respects the provisions of Chapter 345, Laws 1939 and acts amendatory thereof as to deposit and counting of such ballots shall apply, except that failure to return unused ballots shall not invalidate the marked ballot, which shall be counted; except that no ballot contained in a return envelope in which the affidavit upon the back thereof is not properly executed shall be counted. All ballots received by the County Auditor before the closing hours of the polls shall be delivered by him to the proper polling places.

Sec. 10. If any person entitled to vote under the provisions of this act casts his ballot in person on election day, then no absentee ballot shall be counted for such elector. If more than one absentee ballot is received from any elector entitled to vote under the provisions of this act, the ballot of such elector bearing the latest County Auditor's date stamp shall be cast.

Sec. 11. Whenever it shall be made to appear by due proof to the judges of election that any elector who has marked and forwarded his ballot as provided in this act, has died prior to the opening of the polls on the date of the election, then the ballot of such deceased elector shall be returned by the judges of election in the same manner as provided for rejected ballots, but the casting of the ballot of a deceased elector shall not invalidate the election.

Sec. 12. A separate record of the ballots of absent voters under this act shall be kept in the various voting districts.

Sec. 13. There shall be no limitation of time for filing and receiving applications for ballots under this act.

Sec. 14. The dates for the performance of acts in preparation for and the holding of the primary and general elections are changed as follows:

HOUSE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION NO. 2

PAYING TRIBUTE TO MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES.

WHEREAS, it is altogether fitting and proper since our nation is now a most powerful participant in the greatest war of all time; and in view of the fact that from the Senate and House of Representatives some of our members are now in military uniform taking their part in the battle of human freedom; and in view of the further fact that this special session of the Legislature of Minnesota has just enacted into law the Soldiers' Vote Bill, giving to those in our armed forces the opportunity to vote in the elections of 1944;

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED that the respective bodies of the Senate and House of Representatives stand in respectful attention for one minute of silent prayer as a sacred and solemn tribute to the memory of all those heroic men and women who, on land and sea and in the air, have already made the supreme sacrifice on the altar of war; for those brave and courageous men now fighting on the battle fields; for all the wounded and bleeding and dying men; for all those enduring agony and torture in enemy concentration and prison camps; for all the loved ones at home who sorrow in this dark hour of human history; for this global war to soon cease; and with the help of Almighty God for a just and lasting peace among all the nations of the world.

Waste Paper Drive Is Now On

Arvid Carlson, Marshall County Chairman this week is appealing to all the teachers of the county schools as well as the students and their parents to aid the government in its drive for waste paper, card board, old magazines, newspaper ect.

Mr. Carlson said, the shortage of waste paper so vitally needed in the production of containers for the shipment of supplies to our armed forces is serious problem. Millions of paper board containers carrying food, amunition and supplies are being shipped overseas to American and Allied forces. Recent news dispatches tell us of our forces at Cassino, in Italy, living in the mountains during the heavy fighting, drinking rainwater and eating food kept dry by paper board containers. Your waste paper helped to keep this food dry. We must continue to save our waste paper so that our boys can be supplied with the necessary food, ammunition and equipmedt to insure victory.

I am appealing to all of our county's school teachers to stress the importance of saving and collecting waste paper, old magazines, cardboard, ect. to their pupils. I ask that each school conduct its own paper drive. Rural schools should bring their paper to town and pool it with the local school for shipment. No one should burn any waste paper, newspapers, card board, or old magazines when they are through with them. Paper today is just as important to the war effort as guns and ammunition. Lets not waste it. There is no such thing as waste paper now. Every bit is valuable. So let us all save it and collect it."

WFA Sees Ample Civilian Food Supply During Coming Year; Production Up; Allied Forces Battle Japs in India; Congress Votes Role in World Relief

AGRICULTURE:

Food Supply

Civilian food supplies during 1944 should be the same as last year with farmers continuing record-breaking performances, War Food Administrator Marvin Jones said, but stocks of milk, cheese and fats may be slightly less.

At the end of 1943, the U. S. had the largest livestock inventory in history, Jones said, with 19 per cent more hogs and 3 per cent more cattle, although sheep and lamb numbers were down 4 per cent.

With farmers urged to cultivate 16,000,000 more acres than last year, they still face manpower problems, Jones related. The outlook for production of farm machinery and fertilizer have improved, he added.

Revealing $350,000,000 was spent for supporting farm prices in 1943, Jones said they served the double purpose of offering incentive for production and holding down consumer costs.

Postwar Outlook

Addressing the National Association of Mutual Insurance companies in Chicago, Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard declared postwar America's exportable surplus of farm commodities would be 15 per cent of production.

Asserting the figure resulted after estimating increased domestic demand for consumption and industry, Wickard said: "Again we are either going to have to extend credit or give agricultural products to other nations, or we are going to have to accept goods and services in exchange."

Advances in agricultural production will pose a major problem in postwar America, Wickard said, remarking that with only moderate demand and usual educational methods, yields will jump up 40 per cent in six years.

WAGES:

Peg Sticks

Testifying before the senate banking committee considering extension of price control after June 30, War Labor Board Chairman William H. Davis declared that the WLB intended to stand by its "Little Steel formula" limiting wage increases to 15 per cent over January 1941, levels, but only if living costs remain relatively stabilized.

To assure such stabilization, Davis recommended continuance of consumer subsidies. Prohibition of subsidies would result in appreciable rises in basic commodities and make present wages inadequate, Davis said.

Davis opposed suggestions that wages be limited, declaring such action would work against promotions and upgradings, and discourage shifts to industry.

WORLD RELIEF:

Authorize UNRRA

By overwhelming vote, congress put itself on record for participating in world relief by authorizing expenditures of $1,350,000,000 for the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation administration to help the people of occupied countries get back on their feet following their liberation.

Although UNRRA will feed, clothe and restore essential services in the stricken countries, it will do so only for the purpose of getting the people started in rebuilding their agricultural and industrial economy.

Matching the U. S. contribution, 43 other United Nations will put about $650,000,000.

PACIFIC:

Japs Invade India

While Adm. Louis Mountbatten's Southeast Asia command coped with a strong Jap drive into eastern Burma, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's staff concentrated on weakening the enemy's hold on New Guinea with heavy aerial attacks against shipping and gun positions.

Springing unnoticed from the jungle, a Jap force pressing far inland into India pointed at Imphal, key to the communications line feeding Lieut. Gen. Joseph Stilwell's Chinese-American troops opening a new supply route to China in northeastern Burma. While the Allies maneuvered to weather this charge, two other Jap columns aimed at Imphal farther to the north.

In New Guinea, Allied planes ripped the northeastern coastal shipping route while Aussie and U. S. doughboys advanced northward toward the big base of Madang over craggy foothills.

EUROPE:

Take Over Balkans

Germany made her final preparations for an anticipated double-barreled attack against the continent by the Allies by integrating Hungary, Rumania and Bulgaria into the Nazi war machine to provide a common pool of men and resources.

The Nazis' incorporation of the Balkans came as the Russ drew closer to the Hungarian border by stabbing deeper into prewar Poland and surged onward to the Rumanian boundary by chewing off Germany's last grip in the Ukraine.

As Germany moved to utilize the Hungarian, Rumanian and Bulgarian armies of over a half million men and draw upon the agricultural and industrial resources of these countries, Nazi troops streamed eastward to take up the fight along the newly organized battlefront.

Jerry Tough

While the Germans moved quickly to mend their fences in the Balkans they more than had their hands full in Italy and the west.

Around Cassino Jerry clung stubbornly to his ground to block the broad highway to Rome, fighting desperately in the hilly country to dominate the heights from which he could pour his deadly artillery fire upon Allied troops maneuvering below.

Nazi Prisoners in Italy.

In the west, the Allies sent fleets of bombers against France and Germany to rip defenses and railways over which troops and supplies could be shuttled and blast factories turning out Axis armament.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

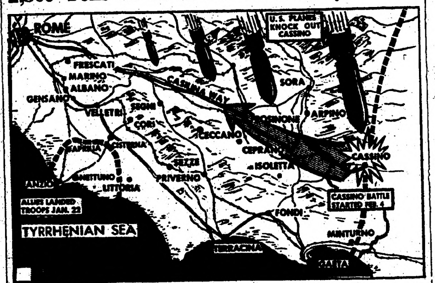
GOLF BALLS: About 400 tons of balata, the tough gum used to cover golf balls, has been released by the War Production board. It is showing signs of deterioration and is unsuitable for war purposes. Manufacturers of golf balls say that they do not have materials for centers on hand and not much for windings, so the balata does not mean any new balls in the immediate future.

BOWLING: Fewer perfect scores were bowled this season than for a good while back, the American Bowling Congress reports. In 1940 there were 284 perfect games in ABC sanctioned competition, the all-time high. In 1942 the score dropped to 225, and in 1943 it slumped to 137. This season there were only 84 perfect games, although 1,675 more teams were accredited.

Nazis Smile at Capture

These two Nazi soldiers, captured from the lines near Carroceto, Italy, were also caught by the camera of an alert signal corps photographer. Completely unconcerned at being taken prisoners, the pair smile broadly for the cameraman. Or perhaps at their pleasure at having been captured.

2,500 Tons of Yank Bombs Destroy Cassino



In the most devastating aerial assault in history Yank bombers destroyed Cassino, dropping more than 2,500 tons of bombs on the town. This record weight of explosives was concentrated in about one square mile. Heavy guns finished the job. Then ground troops moved in. While this was taking place, RAF planes attacked the Nazis at Aprilia.

Trio Downs Sixty Jap Planes

Sixty Jap planes have gone down under the blazing guns of this trio of marine corps pilots in the South Pacific. They are members of the "Flying Corsairs," top marine squadron with total of 135½ planes shot down and 27 planes destroyed on the ground. Left to right, Lieut. Robert Hanson of Newtonville, Mass., 25 planes; Capt. Donald N. Aldrich, Chicago, 20 planes; and Capt. Harold L. Spears, Ironton, Ohio, 15 planes.

'Price Premium' Battle Grows in Importance

War Food Administration Faces Increasingly Difficult Problem of Getting 'Bashful' Beef Cattle to Market.

By BAUKHAGE

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

The fight over subsidies—pardon me, I shouldn't use that word subsidies, the New Deal doesn't like it—the fight over "price premiums" on farm products is once more the chief concern of the administration and the members of congress who do not see eye to eye on this painful question.

The smoke of the battle over the veto of the subsidy ban included in the Commodity Credit corporation bill has settled, and since then there was another veto (the tax bill) that didn't fare so well. But the Farm Bloc members are not so overoptimistic as to believe that the President and congress are still far enough apart on the subsidy question that another veto could not be sustained. In the senate, the cooler heads of the opposition know this and are not willing to go through the same futile process again.

In the house, it is a different matter although this is not likely to change the final picture. House Leader Joe Martin, while conceding no jot or tittle to the administration that he can withhold, has made it plain that price control is necessary, and he isn't going to allow too much delay on the part of those who want an anti-subsidy rider attached to the OPA bill. He has other plans of his own.

War Food administration officials are quoted as admitting that the case of the bashful beeves is one of their greatest problems. Concretely, they have the job of enticing two or three million head of beef cattle off the ranges and into the butcher shops during early spring and summer. And the only thing that they know of to make the cattle move is the good "old reliable" that makes the mare go—cash money. Since the administration is sitting on the ceilings and refusing to allow prices to the consumer to go up, Uncle Sam will probably have to make up the difference again, if congress will let him, in the form of a "price premium" to the stockmen.

The Banker's Stake

And the government is wondering about something else besides a few meatless Mondays or Tuesdays or Wednesdays. It is worried about the banker who has a stake in steaks, as well as the cattleman and beef-eater.

Cattle on the ranges have increased beyond the feed on the ranges.

The average livestock population of America in the years 1922 to 1942 was 69 million head. Roughly let's say half of this was dairy cattle. Now the estimate is 82 million head and the ratio of eating cows to milking cows has increased alarmingly in the last few years.

And the beeves are now home on the range because there isn't a price incentive to lure them to slaughter. The government feared this; feared first the famine and then the flood. It now looks as if the famine was coming and the flood is not far behind. And this is where the banker comes knocking at the door. He remembers other gluts when the drouth, for instance; sent all the cattle to market at once, ruining the industry, making the banker's notes just so much wallpaper.

But how, the simple citizen asks, can there be a price drop when the government has placed a floor under prices as well as a ceiling over them? Well, see what happened to our friend, the hog. The farmer brought his pigs to market. The government fixed the price which the packers were bound to pay. But so many pigs arrived that the packer couldn't pack them and the law didn't say he had to buy what he couldn't use. So the farmer, rather than pick up his pigs and carry them home again, sold them off at disgracefully low prices to the smart boys. Finally the smart boys got the floor price, the butcher got his ceiling price which the consumers with full pocketbooks and empty stomachs were glad to pay. All the farmer got was mad.

This happened why? The government says simply because some farmers, seeing as how there was going to be such a good market for hogs, exceeded their quotas—got too hoggish (one district in Iowa, I was told, increased its pig crop by 53 per cent, when the figure the government had set was 15 per cent). More about that later.

And so the War Food administration is afraid the same thing might happen to the cattle market. And the banker is afraid. It would be bad enough if we ran into a glut like the hog-jam but, as one WFA livestock expert put it, "we shudder to think what might happen if an early drouth developed. There would be a great stampede to move cattle to market. Transportation and processing facilities might not be able to handle the movement. The result might be the loss of thousands and thousands of head of cattle."

R. M. Evans, member of the Federal Reserve board for agriculture, who is a former agricultural adjustment administrator, is urging the bankers in the cattle industry to do their share in coaxing Ferdinand off the range.

About 'Elastic' Prices

Of course, the cattlemen have been among the most violent critics of the price control administration and their representatives have maintained a steady battle here in Washington in an effort to remove the ceiling prices from beef (or, as they say, make the prices elastic) so that prices would rise and fall in accordance with the seasonal demand.

The cattlemen's viewpoint as presented by Joe G. Montague of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers association, boils down his plaint to a simple statement.

"Cattle just provide the frames to hang beef on. The Lord knows we've produced the frames but somebody fell down on the job of hanging the beef on 'em."

Mr. Montague told me the other day that the weights have gone down faster than even he expected although he predicted the glut and the promised famine ever since the fixed price was made last October. They have gone off 27 to 28 pounds a head and he expects this will continue until July when grass feeding begins again.

"I'm trying to get the cattle off the ranches but I can't do it. The feed lots are not taking them because there isn't any feed. I could sell thousands of pounds of feed today if I could get my hands on it. The government reports show that there's a lot of feed somewhere but we can't find it."

Hoarded Corn

There is plenty of feed in the shape of corn in the country but the farmers with their government-assured prices on hogs are hoarding it—they are transforming it into pork. The government "asked for this" when it put a premium on hog-raising, as we have explained. But many farmers, poultry and dairy farmers and others outside the corn belt need feed.

Not only farmers but industrialists who need corn for their chemicals, are complaining. The army and navy who need their products have echoed their pleas.

So the government is smack up against the problem of prying this feed (corn) loose from the farmers who are keeping it to feed to their hogs. The only way they can shake the kernels loose is to increase the price of corn. The only way they can do that without breaking through price ceilings is to subsidize corn—in other words, buy it at a price which will make it more profitable to the farmer to sell it than to feed it to his hogs.

Montague's argument is that because the cattle business is seasonal you have to have flexibility in price. If the price is nailed down, the cattleman will sell his grass-fed cattle in September, instead of holding out for higher prices in the spring, and save going through the anguish of zero weather. Of course, under price control, the theory is that the flexibility is provided by the subsidy—excuse me again—by the government offering a price premium which gives the cattleman enough for a fair profit but doesn't increase the price to the consumer and start inflation. But the cattlemen don't want sub-price premiums. They want prices to rise and fall in the good old-fashioned way.

And that is where the issues in the fight over the proposed amendment to the OPA bill are neatly joined.

Fargo, Mar. 27—The War Production Boacd said this week that the tightness of lumber situation precludes any possibility of relaxing present restrictions on constrction for civilian purposes. The lumber situation is serious and the military requirements for 1944 are so great that any general expanson of civilian construction is unlikely this year, W. A. "Swan Song"

The term, "swan song," is familiar to all for a farewell performance, or the last creative effort of an artist. The allusion is to the song popularly believed to be sung by a swan when dying. The origin of the metaphor is found in the "Epigrams" of the famous Latin "Martial," probably Marcus Valerius Martialis, who is believed to have lived from the year 40 to 102 A. D. And a well-known use of it is in Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice."

WHY WE HAVE FARM CO-OPS

AGRICULTURE must depend on the initiative, judgement and freedom of action of farm people to manage, adapt and adjust their business to economic fluctuations. The desire to reduce marketing costs by assembling, processing and distributing supplies and products in volume was the challenge that led to cooperative action.

ACCEPTING THE CHALLENGE, farmers have developed ever-growing cooperative facilities in practically every rural community in the nation

COOPERATIVE ACTION on the part of farmers of the Northwest seeking a more equitable market for their main crop . . butter . . . led to the creation of Land O' Lakes Creameries, Inc., and its development into one of the major butter marketing agencies in the entire world. It stems from the soil. Through cooperation the farmers of the great northwest have inexpensive marketing facilities which they could never afford except through cooperative action.

IT IS THE INDIVIDUAL FARMER MEMBERS of cooperating Land O' Lakes Creameries who share in the increased returns which their improved marketing method makes available to them.

Lutheran Bible Studies

A series of Bible Studies on the fundamentals teachings of the Nazareth Lutheran Church on Thursday evening, April 20 at 8:30 P. M., according to Rev. T. C. L. Hanson. The primary purpose is the instruction of a "Church Membership Class", or what has heretofore been known as Adult Confirmation Class. However, this will be different in that all the members and friends of the congregation are invited and encouraged to attend Those who are Non-Lutherans or are not confirmed are invited to attend this series of six public lectures and discussion periods. Those who wish to register may do so and a record will be kept of their attendance. Then too, there are many who have been members of the church for many years who will enjoy and profit by these lectures.

Furthermor, there are many, even whole families, who have expressed a desire to join our church but since the Lutheran church emphasizes the teaching of their doctrines before they are received as members, these people have not found it convenient to join. The opportunity presents itself now and the preparation for church membership is possible by attending these Bible studies. There is no obligation on anyone who attends or registers. If one does not like it or decides against it after having attended, that is their privilege. If there are some who are not certain yet if they should prepare for church membership they are invited to come anyway and if they do not wish to continue, they may cease at any time. Following each lecture, there will be a question or discussion period when questions may be asked orally or through a question box. These Bible Studies are for all but especially for those who are unconfirmed and wish to join Nazareth Lutheran Church or become familiar with the teachings of the Lutheran Church, can qualify for membership by attending these lectures on the Biblical Foundation of the teachings of the Lutheran Church. All are invited to attend the first of the six weekly public meetings in the Church Parlors on Thursday evening.

Silverness-Loe Wedding

A beautiful wedding was solemnized in the Nazareth Lutheran Church at 8:15 on Monday evening when Mrs. Hilda M. Silverness of this community became the bride of Mr. Theodore Loe of Lakeville, Minnesota. Rev. T. C. L. Hanson officiated, using the double ring ceremony. Before the ceremony, Mrs. Clarence Larson rendered a solo, "O Perfect Love". During the ceremony, Mr. Gust Silverness of Duluth and Mrs. Wicko sang a duet. Following the ceremony, Mr. Marvin Sandberg sang "Crowned with thy Benediction" Their only attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Griffin of Middle River, daughter and son-in-law respectively of Mrs. Loe. The bride and her attendant wore street length dresses of Navy blue silk velvet with white accessories, and a corsage of mixed flowers. The altar was decorated for the wedding with freshly cut tulips and jonquils and plants of hydrengia, roses and other varities.

Following the ceremony, a delicious lunch was served to over 200 guests. Circle No. 3 of Nazareth Ladies Aid had charge of the serving. The table set for the bridal party was graced by a three tiered wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and groom. The table was decorated with lighted tapers and flowers.

Mrs. Loe is well known in this community. Mr. Loe has resided on his farm near Lakeville until he rented out last fall. They will for the present, make their home in Minneapolis.

Allies Drop Newspapers On Occupied Countries

During the past year, British and American bombers have dropped on the occupied countries of Europe millions of copies of miniature newspapers printed in more than 10 languages in England and the United States.

Wrapped in bundles of 500 for weight, these papers, although containing 10,000 words of war news, are only two by four inches in size so a copy may be safely hidden in the finder's clothing.

ENDS 5-YEAR SIEGE OF CONSTIPATION!

"Now as Regular as Anyone!" Says H. C. Durand

Here's a sincere, unsolicited letter every disappointed "doser" will want to read:

"I'm 82 years old, and have been constipated over 5 years, going as much as 5 days without a movement. Pills and laxatives would relieve me only for the day I took them. Next day I'd be as bad as ever. Then I tried KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN. Am now on my second box, and as regular as anyone could want, thanks to regular use of your wonderful product!" Mr. H. C. Durand, 221 N. Columbus Ave., Freeport, Long Island, N. Y.

Sounds like "magic," doesn't it? Yet, KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN really can, and does, get at a common cause of constipation—lack of certain dietary "cellulosic" elements! That's because it is one of Nature's most effective sources of these elements—which help the friendly colonic flora fluff up and prepare the colonic wastes for easy, natural elimination. KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN is not a purgative! Doesn't work by "sweeping out"! It is simply a gentle-acting, "regulating" food!

If your constipation is of this type, eat KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN or several ALL-BRAN muffins daily. Drink plenty of water. See if you don't find welcome relief! Insist on genuine ALL-BRAN, made only by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Planes fly in supplies and bring out crude rubber from Central American plantations. Weeks are saved by this method of transportation.

In building a battleship it takes 150,000 pounds of rubber. This is equivalent to the rubber used in the manufacture of more than 12,000 small passenger-car tires.

The first city omnibus lines, the forerunner of modern motor bus transportation, started operations over the streets of Paris in 1662.

Seventy-three per cent of the employees in 94 war plants depend upon their cars for transportation. Rubber is essential to their work.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

Increased Activity in Pacific Sector Marked by U. S. Blows on Jap Bases And Heavy Fighting in Burma, India; 4-Fs Get Study in Manpower Crisis

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Italy—Against a background of war's ruin at Cassino, an Allied medical unit moves to the front to attend the wounded.

RATIONING:
Announce Changes

More gas, freer use of fuel oil and food coupons and ration changes in vegetables, fruits, meats and oils were announced by OPA.

To maintain the distribution business, it was announced drivers holding "B" cards will be allowed an additional 100 miles a month, while expiration dates for fuel oil coupons will be eliminated before the fall season of heavy consumption gets underway.

Because many shoppers cashed in their red and blue food coupons for tokens at expiration dates, OPA took off all time limits on the stamps.

While all frozen fruits and vegetables were taken off rationing, beef flank meat, pork liver, lamb and mutton hearts, liver, sweetbreads and tongue, beef tongue, cooked and barbecued pork spareribs and pork tongue were cut 1 point. Shortening, salad and cooking oil were slashed 1 point. Points on canned carrots and tomato juice also were reduced.

DRAFT:
Eye 4-Fs

To fill up the industrial and agricultural ranks left vacant by the drafting of all men except key workers under 26, the government called for the induction of all 4-Fs not engaged in essential occupations and a congressional committee moved to shape special legislation for such a program.

At the same time, it was revealed Selective Service was scrapping its unit system of deferring agricultural workers, only giving consideration to a man's regular employment on a farm and the problem of replacing him.

Under the government's proposal, 4-Fs doing nonessential work would be enlisted as reserves and directed to essential occupations at regular civilian pay, or they would be enrolled in labor battalions for employment at army pay if they refused to accept the assignments.

Of the nation's 3,500,000 4-Fs it was estimated that about 1,000,000 were engaged in non-essential work.

PACIFIC:
Threaten India

As bold Japanese forces thrust toward the highway hub of Imphal in India, Adm. Louis Mountbatten rallied Allied forces to a stand to hold this key to land communications all along the 600-mile Burmese front.

Admiral Mountbatten

In the Southwest Pacific area, strong U. S. naval forces again challenged the Japanese fleet to come out and fight by attacking the enemy's sea base of Palau, 460 miles from the Philippines, but the Nips once more withdrew. On New Guinea, New Britain and Bougainville, Allied ground forces continued to press the Japs, as U. S. airmen impeded reinforcement of their battered troops by shooting up shipping and bases.

Seeking to capitalize on their surprise of the Allies in India when they burst from the Burmese jungle from three points to converge on Imphal, the Japs maintained heavy pressure in the face of stiffening British resistance. Beyond Imphal lay the Bengal-Assam railroad, supplying Lieut. Gen. Joseph Stilwell's U. S. and Chinese troops pushing the Japs down the Mogaung valley in far northern Burma.

AGRICULTURE:
Food Subsidies

To peg consumer costs, War Food Administrator Marvin Jones ordered the $3,000,000,000 Commodity Credit corporation to use its powers and funds for subsidizing food prices.

In addition, the CCC was ordered to purchase, sell, store and transport food and farm products involved in the WFA's price-support and lend-lease programs.

Strongly bucked by the farm bloc in congressional debate but upheld by administration forces, the food subsidy program will cost the CCC between $650,000,000 and $800,000,000, it was estimated.

Farm Prices

Increases in returns on meat animals, feed grains, hay and oil bearing and fruit crops resulted in a one point advance in the general level of farm prices from mid-February to mid-March, the agriculture department reported.

Boosts in the above commodities more than offset declines in food grains, truck crops, and milk and egg prices, and brought the general income level to 196 of the 1909-'14 plane. A rise of one point brought prices paid by farmers to 176 of the 1909-'14 standard.

Prices received by farmers averaged 115 of parity, with only wheat, rye, ~~flaxseed, cotton, hay, peanuts,~~ cotton, lemon and oranges below the fair exchange value established by congress.

EUROPE:
In Balkans

While their lines held in northern Russia, German troops fell back to the Carpathian mountains in the south, where they were looked upon to make a stand with Hungarian and Rumanian forces recently incorporated into the Nazi armies.

As the Germans drew back in the east, Allied bombers headed over western Europe to drop their explosives over the expected invasion routes and hammer at Nazi production centers. In Italy, both sides traded punches at Anzio below Rome, while action tapered at Cassino, where Germans clung to their defensive posts.

In pushing the Germans back to the Carpathians, the Russians advanced to within 30 miles from the old Czecho-Slovak border, while farther to the southeast, they crossed the Prut river to lunge into Rumania.

Occupation Plans

From London last week came reports indicating Allied plans for postwar Europe shaped by the U. S., Russia and Britain.

With the reich's collapse, the authoritative London Sunday Observer said plans called for British occupation of western and north central Germany, U. S. control of the southern and south-central parts, and Russia of the eastern section. Symbol of Germany, Berlin would be occupied by all three powers.

Before establishment of stable government, the Big Three would also occupy Austria, and any movement for that country's union with Germany would be discouraged, with closer economic ties with the Balkans suggested.

Looking toward eastern Europe, information leaking from sources consulted on perfecting details of the Teheran agreements indicate Moscow will annex the Baltic states and eastern Poland and Balkan territory considered traditionally Russian, and exercise influence over Bulgaria, Rumania and Hungary.

DAIRY SUBSIDIES: Charles Holman, secretary of the National Co-operative Milk Producers federation, told a senate committee that subsidies on dairy products would have to be increased by $200,000,000 a year to give farmers a fair return. This would raise the total paid to milk producers from $550,000,000 to $750,000,000. Holman is opposed to the whole dairy subsidy program.

SAVINGS: In the first two years of war, savings of the American people have increased by more than 50 per cent, represented by war bonds, bank deposits and life insurance. The total of these three items on January 1 of this year was 91 billion dollars. About 12 per cent of individual income goes into these forms of savings, according to the Institute of Life Insurance.

One thing a soldier is afraid of is a display of emotion. That's why his slang so often sounds derogatory. For example, he refers to the silver eagles on his colonel's shoulder straps as "buzzards." But when he speaks of his favorite cigarette, he says: "Camels." They're first with men in the Army as well as with Sailors, Marines, and Coast Guardsmen. (According to actual sales records in service men's stores.) And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S., and to men in the Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard wherever they are.—Adv.

County Farmers Union Meet

The Board of Directors of the Marshall County Farmers Union met at Holt on April 5th.

Plans were made for the second annual Picnic of the Marshall County Farmers' Union at the Newfolden City Park on Sunday June 4th. Einar Kuivinen, President of the Minnesota Farmers Union and others will speak. The 14 Farmers Union locals in Marshall County will each contribute something to the program. Refreshments will be sold on the picnic grounds.

A motion was made that we investigate the possibility of establishing a Credit Union in Marshall County, and they also went on record favoring the continuation of the FSA and OPA. The FSA is essential to the production of war time food and fibre by financing the under-financed and under-employed small farmers, enabling them to increase production up to 10%. Price estabilization is necessary to prevent chaos and inflation. We may not like rationing, but stop and think what it would be like without it, would there be gas enough or food enough to take care of common man?

A very large crowd attended the Anton Rodahl farm sale here on Tuesday and his line of good farm machinery and a fine herd of cattle sold at a very nice price.

Tom Risdal left on Tuesday ~~for Fargo where he was to com-~~ plete a deal for a hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Sorum have completed a deal whereby they have bought out the farm equipment and livestock from Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Sorum.

Lieut. and Mrs. Joe Moline were Holt visitors Sunday. Lieut. Moline is home on furlough and Mrs. Moline lives at Thief River Falls.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Pete Klungness April 10, a boy.

Left to mourn his loss are five brothers, Gilbert and John of Holt; Carl of LaCross, Wisc., Levi of Fargo, Alfred of Moorhead and two sisters, Mrs. Thompson of Yorkton, Sask., and Mrs. Thilda Toften of Moorhead.

Nohre-Seaberg Wedding

A wedding of interest announced just recently to the bride's many friends here was that of Agnes Nohre, daughter of Mrs. Signe Nohre who was united in marriage to Frederic Seaberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Seaberg of Braham on Christmas Eve. The ceremony took place at six o'clock in front of a large decorated tree at the parsonage of St. Olaf's Lutheran church in Minneapolis with Rev. Berg officiating at a single ring ceremony.

The bride wore a white wool dress and a corsage of gladiolas. Her attendant, Mrs. John Veit of Minneapolis, sister of the groom, wore a navy blue dress and a corsage similiar to that of the bride. The groom was attended by his brother-in-law, John Veit.

Miss Vivian Seaberg, sister of the groom, served a wedding dinner to the bridat party at her apartment in South Minneapolis.

For their honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Seaberg spent ten days in the cities and at Holt.

Mrs. Seaberg is a graduate of the Bemidji State Teachers College and is at present teaching at Lake Itasca, this being her fourth year there. The bridegroom was medically discharged after serving over two years in the Navy.

Mr. and Mrs. Seaberg was given a wedding reception last Friday at the Nazareth church parlors. Many were present and a program was given and lunch was served.

Card Of Thanks

We wish to express our most sincere thanks to all our neighbors friends and relatives for the wedding reception given in our honor on April 7th. Many thanks to all for the cash purse and gifts presented to us, those who took part in the program and those in charge of the party.

Again - thank you!
Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Seaberg.

Oscar Erickson left Thursday for Bremerton, Wash., where he will be employed.

Many Farm Buildings Burned

The farm home of Mrs. John Engstrom was destroyed by fire on Monday. Mrs. Engstrom was alone at home and was out in the yard raking leaves when she discovered that the house was on fire. As far as can be ascertained the fire started from a faulty chimney. Mrs. Engstrom and son lost all their personal belongings and household goods.

A grass fire of unknown origin destroyed the farm buildings on the place known as the Adrian Lindholm farm on Tuesday afternoon. Ludvig Monson had purchased this farm recently with the intention of moving there, and the loss to him is great as he cannot put up another set of buildings in these times.

Several farmers have had close calls in burning their farm buildings the past week while burning grass and brush on their places.

A bad grass fire got out of control here on Tuesday and burned over the entire north end of the village and meadows of the Holst and Anderson farms.

RATIONING HELPS YOU in HOLT
To Win the War and Peace

Without rationing our Army and Navy could not get sufficient supplies of such scarce materials as gasoline and rubber. Military efforts would be crippled for lack of necessary foods, and every department of our war organization would be seriously impeded.

Rationing is the most efficient plan to insure everyone getting his share of the scarce commodities after supplies have been sent to the Armed Forces. It may be a lot of trouble to use stamps and tokens, but it means that you will never go into the store and have the butcher say, "Sorry, we have no meat at all today." You will always get your share.

If rationing were not in force, the whole cycle of inflation would be started, affecting everything the public buys, which would be destructive to our financial system and the individual.

So give ration stamps for every rationed article you buy. Remember, rationing is as important to our War Effort as speedy production is on the home front or high morale in the Army and Navy.

Bottles and cases are scarce, too. Be sure to return yours promptly.

Recommends 4-Fs for War Work

WELL, you never know when something you've bought may come in handy, especially in a motion picture studio. Paramount bought two rooms from the Hearst Collection when it was put on sale in New York, consisting of carved oak paneling of the 17th century, originally part of European castles. So—they were used as sets in "The Hitler Gang." They're the living room and library of the Nazi industrial magnate, Alfred Hugenberg, in the picture; Hitler comes to him seeking financial support.

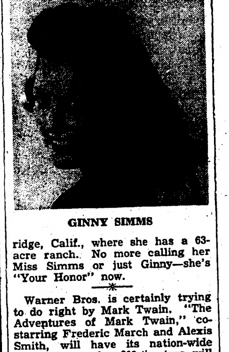
The cast of NBC's "Johnny Presents" has been having a bit of fun with Ginny Simms, we hear, since she has become mayor of Northridge, Calif., where she has a 63-acre ranch. No more calling her Miss Simms or just Ginny—she's "Your Honor" now.



GINNY SIMMS

Warner Bros. is certainly trying to do right by Mark Twain. "The Adventures of Mark Twain," co-starring Frederic March and Alexis Smith, will have its nation-wide debut in more than 200 theaters, will be shown at advanced prices for one week.

Those who have been confused by the conflicting stories coming out of South America can't afford to miss the March of Time's new release, "South American Front—1944." It tells, and shows, the truth about Argentine's so-called "palace revolution." It shows what an impressive amount of rubber, quartz, mica and tantalite were supplied us by Brazil, and how important was Brazil's grant of air bases.

Too bad everybody who listens to Joan Davis and Jack Haley on the air can't see them working—but it's a great break for the servicemen at the military posts where they've been broadcasting on their eastern trip. When Rudy Vallee went into the service radio wiseacres wondered if Joan could hold up the program that succeeded his; with the able assistance of Haley, the show has moved right into the top ranks.

Deafening noise was created on Vox Pop in a war plant the night Parks Johnson demonstrated the new army lip microphone, which permits distinguishable speech over disturbances. Later a worker who handled the rivet guns was heard talking to his wife over a pay station phone. "Did you hear that noise on the air?" he asked her. She evidently had. "Well," said he, "that was me."

For mystery fans; Republic's making "Secrets of Scotland Yard," with Edgar Barrier. International has signed Joan Bennett to play opposite Edward G. Robinson in "Once Off Guard." And Dick Powell gets the starring role in RKO's "Farewell My Lovely."

Jim Jordan Jr., son of Fibber McGee and Molly, has had his option lifted by RKO. Some months ago the studio signed him as a contract player, and while receiving dramatic training he has appeared in several pictures. Seems likely that he got some coaching at home, too.

Robert Livingstone, that gun-totin' hard-ridin' western star recently promoted to straight dramatic roles by Republic, had to take it on the chin from his western pals, who razzed him unmercifully after he had to wear a woman's coiffure and dresses in several scenes of "Goodnight, Sweetheart." His one consolation was that, as a female impersonator, he fooled Ruth Terry and Henry Hull, who appear with him.

ODDS AND ENDS—Production on "Casanova Brown" was temporarily halted recently—the star, Gary Cooper, was injured when he fell off a bicycle . . . RKO borrows lovely Ella Raines from Universal for the lead with John Wayne in "Tall in the Saddle" . . . Servicemen in hospitals want sheet music, says Frank Novak of "Hook 'n Ladder Follies," who's been entertaining them; he cleaned out his files and sent them plenty, now he's urging others to do the same . . . It's reported that 20th Century-Fox took a second look at Perry Como's screen tests and raised his pay from $25,000 a picture to $100,000 for his first three films.

Household Hints

Don't hang feather pillows in the sun as sunlight draws out the natural oil from the feathers and makes them less pliable.

Your sewing thread isn't so apt to knot if you use the correct length, say about 18 inches or the distance from the middle finger to the elbow.

Perhaps you can make that felt hat look new and smart by blanket-stitching around the edge of the brim with crochet thread in a contrasting color. Or a narrow crocheted edging might do the trick.

A wornout umbrella can be stripped and its frame put to use as a rack for drying smaller items of clothing. Wind strips of cloth around the ribs to prevent rust.

For attractive drawers that are easy to keep clean, such as drawers for knives and forks, use bright-colored paper (paper napkins will do) to line them and cover with waxed paper. The bright color shows through the waxed paper and makes the drawer look cleaner.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

The importance of the tire conservation program, effected in 1942, will be appreciated when it is known that the number of passenger car tires rationed and those sold on new cars in 1942 only equalled 8.8 per cent of the passenger car tires shipped for all purposes in 1941.

Neglected small tire tread cuts and bruises can become serious rubber wasters. A small cut, even though it does not go entirely through the fabric, lets in dirt, water and foreign matter. Constant flexing increases the size of the cut until the tire is beyond repair. Prompt repair is a patriotic duty these days.

U. S. Heavy Bombers Blast Balkans, Hammer German Industries in France; Jap Forces Advance in India Theater; Congress Studies New Draft Problems

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

EUROPE:

Aid Russ

With Allied troops in Great Britain poised for the jump into western Europe, U. S. bombers took to the air to blast the Balkans in conjunction with the Russian armies' advance into Rumania.

In the English Isles, an electrical tenseness was reported as Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's high command was said to have set the zero hour, and Allied planes continued to roar over the channel to blast Nazi defenses and industries in France and Germany.

As the Russians edged toward the vital Rumanian oil fields of Ploesti, U. S. bombers thundered over the city from the south to blast railway tank cars filled for the long haul to western Europe. U. S. bombers also dropped explosives on aircraft factories and railroad yards of the Hungarian capital of Budapest.

In Italy, heavy artillery bombardments punctuated bitter ground sparring below Rome at Anzio and Cassino.

Psychological War

Leaving no stone unturned, the Allies have been showering Axis Europe with propaganda leaflets as well as bombs in an effort to undermine German morale and encourage underground resistance in occupied countries.

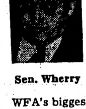
Flashy leaflets have told the Germans that their surrender during the last war left most of their industries intact, while continued resistance in this war will only result in the complete demolition of their factories. Other leaflets have condemned Nazi officials for failing to provide for evacuation of the civilian population from bombed areas.

Small newspapers dropped in France have informed the people of guerrilla activity, and of the Allied objectives in bombing Nazi targets in the country, while similar publications dumped over Holland have pointed up America's war effort and the heavy assaults on Berlin.

AGRICULTURE:

Egg Supports

To bolster sagging egg markets, War Food Administrator Marvin Jones told a group of mid-western senators led by Senator Wherry (Neb.), that WFA planned to support prices by purchases of from 27 to 32 cents per dozen in distressed areas where handlers paid producers a minimum of 26 cents a dozen.



Sen. Wherry

Declaring that the WFA's biggest problem was disposal of the eggs, Jones called upon the congressmen to support legislation for sale of perishable commodities below parity levels. At present, perishables cannot be sold at such prices until they evidence deterioration, with the result that rot often sets in, Jones said. If the civilian population would eat one more egg per week per person, the surplus egg problem would be largely solved, Jones added.

Although adequate storage space has been found for frozen eggs, Jones said, production has been influenced by manpower problems. Wherever possible, the government has increased its contracts for the product, he said.

Canadian Oats

Seeking to relieve the tight feed situation, the War Food administration has arranged for the importation of 20,000,000 bushels of Canadian oats by May 15 via rail and the Great Lakes.

Under the plan, U. S. railroads would immediately send 75 cars daily into the Canadian interior for the grain, with 25 more to be sent later, if domestic needs for the cars are not pressing. The rails would carry the oats to Duluth, whence they would be routed to Chicago and Toledo by boat. From 15 to 20 days generally would be requird for the round trip, officials estimated.

Because competitive bidding between the two cities would bring Canadian grain above the U. S. price ceiling, the Commodity Credit corporation might purchase the oats directly from Canada for resale at lower prices in the U. S.

GOP:

Willkie Quits

Stormy petrel of the Republican party since 1940, big, blustery Wendell Willkie withdrew his bid for leadership of the GOP, while New York's Gov. Thomas E. Dewey was assuming the position through a popular draft.

Willkie's sudden demise and Dewey's ascension were occasioned by progressive Wisconsin's elections for delegates to the Republican national convention in Chicago, June 26. Although Willkie actively campaigned through the state, he failed to win even one delegate, while Dewey, who had asked that his name be withdrawn from the election, won 18.

Since Wisconsin has long been noted for its liberalism, Willkie deliberately selected it as the grounds for a test of Republican sentiment, basing his bid for delegates on a program for heavier war sacrifices and extensive U. S. cooperation in world affairs.

DRAFT:

26-29 Next

Both selective service and congress struggled over the problem of supplying the military services with younger men and maintaining record war production, with continued emphasis on shifting 4-Fs in unimportant work to essential occupations.

Referring to the decision to only defer key industrial and agricultural workers in the 18 to 25 age group, Draft Director Lewis B. Hershey declared that the same policy would next be extended to the 26 to 29 class.

In seeking to channel 4-Fs into necessary work, the house military affairs committee called upon selective service to obtain a list of essential occupations and manpower shortage areas for use in guiding the employment of 4Fs, who would face induction into a labor battalion if failing to take vital jobs.

State Inductions

With 1,265,000 men, New York is scheduled to lead the states in the number of soldiers and sailors to be inducted by July 1, with Pennsylvania with 904,000, and Illinois with 700,000, ranking second and third.

Other states with high totals include California with 667,000; Ohio with 610,000; Texas with 554,000, and Michigan with 452,000.

Nevada with 11,000 is scheduled to contribute the smallest amount of men, with Wyoming and Delaware with 23,000, the next lowest.

PACIFIC:

Eye Stilwell

While U. S. bombers continued to pummel Jap defense outposts in the Pacific, British troops strived desperately to check the enemy's stubborn advance toward the American operated Bengal-Assam railroad, 80 miles within India.

Working over the whole Jap outpost system in the Pacific, navy fliers pounded the enemy's storage and defense installations on Truk in the Carolines, while army airmen repeated heavy attacks on the Nips' supply base of Hollandia in New Guinea, feeder point for barges operating along the coastline.

Seeking to cut the Assam-Bengal railway feeding Lieut. Gen. Joseph Stilwell's U. S.-Chinese troops fighting to carve out a new supply road to China in northern Burma, the Jap attack in India was concentrated in the rugged hills above Imphal.

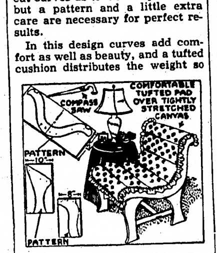
Comfortable Chair Is Easy to Make

PERHAPS you've made lawn chairs with straight cuts of the handsaw. It is almost as easy to cut curves as to make square cuts but a pattern and a little extra care are necessary for perfect results.

In this design curves add comfort as well as beauty, and a tufted cushion distributes the weight so that springs are not missed so much. The curved pieces are shown at the left.



You can see how easy they are to cut out of odds and ends of one-inch lumber that you may have on hand or can get at the nearest lumber dealer. The reinforcing pieces are all square cuts.

Aircraft Cannon

The largest gun to be mounted successfully in a warplane is a new 75-mm. (3-inch) cannon whose caliber is nearly double that of the 40-mm. aircraft gun which was the biggest before it, says Collier's.

Now being installed in the B-25 Mitchells, this cannon is 9½ feet long, has a recoil of 21 inches and fires a 20-pound shell, a single one of which recently destroyed an antiaircraft battery and killed all its men.

Pyramids Built of Shells; Sphinx of Same Formation

Although Egypt's famed pyramids are made of blocks of stone, the stones themselves are composed of the shells of tiny animals, taken from a quarry in a land which had been under the sea many ages before.

The great Sphinx near Cairo came from limestone of the same type but was not built up from blocks. It was formed chiefly from a mass of stone which stood at the spot where it was carved.

REMEMBER THE BUTTER MOM MADE

THE OLD BARREL CHURN . . . thick, sour cream . . . . and the feeling, "We were lucky today," wheh butter formed after only a brief period of churning . . . those were the days when mom made the butter.

REMEMBER how mom traded her crocks of butter for groceries at the country store? Sometimes she got a little "change" to put in the old cup back in the corner on the pantry shelf . . . cash for something special, like a new gingham dress. Mom wasn't in a position to bargain with the grocer. She took his price. Butter was just butter in those days.

BUT HERE IN THE NORTHWEST Land O'Lakes Creameries, turning out butter of unequalled quality, have displaced the old-fashioned churn . . . all within the memory of thousands of present-day farmers. Efficiency of production and quality of product far exceed anything thought possible only a few decades ago.

EVEN GREATER STRIDES have been made in sales methods. Land O'Lakes as a great marketing agency, has achieved exceptional success in returning a maximum percentage of the consumer's dollar to the dairy farmer members of Land O'Lakes Creameries.

BACK THE INVASION

Railroads must have more men—more women.

As preparations go forward for the decisive assault on Hitler's Fortress of Europe, greater tonnages of war freight must be delivered on schedule to ports of embarkation. Troops must be moved swiftly and safely. The flow of materials to war industries must continue without interruption.

To do this job, railroads must have more men—more women.

6,000 Great Northern employees are in the Armed Services—most of them experienced railroad workers. All railroads are operating under similar handicaps—while handling more than twice the volume of traffic moved during the first World War. And the peak demand is still ahead.

Draft boards, as a whole, appreciate the importance of railroad jobs—have been cooperative. But to meet their quotas they have had to take men whom the railroads could ill afford to lose.

These employees must be replaced by other men and women who are not presently employed in war industries at their highest skills or in the production of food and other necessities.

Invasion days will be anxious days. They will be days when every true American will want to be doing something to support the sons, brothers, fathers and friends who will be fighting for footholds on Hitler's shores.

Back the invasion with a railroad job—a job with action.

Many jobs are open to men and women who have had no previous railroad experience.

Minnesota Conservation Week

Governor Edward J. Thye has designated May 1 to 7 as Minnesota Conservation Week, with Arbor and Bird Day falling on May 5.

Pointing out that the natural resources of Minnesota are providing many raw materials whose strength is being exerted along the world's battlefronts," the proclamation asserts that in view of the role that natural resources are playing in this war, as well as their importance in the rehabilitation period following the war, "it behooves every citizen to make certain that both our renewable and non-renewable resources are utilized intelligently and without waste."

The Minnesota Department of Conservation is promoting statewide observance of Conservation Week. Chester S. Wilson, commissioner of conservation, urges all schools and other interested public agencies and all groups concerned with conservation to observe the week by sponsoring school assemblies, tree planting ceremonies, public meetings, and other events that will emphasize the singular importance of conservation during war-time.

Miss Ellen Rostvold of Grygla and Mr. Oscar Anderson of Middle River were married at the parsonage on Saturday.

Hartley Peterson is having a nice addition built onto the telephone office here for living quarters. Walter Wegge is doing the work.

Mike Fricker of St. Hilaire arrived here Saturday from Denver, Colorado, where he has spent the winter. He is visiting at the hnme of Mr. and Mrs. Geo Fricker.

WOMEN AT WAR

Leonora

Leonora straightened the objects on her desk with great care. She had put her desk at the end of her room facing the door so that when her mother came in she would have to cross the whole room under Leonora's stern executive eye to get to her. From movies and pictures in the newspapers Leonora had gotten a good idea of how the desk of a busy woman of affairs should look.

With an important scowl, Leonora picked up a sheet of paper. Now she was two people—herself, the busy woman, and her own stenographer. "Miss Simpkins, take a letter to the Secretary of the Treasury, will you?" she murmured under her breath.

"Yes, immediately," she murmured back at herself.

Leonora cleared her throat and looked at the ceiling for inspiration. Miss Simpkins bent over the sheet of paper hanging on the words about to fall.

"Dear Mr. Morgenthau," — "Got that?" — "Yes, madam."

"I am — ahem — thirteen years old and anxious to be of all possible service to the country at this time, ahem!

"I earn a weekly income of from $1.37 to $2.12 by helping with the housework and by shovelling snow. I am at present in possession of one War Savings Bond and am buying stamps weekly. I want to become a member of the 10 percent Club. I feel it to be — ahem — not only my duty, but my privilege' ("How do you spell privilege?" asked Miss Simpkins. "Don't bother me with these details," said Leonora)—my privilege as an American to invest at least ten percent of my income in War Bonds.

Yours truly,"

"Get that off at once, Miss Simpkins," said Leonora. "Yes, Ma'am! You certainly are an important woman, ma'am," said Miss Simpkins.

More Germs Are Useful To Man Than Otherwise

Germs are living things, eating and drinking, moving and reproducing just like human beings. As dogs come only from dogs, so germs come only from other germs like themselves. Someone, working out their rate of reproduction, computed that one germ can become seventeen million germs in eight hours. Germs are the smallest living things. Five thousand of them end on end would scarcely measure an inch.

Most germs are useful germs; indeed, the world could not go on without them. They break up the things we have finished with—the leaves, the dead animals—and send them back to the soil. They are the scavengers of life. The war against germs is a war against a minority of disease germs, not a majority of useful germs.

"I STOPPED DOSING MY CONSTIPATION A YEAR AGO!"

Says Happy KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN User

If you are still dosing your constipation, don't fail to read this unsolicited letter!

"I'd been troubled with common constipation for years. Tried many kinds of medicines for it. Then, just about a year ago, I tried KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN. I ate it regularly, without missing a day. It helped so much, I have not taken one dose of medicine for constipation since, nor have I confined myself to any diet!" Mr. S. P. Loebe, Charleston, Missouri.

Sounds like magic, doesn't it? But, scientists say, KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN can really "get at" a common cause of constipation — lack of dietary "cellulosic" elements—because it is one of Nature's most effective sources of these elements! They help the friendly colonic flora fluff up and prepare the colonic contents for easy elimination. KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN is not a purgative! Doesn't "sweep you out"! It's a gentle-acting, "regulating" food!

If you have constipation of this kind, eat KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN, or several ALL-BRAN muffins regularly. Drink plenty of water. See if you don't find real relief. Insist on genuine ALL-BRAN, made only by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Navigation is impossible even for a canoe on some of the tiny branches in the Amazon headwaters in the remote Bolivia rubber country. Air transport is now serving in the rubber development in these areas. Tappers cut their way through the jungle, with from 100 to 150 wild rubber trees serving as each tapper's route.

Tire experts hold that greater mileages are returned from truck tires if, when they are new, they are "broken in" for several thousand miles under normal or sub-normal conditions. Using new tires on front wheels before shifting them to the rear is one way of "seasoning" tires.

Russian Blitz Clears Crimea Path as Allied Bombers Pound Western Europe; 'Stop Aiding Nazis' Neutrals Warned; Japs Press 3-Pronged Drive in India

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Italy—New Zealand troops close on German sniper in Cassino ruins.

EUROPE:

Invasion Path

While Russia's land armies carried the war into the Balkans, Allied bombers continued pounding Axis military and industrial installations throughout Fortress Europe, concentrating on the invasion path in the west.

As the Russians stormed into Rumania, other Red forces drove ahead in the Crimea, huge chunk of land thrust into the Black sea and guarding the water route to the eastern Balkans. As the Russians approached the Rumanian rail junction of Jassi, they encountered stiffening resistance from native troops, fighting by the side of German soldiers, strengthened by shorter defense lines.

In continuing their whirlwind assaults to smoothen an invasion path, Allied bombers struck at airfields, railroad junctions and military defenses throughout the French and Belgium area. Far to the southeast, U. S. bombers based in Italy hammered Nazi airplane factories in the Vienna and Budapest regions. In ground fighting below Rome, both sides were reported making extensive troop movements in preparation for a resumption of bitter fighting.

Warn Neutrals

Having suspended oil shipments to Spain and announced restriction of steamship service to Ireland, Great Britain and the U. S. next demanded termination of Sweden's ball-bearing trade with Germany in a determined campaign to halt the neutral countries' commerce with Axis Europe.

At the same time, it was announced that the Allies would look into Turkey's increased chrome shipments to Germany during the last three months, with a view toward limiting the traffic through a curtailment of our own trade with the Turks, whose lend-lease aid already has been cut down.

In hearing the Allies' demands, the Swedes said they were in no position to comply without breaking their formal agreement with Germany, which, they said, the Allies approved last September. Although there was objection to the ball-bearing shipments, Sweden's iron ore deliveries to the Nazis were not emphasized.

WOOL:

Big Stocks

With an all-high stock of foreign and U. S. wool, the Commodity Credit corporation was directed to go into the market to support the 1944 domestic clip estimated at 450,000,000 pounds.

Whereas U. S. stocks stand at record levels today, there were prospects of serious shortages when the Japs launched their South Pacific drive, threatening the Australian and New Zealand producing areas. Approximately 400,000,000 pounds of foreign wool is now owned by this country, with the Defense Supplies corporation holding 330,000,000 pounds and dealers and manufacturers the rest. At the same time, 550,000,000 pounds, is being held in this country for British account.

Because the U. S. clip sells about 18 cents a pound above foreign wool, the CCC has encountered difficulty disposing of the domestic stock, although the army now specifies its use in purchases and about 10 per cent of navy orders are expected to call for it.

PACIFIC:

India Threatened

With their backs against the rugged slopes of the Naga hills in central India, British and Indian troops fought desperately against persistent Japanese attempts to cut off their supply lines and entrap them in a huge pocket.

While the British and Indians were locked in their death struggle, U. S. bombers operated over a wide range in the Pacific, blasting Japanese installations in the Kurile islands, strung out to the north of Nippon, and plastering enemy bases on New Guinea, as part of the grand strategy to wipe out their strongholds on this flank of the Philippines.

In India, the Japs' continuing three-pronged drive pressed against British and Indian supply routes running both north and south and also to the west to the Assam-Bengal railroad, used to feed Lieut. Gen. Joseph Stilwell's American and Chinese troops clearing a communications highway in northern Burma to China.

INDUSTRY:

Postwar Reserves

Looking forward toward the problems of postwar readjustment, U. S. industry has set aside hundreds of millions of dollars out of profits for switching back to civilian production, rebuilding plants or providing lay-off payments to workers during the period of change.

To meet the emergency, United States Steel company has established a nest egg of $104,153,557; General Motors, $76,051,805; General Electric, $73,562,337; E. I. Du Pont, $31,613,430; Sears, Roebuck, $28,500,000; United Aircraft, $28,004,464; International Harvester, $20,000,000; Goodyear Tire and Rubber company, $15,462,912; Borden company, $11,305,185; National Dairy Products, $10,000,000, and General Foods, $4,492,712.

Since such reserves cannot be taken out of income before taxes like deductions for depreciation, debt retirement and depletion, they must be put aside out of industry's profits.

Economic Protection

To prevent a repetition of the widespread bankruptcies and foreclosures which followed World War I, the Commodity Credit corporation is empowered to make loans at 90 per cent of parity on basic crops for two years after the end of hostilities, War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes declared.

James Byrnes

While outlining the protection for farmers, Byrnes also proposed to help labor laid off from slackening war industries, through a system of federal unemployment benefits to be paid in addition to regular state payments. To relieve the problem of future unemployment, Byrnes suggested that workers be shifted from lagging war plants to busier ones now while jobs were available.

Byrnes advocated legislation for quick settlement of cancelled war contracts to aid industry in the reconversion to civilian production, and he also called for congressional action to facilitate the orderly disposal of surplus war goods without disruption of regular markets.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

EGGS: Another record in egg production was turned in by America's hard-working hens during March, the third consecutive month of all-time highs. There were 6,763,000,000 eggs laid last month, 4 per cent above March last year and 49 per cent over the ten-year average, 1933-42. Number of laying hens increased 5 per cent from March, 1943, to 433,985,000.

MIDGET FURNACE: A tiny furnace, weighing only 21 pounds, may be sufficient to heat a 20-room house, if a new type of heating unit now used only in military aircraft can be applied to homes. The little furnaces would be only about the size of a waste basket and would cost about $50. Demonstration models have given encouraging results it was said.

If you know a Navy man, don't ever call him a "gob"—sailors consider the name an insult. You can get on the right side of him though if you offer him a Camel—or better yet, send him a carton. Camels are the favorite cigarette with men in the Navy (Army, Marines, Coast Guard, too, for that matter) based on actual sales records from the service men's stores. And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S., and to men in the Navy, Marines and Coast Guard wherever they are.—Adv.

Sheep in Near East Need Cart to Carry Heavy Tail

Do you know that in the Near East there are sheep whose tails are so large and ponderous that the animals are provided with small four-wheeled carriages in order to relieve the weight of the tail and prevent it from coming into contact with the ground?

The oriental passion for greasy foods has led to the development of this type of sheep in which the fattest portion of the animal, the tail, combines excessive adiposity with enormous length.

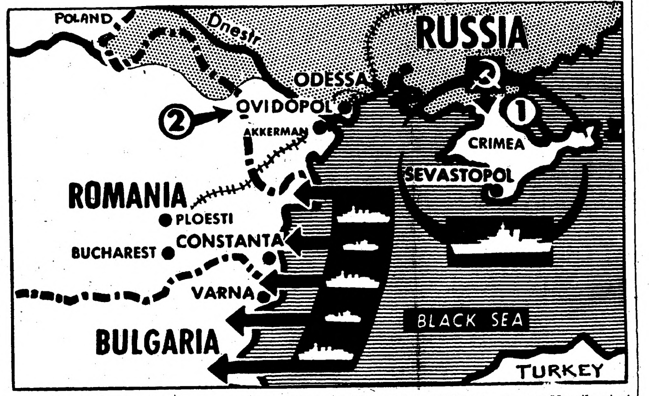
Red Land and Sea Moves Mapped After Odessa



Swift and dramatic strokes came in the wake of the great Red victory at Odessa. By a sudden thrust at the Perekop isthmus the Russ had undertaken a move to cut off Crimea and gain Sevastopol. Action from sea, as well as land, was expected along the Romanian and Bulgarian coasts as well, following the Crimea offensive. Ships of the Black sea fleet had stood by for amphibious operations. Another move was a quick dash which cut the rail line at Ovidopol to trap Nazi forces hoping to escape.

Sprinkle a little talcum powder on ribbon knots that are hard to loosen and they will untie much easier.

If dish towels are rinsed thoroughly each day, they'll be sweeter, whiter and easier to launder.

Brooms get bowlegged if allowed to stand right side up. Hang up or stand upside down. Small screw-eyes on handles make hanging more convenient.

Breads or rolls may be made to taste fresh by moistening them slightly and heating them in a moderately hot oven.

When making over clothing, the first thing to consider is whether the material is in sufficiently good condition to justify the amount of time you will spend on it. Woolen material may frequently be turned and used on the wrong side. Small holes or tears may be neatly darned or covered with a bit of decoration, embroidered or appliqued.

Time to Band Trees

THIS is the time of the year when Victory gardeners, shade tree owners and commercial growers should be reminded to protect their trees and vines against the ravages of tree-climbing insects whose larvae will manifest themselves later on as the worms and caterpillars which often completely defoliate trees, destroy fruit, cause serious tree damage. Banding of trees which have not been infested with a sticky substance that will retain its consistency under all weather conditions is good protection and very much worthwhile. This should be done as early as possible.

REMEMBER THE BUTTER MOM MADE

THE OLD BARREL CHURN . . . thick, sour cream . . . . and the feeling, "We were lucky today," wheh butter formed after only a brief period of churning . . . those were the days when mom made the butter.

REMEMBER how mom traded her crocks of butter for groceries at the country store? Sometimes she got a little "change" to put in the old cup back in the corner on the pantry shelf . . . cash for something special, like a new gingham dress. Mom wasn't in a position to bargain with the grocer. She took his price. Butter was just butter in those days.

BUT HERE IN THE NORTHWEST Land O'Lakes Creameries, turning out butter of unequalled quality, have displaced the old-fashioned churn . . . all within the memory of thousands of present-day farmers. Efficiency of production and quality of product far exceed anything thought possible only a few decades ago.

EVEN GREATER STRIDES have been made in sales methods. Land O' Lakes as a great marketing agency, has achieved exceptional success in returning a maximum percentage of the consumer's dollar to the dairy farmer members of Land O'Lakes Creameries.

Holt School Notes

High School

The fifth period of the school year ended on the 21st; period exams have been given, and classes are reviewing in preparation for the final period exams which will come at the end of May.

Mr. Weltzin, formerly superintendent of schools in Warren, but now an inspector in the State Department of Education, made us an official visit last Wednesday. While recommending some replacements in certain grade and high school text. Mr. Weltzin was pleased with the administration of the school and the work of every teacher. Even the janitor received just praise. The inspector complemented the school on its splendid equipment for visual instruction as well as its well equipped science labratory.

On account of several makeup tests report cards will not be issued until Friday. Class averages and other comments will be given in next week's News.

The Juniors have decided on a class play which has the title "America First". It is a comedy drama in three acts.

The entertainment which was well attended, the net proceeds being $37.00. This has been placed in the carnival fund. The program was very well rendered and proved to be very pleasing to the audience. Pupils from all grades took part and very well. The hit of the evening was the "Ladies Aid" conducted very efficiently by six ladies of the community.

Seventh, Eighth

Mae Fluke was absent from school Monday and Tuesday due to illness.

The Eighth grade began using their new review booklets this week.

Both Seventh and Eighth grades have completed a study of their words covered by their spelling tests.

Delores Sandberg scored highest in reading tests given last week. Shirley Larson scored highest the previous week.

Fourth, Fifth, Sixth

In our health classes we are studying first aid.

We made May baskets on Thursday.

Those who wrote perfect spelling papers last week were: Ruth Larson, Betty Ness, Evelyn Wegge, Gloria Johnson, Vernon Larson, Donna Hanson, Arthur Peterson, Dorothy Sagstuen, George Fricker and Emery Horien.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY GEORGE S. BENSON
President, Harding College
Searcy, Arkansas

Back Congress

If news of military success influences our people as I trust it will, the Fourth War Loan drive will proceed with more enthusiasm and succeed easier than the other three. There is never a reason to wonder if the American people will support a patriotic cause with financial force. But, aside from patriotism, buying bonds is good business and my wish is that the benefits could be more generally distributed.

There are two possible changes in the over-all war-loan picture which I know would benefit a lot of people and I sincerely believe they both would improve bond sales. (1) A serious effort ought to be made to sell bonds to more people in the low-income brackets. (2) The bonds themselves ought to be of smaller dimensions, which may sound like a trivial comment, but it is not.

Reasons for Both

It would be possible to write a book full of reasons why bonds should be sold to poor people as well as to relatively well-to-do folk and banks. The first reason is that there are infinitely more poor people, and their purchases amount to a lot more. Second, too many people with their first well-paying jobs are spending money foolishly and hastening inflation. Third, poor people are going to need money after this war.

The bonds themselves ought to be smaller in size because small bonds cost less, and people who pay taxes this year deserve every economy they can be afforded. As a matter of fact, I was disappointed when bonds from the Third War Loan appeared in such ungainly size and shape. If it is safe to print a $100 bill 3 x 5 inches, surely a $25 bond does not need to be as big as a high school diploma.

Chance for Economy

Congressman Charles S. Dewey of Illinois, as long ago as May, 1943, made it very clear to everybody in Washington who attended his words that literally millions of dollars could be saved by printing smaller bonds. There are some exceptionally wise men in Congress. In most cases the title "Honorable" is as appropriate as it is proper. Congressmen are head-and-shoulder above the electorate or somebody else would have their seats, and Rep. Dewey won my esteem with one short talk, a talk on Government Economy.

When Calvin Coolidge was President, Mr. Dewey was Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, charged with supervising the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, which was a figurative headache to all concerned. The routine remedy recommended was to spend $10,000,000 for additional printing equipment in order to increase the plant's output of paper money 50 percent as demand seemed to require, but Coolidge said, "No." Then again did Mother Necessity bring forth an invention, and Mr. Dewey found a better way.

Support Good Men

What did he do? He figured out a system of printing 12 bills with a plate such as formerly printed only eight, and there was the 50 percent gain in output. Economy in paper, ink and shipping charges started right away saving two million dollars a year besides the original ten million dollars. And last Spring Mr. Dewey recommended that something of the same sort be done about printing bonds. His technical experience is an asset to the nation, and I think he ought to be heard and heeded. I believe he will ultimately be heard.

Congress is not the Puppet Show for the amusement of bureaucracy that it was a year ago. This column, released January 6, 1943, fairly gurgled over the fact that Congress had shown a mind of its own, a boast which later events have justified. Congress has lifted the old guidon boldly and made its power felt and understood.

Within the last 30 days this column has told of work directed by farseeing Senator George of Georgia, and Representative May of Kentucky, both concerned with post-war plans for prosperity. Our 1944 resolution should be to watch our good men and back their suggestions, those like the one made by Congressman Dewey.

Dwarf and Midget

The public health service says that there is no difference between a dwarf and a midget so far as the human species is concerned. The term dwarf applies to other species besides human beings. The term midget is applied only to human beings. The term dwarf is generally considered a more scientific term than midget.

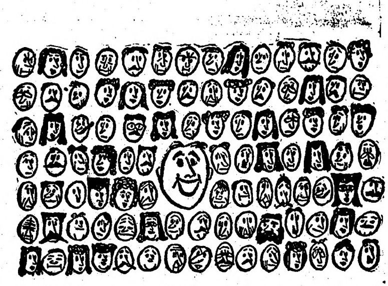
"Trade and Save At CARLSON'S"

Holt, Minnesota. A. W. Carlson, Proprietor

Only I in 100 would know!



We were going to make a survey, 100 interviews. Then we had a better idea.

"Why bother all those busy people? Probably not more than one of them would know the answer, because it's something they take for granted . . . Let's just print it here and save a lot of time!"

So here's the question: "What's the smallest item and BIGGEST bargain in most family budgets?"

And here's the answer in one word: "Electricity."

Look at the last item in these recent cost-of-living figures from the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics (reprinted at lower right). Considering how many household jobs electricity does daily, that's a rather startling statistic.

Then remember that electricity is still sold at pre-war prices—remember that the average U. S. family gets about twice as much electricity for its money as it did 15 years ago—and you'll realize that there's no bigger bargain today!

Of course, if you already knew all this, you're that one in a hundred.

Footprints on the Sands of Time

The past record of a man or an institution is a reliable omen of the present or future. A long record of reliable, honest and sincere service, are factors that make up a past that can truly be pointed to with pride, these are "footprints" that lead to success.

The past record of this paper is our strongest recommendation.

We today pass into another stretce of time, having started Volume No. 34 and hope that we have so served our readers and advertiser that me may merit your continued support in this field of business here.

Fire Damaged Wildlife Refuge

One of the biggest grass and brush fires to rage in this area, broke out near ditch 20 on Friday and burned thru the wilderness area up to ditch 200 southeast of the Mrs. M. Sampson and Julian Rodahl farms. The wind was so strong from the southeast at the time that the heavy fire blew over ditch 200 and came in on the south edge of the Mud Lake Wildlife Refuge and burned in on that until it came up to the main gravel road going east thru the reserve. Mr. Vogen and his staff at Mud Lake were able to make firebreak and check it out only a short distance from headquartersand kept the huge fire from burning all the way east on the south part of the refuge. It is unfortunate that someone set such fires as they destroyed a lot of nice new timber on the reserve and also ruined the cover for hundreds of upland birds and game. Only last fall, Mr. Vogen, manager of the Mud Lake Refuge, and his men there had to spend many days and nights in fighting a big fire that broke in on the refuge from the east and burned over a lot of the north part fo it and destroyed game cover and timber growth.

Within the next few days Hjalmer Johnson expects to start his sawmill humming. He is now installing the machinery for spring operation.

The Weather

The weather the past week has been cloudy and cool. Tuesday evening a steady drizzle of rain set in which kept up all day Wednesday. Late Wednesday the weather cooled and the rain turned to light snow with a forty mile wind coming in from the northwest. We had snow flurries and strong cold wind all day Thurday with freezing temperature. Most of the seeding has been done around here and the rain was needed.

Next Tuesday, May 9, there will be a big farm sale here when Carl O. Olson will sell out his farm machinery and livestock on his farm northeast of Holt. Read his sale ad on the back page.

DO YOU have a large wall space somewhere in your house that looks rather bare? Why not fill it with a group of matched brackets on which you may make an attractive arrangement of bric-a-brac and trailing vines?

This sketch shows a set of three brackets in a quaint old-fashioned heart design over a davenport in the living room. The center bracket is fourteen inches wide with one of the matching smaller brackets on each side. A school boy who has the use of a coping saw or maybe a jig saw may make these graceful brackets.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

A researcher in things rubber reported that in 1858 the trade in rubber products ran between four and five million dollars annually and the industry employed 10,000 workers. Vulcanization had been known less than 20 years then.

The extra man-hours required in the manufacture of heavy tires for military airplanes, trucks, combat vehicles and for civilian trucks, buses and farm tractors mean that the major share of the tire-building manpower and facilities available must be devoted to this job, in the opinion of John L. Collyer, B. F. Goodrich president. These are the essential needs from a current tire standpoint.

Unending Allied Air Offensive Blasts Nazi's Western Defenses, Railroads; Lag Seen in Farm Machinery Output; Dutch East Indies Bombed by British

EUROPE:

Unending Raids

An unending procession of U. S. and British bombers soared over western Europe blasting the invasion path, while in the Balkans to the southeast, Axis forces went over to the attack to shore up the Russians' drive on Rumania and Hungary.

Big bombers, medium bombers and strafing fighter planes all participated in the Allied aerial attacks on France, the Lowlands and Germany, with rail communications leading to the invasion coast and airports and aircraft factories the principal targets. In one 36-hour period alone, Allied aviators made no less than 6,000 individual flights over the west.

Axis counterattacks in the Balkans took form as the Russians advanced on Carpathian mountain passes leading into the rolling Hungarian plains, and other Red forces threatened the rich Rumanian oil fields around Ploesti. In the Crimean peninsula jutting into the Black sea, Russian forces laid siege to the big naval base of Sevastopol, where Axis troops flocked after a lengthy retreat.

Demand Loyalty

Hermann Goering

As western Europe crackled under the Allies' savage bombing offensive to clear the invasion path, Nazi No. 2 Hermann Goering and Nazi No. 3 Joseph Goebbels used Hitler's 55th birthday to loudly appeal to the German people for unquestioned loyalty during the hectic period to follow.

Said Goering: "A thousand dangers may lie ahead . . . New anxieties and burdens may prove inevitable . . . No sacrifice and no privation should be too great to make for Germany . . . Our gift to the fuehrer is our vow not to lay down arms until we have assured the Reich's future."

Said Goebbels: " . . . Even the greatest leaders of history will be faced with occasional setbacks and defeats . . . It will not be possible to form an accurate and just idea of the individual war events and factors which have been decisive in the war until the war is over . . . So to serve our aims means to be loyal to the fuehrer and to follow him through all the storms of war. . ."

FOREIGN HOLDINGS:

U. S. Stake

After a canvass of more than 200,000 individuals, estates and trusts, and 16,000 business firms, the U. S. Treasury established American holdings in more than 50 foreign countries at $13,300,000,000.

Although two-thirds of the holdings of household goods, bonds and factories are in Allied or friendly nations, U. S. national's stake in Axis or occupied countries totals $3,775,000,000, of which $1,290,000,000 is in Germany, $265,000,000 in Italy, $90,000,000 in Japan, $65,000,000 in Rumania and $55,000,000 in Hungary.

By far the largest U. S. investments are in Canada, aggregating $4,375,000,000 and holdings in Great Britain total $1,030,000,000. Investments in Cuba amount to $785,000,000; Mexico, $420,000,000; Argentina, $355,000,000, and Brazil, $330,000,000.

MANPOWER:

Biggest Problem

During 1944, manpower and not material will constitute the biggest obstacles to resumption of the production of civilian goods, the War Production board's planning and statistical chief, Stacy May, revealed.

Although reductions in certain munitions programs may reach considerable proportions toward the end of 1944, the question of converting facilities to the manufacture of civilian goods will revolve around the army's call for manpower for casualty replacements, May said. Because of declines in construction employment and increasing efficiency in factories, however, more workers may be made available for consumer goods, May declared.

Sufficient steel, aluminum and copper probably could be obtained for civilian production later in the year, May said, but shortages of necessary parts or accessories might form serious bottlenecks.

PACIFIC:

Raid Treasure-House

Storehouse for Japanese oil, tin and rubber, the Dutch East Indies were hit by British bombers for the first time in nearly a year and a half, with docks, warehouses and shipping left in flames in the northern end of the islands.

While the bombers whacked at this treasure-house of natural resources which have fed the Japs' industrial sinews of war, British and Indian troops continued their desperate defense of the Bengal-Assam railroad in eastern India, feeding U. S. and Chinese forces hacking out a supply road to China in northern Burma.

In the South Pacific area, U. S. army and navy bombers teamed up to plaster the Japs' Caroline islands, gateway to the inner approaches of the enemy's principal Asiatic holdings.

AGRICULTURE:

Machinery

Because of the necessity of stepping up production of landing barges and other invasion craft demanding critical material, farm machinery output this year may not reach expected levels, War Food Administrator Marvin Jones revealed.

Although too early to make predictions, Jones said, machinery output should exceed 1940 figures. None has been allocated to the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation administration or for export, he said.

As of April 1, Jones revealed, machinery production totaled 36,000 combines, 9,000 balers, 23,000 side rakes, 44,000 spreaders, 121,000 tractors and 15,000 cornpickers.

Labor

At a time when Selective Service was tightening up on farm deferments, the U. S. department of agriculture reported that farm workers as of April 1 totaled 9,080,000, or about 228,000 less than a year ago.

With a better organized farm labor program and seasonal help from volunteer workers, however, the USDA expected rural America to meet this year's expanded food goals despite the inroads into help.

Although only 2 per cent lower than April, 1943, the farm labor supply was 54 per cent of the prewar average, the USDA declared.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

PROFITS: The meat packing industry had a net income of only 1.1 per cent on sales in 1943, the lowest for any major manufacturing industry, the American Meat institute reports.

BANANAS: Shortage of shipping between South American and United States ports is seriously handicapping importation of bananas, trade officials say.

HERO: In a curious case of a marine hero, who is also a deserter from the marines and the army, First Class Private William B. Murphee of Tennessee left the army after nearly six years of service and then joined the marines to win the navy cross as a member of Carlson's Raiders. Walking away from a marine hospital, he was later detained and held for discipline.

GOP:

Keynoter Named

Selection of Gov. Earl Warren of California as opening speaker, or keynoter, at the Republican national convention in Chicago, June 24, has served to modulate the extreme nationalist and internationalist elements in the party.

Brawny, 6-foot Governor Warren, who first jumped into the political spotlight on the west coast through his racket-busting, stands by the GOP's Mackinac declaration on foreign policy, stressing international cooperation with other nations without impairing U. S. sovereignty.

Said Warren: "As Republicans, we must avoid discord that would interfere with our displacing the White House palace guard with an administration more competent to win the war and solve our postwar problems, domestic and foreign."

LEND-LEASE:

Extension Debated

With congress considering extension of lend-lease until June 30, 1945, debate centered around subjecting the President's final settlements with foreign recipients to legislative scrutiny.

Under terms of the lend-lease measure, the President had sole authority to make final settlements, but in extending the act to 1945, the house wrote in an amendment which prohibits him from negotiating final settlements involving international committments without congressional approval.

During the course of house debate on the new measure which was sent to the senate by a 334 to 21 vote, the majority killed Republican efforts to compel foreign nations to return lend-lease munitions to the U. S. after the war.

PLAY BALL:

Majors Open

More than 123,000 fans were on hand to witness the opening of the 1944 major league baseball season, with the largest crowd of 30,154 watching the Chicago Cubs spank the Cincinnati Reds, 3 to 0, at Cincinnati, and the smallest of 4,030 watching the St. Louis Cardinals blank the Pittsburgh Pirates, 2 to 0, at St. Louis.

The New York Yankees' Johnny Lindell drove out the majors' first home run against the Boston Red Sox to lead his team to a 3 to 0 victory, and the Philadelphia Athletics and Washington Senators played the first extra inning game, with the A's winning in the 12th, 3 to 2, when Rookie Erwin Hall doubled home Babe Siebert.

STRIKES:

In U. S., Canada

Strikes at Montgomery Ward and company and the Ford Motor company of Canada crowded the labor spotlight.

At Ward's, the nation's No. 2 mail order house, the company resumed shipment of freight and parcel post after railroad and teamster unions had tied up deliveries in sympathy with the CIO's United Mail Order, Warehouse and Retail Employees union, which struck over the firm's refusal to extend a bargaining contract upon order of the War Labor board.

About 14,000 employees of the Ford company's Canadian plants remained idle after a walkout in protest over the firm's discharge of CIO stewards for investigating members' grievances during working hours, and the company's subsequent cancellation of the union's contract.

SOLDIERS' WIVES:

Arrive in U. S.

Anxious to look over their new homeland, 90 Australian brides or fiancees of American soldiers arrived in the U. S. from "Down Under," with one expressing the belief that if they got good Irish stew now and then, they should learn to get along.

Wife of a marine corporal from Shinnston, W. Va., Mrs. Doris Jean Lebash, said: "The American boys . . . bluntly told some of us, we in Australia were 10 years behind the times. They told us we couldn't wear American clothes, and that we'd never see such beautiful girls as we'd see in this country."

Australian wives of U. S. soldiers may apply for citizenship after two years. Any of their children born overseas automatically become citizens with five years residence under the U. S. flag.

G. I. BOARD

It is costing the government less this year to provide "board and room" for the millions of enlisted men in the army. Economies have trimmed the annual expenditure to an estimated $465.06 this year.

The estimated figures include $215.35 for food, $173.70 for clothing, $44.70 for individual equipment (excepting arms and ammunition), and $31.31 for barracks equipment. Production costs on many items supplied by contractors have been reduced.

Speaking of Sports

by Bob McShane

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

THE current season's most unpleasant task confronts us, so in deference to tradition this department makes its annual baseball selections. In order to prolong the agony, today's soul-stirring outpouring will be devoted solely to the National league.

And that is as it should be. The job is considerably easier in the senior circuit. The National league contains the only first class club in baseball this season — the St. Louis Cardinals.

All in all, the Western clubs are stronger this year. There is a very good chance that an Eastern team will not be able to break into the first division.

Cardinals Strong

Things wouldn't be so gloomy if the strength in the Western clubs were evenly divided. But the Cardinals are more menacing than they were a year ago. They haven't as strong a club as the 1943 offering, but they haven't been hurt nearly as much as the seven other clubs in the league. Remember that the Cards won by 18 lengths over the Reds, with Brooklyn 23½ games behind and the Pirates 25.

Here is the way this department muddles things up:

St. Louis
Chicago
Cincinnati
Pittsburgh
Brooklyn
New York
Boston
Philadelphia

The Cardinals have suffered but few important losses — Outfielder Harry Walker, who may return with a medical discharge, Second Baseman Lou Klein, Infielder Jimmy Brown and Pitchers Al Brazle, Murry Dickson, Howard Krist and Ernie White.

Billy Southworth

Manger Billy Southworth still has Pitchers Harry Brecheen, Mort Cooper and Max Lanier. His World Series infield shows only one change, Emil Verban from Columbus having replaced Klein at second. The outfield presents three veterans—Stan Musial, Johnny Hopp and Danny Litwhiler. Walker Cooper, one of the best catchers in the game at the beginning of the last season, is available. So are many other stars of the St. Louis cast.

It's customary to pick the Cubs for second place. In fact, one gets in a disagreeable rut by naming the Cubs to place. Last year Mr. Wrigley's hired men wound up an inglorious fifth, 30½ games out. But the present season finds the club fairly well equipped with experienced pitchers. And good pitching can land the club in second place. (Somewhere we've heard that song before.)

Mound Losses

We string along with Cincinnati for third place largely because of Manager Bill McKechnie. The Reds have been hard hit in their once-strong department — the pitching staff. They have lost Johnny Vander Meer and Clyde Shoun. They will mourn the loss of Lon Frey at second. Others—including Eddie Miller and Gerald Walker—are susceptible to the draft.

But Master William McKechnie is a sound, resourceful and reliable leader. He has a habit of successful operations. The rejection by the military service of First Baseman Frank McCormick has strengthened the Cincinnati club. McCormick is a long distance hitter who will make quite a difference in the final standings.

The Pirates may prove to be a surprise club. Frank Frisch has a good infield, with Babe Dahlgren replacing Elbie Fletcher at first base, Bob Elliott back at third, and Frank Gustine and Pete Coscarart in between.

The Dodgers' unhappy plight is made all the more evident by the report that Manager Leo Durocher is likely to play.

The Giants are weak. They will do well to end up in sixth place and may be forced to get along without the services of Manager Mel Ott, who is 1-A.

The Braves have a new bankroll to work with. Bob Coleman, the new manager, is widely known as a developer of young players. But the present emphasis isn't on youth in the big leagues.

We will not attempt to discuss the Philadelphia Story other than to remind you that the club is now known as the Blue Jays. Remember that names don't mean a thing.

SPORTS SHORTS

¶ Frank Mancuso, rookie catcher for the St. Louis Browns, was making his fifth parachute jump when he suffered injuries which led to his honorable discharge from the army. Regulations call for five jumps from a plane to qualify as a jumper.

¶ The Jim Corbett-Bob Fitzsimmons match at Carson City, March 17, 1897, was the first fight to be filmed.

¶ Harry Stuhldreher will conduct a clinic for state high school football coaches at the University of Wisconsin late in August.

Household Hints

To avoid losing a handkerchief under a bed pillow in a sick room at night, sew a pocket on one side of the pillowcase.

Darn the worn carpet. Literally, of course, and with a rug wool carefully matched in color. This will take away much of the shabby appearance.

Turning a belt is easy if you insert a tape a little longer than the belt between the two strips of material. Stitch the tape at one end at the same time the end of the belt is closed. To turn, simply pull the end of tape that sticks out and the belt is right-side out in a jiffy.

A worn anklet makes a good cover to pull on over the old wax applicator when it needs freshening. Wrap the applicator first with soft cloths, then the sock is pulled on and it's ready for service.

Prolong the life of rubber footwear by keeping it away from light, heat, grease and cleaning fluid. Heat weakens and cracks rubber, and makes it sticky. Sunlight has two rubber enemies—heat and light. Oil, grease and tar make rubber swell and get weak, and cleaning fluid also weakens it.

Take the shine off your clothes with sandpaper. First, sponge the spot with cleaning fluid or with water to which has been added a few drops of ammonia or vinegar. When the fabric is dry, take a small piece of sandpaper and lift the nap by briskly brushing the spot. Don't brush too hard, however, or you may remove the nap entirely.

For painting shelves that are too close together to use an ordinary brush and for other tight corners, make a "right angle brush." Cut the handle off an ordinary brush and fit the remaining stub of handle into a hole bored in a piece of wood about 10 inches long.

To keep moths from your knitting yarn, take old tobacco containers and give them a coat of paint and use these cans thus prepared as a parking spot for the knitting yarn.

Something Saved

Recently I attended two meetings in one night. They were nothing alike but together they threw revealing light on America's post-war planning. Both were open and informal. Anybody might have attended either gathering but both were small. The first, lasting until late, was a group of earnest business men trying to plan so their firms could avoid laying-off workmen after the war.

In order to "shift gears" from war production to peace-time work and avoid bankruptcy, employers will need a great deal of capital but they can't save enough. Tax laws, designed originally to keep profiteers from getting rich off the war, are being used in a way to keep employers from saving enough. Unnecessary government red-tape uses up the time of high-paid men. Unfair labor decisions overload costs and make the future look uncertain.

The Second Meeting.

Serious thoughts busied my mind on the way home. It was not a long drive but the hour was late and hunger overtook me before I sighted an all-night restaurant and gasoline station. Several out-of-state trucks waited nearby, a favorable testimonial; truckers know where the good eating places are. I drew in and presently joined the hearty road-men on stools at the pie counter.

The other guests were young fellows, sober, pleasant and talkative. None addressed me; I was clearly an outsider. But they continued exchanging rowdy pleasantries along with weather and road information. Finally one of them rose to go and rolled a crumpled $10 bill toward the cashier.

"I'll match you for it," said the man on the next stool.

"You mean supper?" asked the departing guest.

"No, I mean I'll match you for the ten," he replied, flashing another bill and brandishing a coin.

"Phooie," exclaimed the owner of the first greenback. "I'll play you $50 of poker. Or would you rather shoot pennies at a crack?"

Food for Thought

The other men laughed and began donning caps and leather jackets. My second meeting had adjourned, leaving me other thoughts to ponder. . . . When this war is over; when money is scarce again, how many of these reckless young men will have something saved? Unless history quits repeating itself, only a negligible few will have enough capital to justify a checking account.

For some unaccountable reason most people never save anything. It is a statistical fact that if employees of the Pennsylvania Railroad had saved 2 percent of their wages and invested it in company stock they would own the "Pennsy" now. They didn't do it but somebody owns this great railroad—an enormous investment providing steady, gainful work for thousands.

Who Will Employ?

Only a scanty few of the people now enjoying (or throwing away) the highest incomes they ever heard about will have anything for themselves when the war ends. Gainful work will be in keen demand. It can be supplied too, if production keeps up. Production is the secret of all wealth and the first essential of production is something saved to pay the people whose work creates prosperity.

Government is saving nothing. Government is squandering money beyond necessary expenditures for war. Workers are saving too little. Their investments in war bonds, which are excellent savings, are disappointingly low. Bond issues have been bought too largely by banks. Unless companies that make things people will want to buy after the war are permitted to save enough now, America will face a crisis at war's end that may cost us our Free Enterprise system; the only system that ever gave comfort and convenience to people in all walks of life.

Lutheran World Action

The annual Lutheran World Action Offering will be received at Nazareth Lutheran Church at its morning services on Sunday. The Lutheran World Action is the ray of hope for millions. What other organizations do for the mind and body, the Lutheran World Action does for the soul. Its aim is to give spiritual security to the millions having been dislocated by the war. The greatest amount of this offering is being used for the Service Commission of our soldiers and sailors. More than 300,000 Lutherans are in the armed forces of the United States. In addition to the 87 Parish and Service Centers here at home and in every part of the world where the 700 Lutheran chaplins go, this work goes with them to reach our men. Wherever our men go in the armed forces, the Lutheran Church goes with them.

To more than one million Lutherans in 28 mission fields of the world, the Lutheran World Action is their only ray of hope. The mission support from Norway. Denmark, Germany and other European countries has been cut off by the war and these fields are stranded. They get only a little more than 10 per cent of what was granted by the homelands before the war but this will keep them in existence until after the war.

In America, more than twenty million people have moved. The Lutheran church have followed its own by its Commission on Amerioan Mission. In one of our cities which has a church seating 150 people, there has been an influx of over 8,000 Lutheran alone. The church has special arrangements in pastor, parish assistants and other workers to care for these. Worship services are being held; Children are receiving instruction for confirmation; sacraments being administered; and the gospel is being preached. This cause merits high support. Besides these items, the Lutheran World Action has on its program War prisoner Aid, Emergency Welfare Service, Bible and Testaments and Refugee Assistance.

Nazareth Lutheran Church is asked to raise only $50.00 and it is hoped that this amount will be easily reached at its offering on Sunday.

Paint up and clean up and make our little Village as attractive as possible.

2-3 Geo. Fricker, Village Clerk.

Mrs. H. O. Hanson spent the past week at Grygla where she was teaching school for Mrs. E. Boyum.

Fifth War Loan Drive Soon

Marshall county's quota for the Fifth War Loan June 12th thru July 8th will be $683,000 or an an increase of 23 per cent over the $557,000 quota for the recent Fourth War Loan, O. M. Mattson, county War Finance Committee chairman, announced this week.

"To raise this huge amount of money during June and July will require supreme effort on the part of every resident of the county and will require thorough organization in every district in order to continue the outstanding record made in Marshall county in every special drive conducted to date," said Mr. Mattson.

The increase for Marshall county is in like proportion to the increases assigned for every every county in the state. Adjoining Polk county has been assigned a quota of $1,265,000; which is also 23 per cent greater than its Fourth War Loan quota. L. H. Everett of East Grand Forks has been named chairman for the entire Polk county campaign.

Preliminary work for the gigantic campaign is now being studied by the executive division of the Marshall County War Finance Committee. This group will possibly meet in Warren during the afternoon of May 25 to determine quotas for each individual township and village. The entire county committee which includes district chairmen from every village will possibly meet in the evening of that date to discuss all angles of the forth coming campaign.

A series of schools of instruction for individual solicitors is also being mapped out with W. O. Braggans, chairman of the Solicitor Training schools division of the county committee, in charge. Every solicitor will be thoroughly trained on all phases of the war financing program.

"Our entire national life is focused on the approaching invasion of Germany today," said Mr. Mattson. "Every morally alive, socially aware person wants to drive home a helping blow. The 5th War Loan is a tangible, fighting way in which every person can vent his feeling about the war and get into the fight.

"In all likelihood, the next three or four months will see the crisis of the war with Germany. For us, this will probably entail the supreme military effort for the war. As far as bond selling goes, the Treasury feels that the 5th War Loan will be most urgent, the most vitally important effort to date—perhaps the most important of the whole conflict—with $16 billion to be raised.

"War expenditures have never been greater than they are today From January through June direct war costs will be in the neighborhood of $48 billion—an average of $8 billion a month. Fifth War Loan goals were set high because the nation's Treasury must borrow a great deal of money this year to keep the war going. Borrowings will be twice as much as can be expected to be raised from taxes."

During the Fourth War Loan, Marshall county residents subscribed $689,268 which was well over the $557,000 quota. While the new quota appears to be exceedingly high, it is but a small part of the amount of money county residents have on deposit in the county banks. Deposits in the banks have failed to decline in spite of heavy hond buying during the Fourth War Loan and huge income tax payments. Deposits continue in the neighborhood of $5,000,000, indicating strong financial resources of the residents of the county.

If we plan now to put our shoulder to the task, the Fifth War Loan will be taken in stride, and Marshall county will continue to maintain its outstanding record in never failing our country at any time in this war or in wars during the past. Plan now to Back the Attack! — Buy More Than Before.

ON THE HOME FRONT
with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

NO MATTER how often you have to move or whether you change from a spacious house to a single room there are certain treasures that will mean home to you. A few books, a piece of china and some perfectly useless but cheering bits of bric-a-brac.

MARK SCALLOPED FRONT ON PLYWOOD WITH PATTERN-THEN CUT OUT WITH A JIG SAW OR A COMPASS SAW

By all means take them with you and make an attractive setting for them.

A shadow-box cupboard will do the trick. The one shown here is light and substantial; will lend glamour even to dime store odds and ends, and may be placed on top of a table, a chest of drawers or a desk. No special skill and almost no tools are needed to make it.

If you do not have a saw to cut the scalloped frame, mark it on plywood and take it to the nearest woodworking shop to have it cut. You may have the straight boards cut where you buy them. Then all you will have to do is to screw them together; tack on the front frame and paint or stain to suit your room color scheme.

NOTE—An actual size pattern for this shadow-box cupboard; list and sizes of all materials; and illustrated directions for making and finishing will be sent for 15 cents. Ask for Pattern 264 and write direct to:

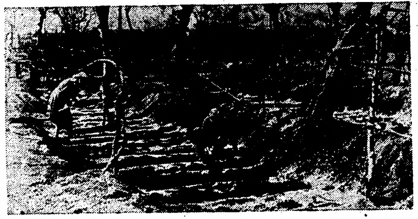
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

U. S. Forces Clean Up Hollandia Area; WFA Announces Dairy Subsidy Rates; Heavy Hog Shipments Glut Markets; Aerial Attacks Weaken Nazi Defenses

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
Released by Western Newspaper Union.



Italy—Italian farmers are shown clearing vineyards of small volcanic stone fragments spewn by belching Mount Vesuvius.

EUROPE:
Invasion Awaited

With huge concentrations of shipping reportedly massed in British ports and the Allied aerial attacks continuing in unprecedented force, Nazi Europe nervously awaited the historic and heralded invasion.

While the U. S. and Britain prepared for hostilities in the west, the Russians were reportedly organizing strength for a new drive into eastern Poland, presumably to synchronize with the invasion. As the Russians gathered their new forces, the Axis armies in southeastern Rumania stiffened resistance and parried Red thrusts along the Dniester river front.

Western Europe found no rest by day or night as British and American heavy, medium and light bombers smashed at the Germans' vaunted concrete and steel Atlantic wall, French and Belgian rail lines over which the enemy could be expected to shuttle troops to meet invasion forces, and German industries supplying the wehrmacht.

AGRICULTURE:
Hog Glut

In the wake of the government's move to buy all corn in 125 midwestern counties for sorely pressed processing industries, heavy hog shipments clogged slaughtering centers, resulting in embargoes in some centers, notably St. Louis, Mo., and Peoria, Ill.

The large shipments were believed also influenced by short feed supplies after two years of extensive use of grain for fattening record numbers of stock, and the government's plan for a minimum price of $12.50 per hundredweight for this fall.

Taking note of the dwindling feed stocks, OPA announced that effective May 15, the ceiling price on hogs over 240 pounds would be cut to $14 per hundredweight, to discourage heavy finishing off.

Dairy Subsidy

To encourage conservation of grains during the pasture season to provide for heavier feed during the fall and winter months, the War Food administration announced subsidy payment rates for dairy production for the next 11 months.

Although rates during the next four months will range from 35 to 65 cents a hundred pounds for whole milk and 6 cents a pound for butterfat, beginning September 1 and ending next March 31, rates will range between 60 to 90 cents for whole milk and 10 cents for butterfat.

Estimated to cost between $300,000,000 and $400,000,000 annually, the whole program is dependent upon congressional appropriations for administrative expenses, WFA said.

RATIONING:
More Butter

Because of record stocks in warehouses and freezers, 35,000,000 pounds of country butter will be available for civilian use in May at 8 red points per pound, along with 112,000,000 pounds of creamery butter at 12 points.

At the same time, OPA announced that more and better ice cream will be produced in May and June, following permission to manufacturers to increase output to 75 per cent of 1941 figures, and to use a mix 1 to 3 per cent richer in butterfat content.

In addition, reductions in point values are scheduled for flank beefsteak, lamb and mutton, variety cuts of pork and veal, dried beef, potted and dried meats, and sausages.

FLOODS:
Field Work Halted

Floods and heavy rain sweeping the country retarded field work and rail shipments alike, in addition to causing extensive property damage and loss of life.

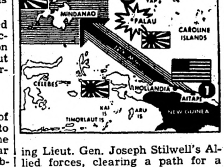
In the middlewest, farm work was as much as three weeks behind schedule, with only half the oats sown in Iowa, and much of that acreage planned to be diverted to corn and soybeans in Illinois. Warm, sunny weather was needed in the winter wheat belt in the southern great plains area. Because of blight and excessive moisture, the southeast feared for its potato crop.

Vegetable and fruit produce enroute to northern markets from the west and south was held up by flood conditions through the Mississippi river basin. A stimulus to the black market was feared through the possible diversion of crops to trucks.

PACIFIC:
Nearer Philippines

Heavy U. S. bombers were within 1,400 miles of the Philippines with the Doughboys' capture of three airfields around Hollandia in northern New Guinea following a whirlwind invasion, which Gen. Douglas MacArthur claimed sealed off 140,000 Japs.

Reinforced by additional troops, British and native units in eastern India braced for a showdown struggle with invading Japs, aiming for the Bengal-Assam railroad supplying Lieut. Gen. Joseph Stilwell's Allied forces, clearing a path for a new communication line to China through northern Burma.



Encountering light resistance, U. S. forces cleaned up Hollandia in record time, extending Allied air and naval control far up the New Guinea coast and threatening the enemy's supply lines feeding bottled troops all the way down to the Solomons to the east. Hollandia's fall also placed General MacArthur one step closer to realization of his vow to return to the Philippines.

SURPLUS GOODS:
Disposal Planned

With government sale of surplus war materials already running at a rate of $12,000,000 a month, federal officials were reported to have agreed upon a plan for entrusting future large scale disposal of such goods to five agencies and 12 business experts.

Under the plan, the War Food administration would handle food; the treasury buyers, textiles; the Reconstruction Finance corporation, land and factories; the Maritime commission, ships and related materials; and the war department, munitions.

The business advisors would counsel on how the various surplus goods should be distributed, but each agency would be asked to formulate its own policy of sale through negotiation, auction or advertising.

DUCKS:
Population Up

With mallards most numerous, the duck population now approximates 125,000,000, according to figures of Frederick C. Lincoln, chief of migratory birds investigation of the U. S. Fish and Wildlife service.

Mallards now make up 35,000,000 to 40,000,000 of the duck population, Lincoln said, with pintails second with 20,000,000, and bluebills third with 15,000,000. Marked increases also were noted for red-headed ducks and coots and mudhens.

Because of the continuing decrease of woodcocks, however, it has been indicated that the season may be closed on them next fall, along with the Jacksnipes.

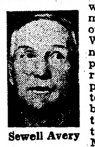
BUSINESS:
Oil Supply

Because a tremendous area of prospective oil territory remains to be tested and petroleum could be produced from enormous reserves of coal and shale, the U. S. need have no undue concern over future oil supplies, Edward G. Seubert, president of Standard Oil company of Indiana, told stockholders in the course of a report on the firm's business in 1943, showing profit of $50,591,371.

At the same time, President Ralph W. Gallagher of Standard Oil company of New Jersey, in announcing profits of $121,327,773 for 1943, told shareholders that although the U. S. was assured of sufficient oil in the future, two principal problems existed, namely, discovery of more oil, and insitution of sound, worldwide conservation policies to prevent wastage in production.

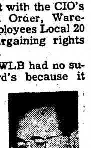
MAIL ORDER:
Legal Battle

Ground was laid for one of the U. S.'s most historic legal battles when the government forcibly took over Montgomery Ward and company's big Chicago plant following its refusal to accept a presidential order to obey a War Labor board's directive to extend a contract with the CIO's Mail Order, Warehouse and Retail employees Local 20 until the union's bargaining rights could be determined.



Sewell Avery

Claiming that the WLB had no supervision over Ward's because it cannot be classed as a war plant, Ward's 69-year-old President Sewell Avery stuck to his guns to the last, finally being carried from the plant by U. S. troops when refusing to recognize the government's occupancy.



W. C. Taylor

As both sides squared for a court battle Undersecretary of Commerce Wayne Chatfield Taylor took over operation of the plant, lacking cooperation from some Ward officials standing loyally beside Avery.

CIVILIAN GOODS:
Increase Opposed

While congressional leaders pressed for an increase in output of civilian goods in view of a surplus of certain materials and cancellation of some war contracts, government officials cautioned against any considerable boost in production over present levels.

War Production Czar Donald Nelson said military output must be increased in the immediate future and maintained at high peaks until actual needs for operations in western Europe are established.

Undersecretary of War Robert Patterson opposed any notable switch to civilian production on the grounds that it would create unfounded optimism and lead to a rush from war plants to obtain jobs in consumer goods industries.

QUEBEC:
Overseas Service

Paced by Nationalist Member Rene Chalout who declared that any fighting forces should be furnished by the U. S., Britain, China and Russia because only they stand to gain anything from the war, the Quebec provincial legislature cast a 55 to 4 vote expressing disapproval of any move to send Canadian conscripts overseas.

Said Chalout: "Conscription for military service in Canada was instituted because there was supposed to be danger of invasion. If federal authorities were sincere at the time, they should abolish it now since there is no more danger of an invasion of Canada."

The legislature acted after the Canadian national defense minister declared draftees could be used overseas if appropriate measures were taken by the government.

'IRON RATIONS'

American and British troops in India will eat a new and perhaps tastier meal when in tight spots. These emergency meals, packed in large cans, are informally known as "iron" rations.

The condensed food is packed in a can sufficient for eight men for one day, and consists of corned mutton, "vitamized" crackers, tea, jam, chocolate, chewing gum, salt, sugar, grapefruit juice (for Americans) and lemonade powder (for British troops). Cigarettes are included.

BLOCKED ARMY PROMOTIONS

The army is pulling all sorts of wires backstage in the senate to break the log-jam against permanent wartime promotions—especially those of General Somervell and General Patton.

The senate military affairs committee some time ago proposed a policy against rushing through permanent promotions in wartime, arguing that temporary promotions were sufficient and that permanent promotions could come after the war when the senate and the public could survey all of an officer's record.

Some senators still remember the manner in which General Pershing was jumped from the rank of captain to brigadier general after he married the daughter of Sen. Francis E. Warren, then chairman of the military affairs committee; and they recall also the resentment this caused in the army.

However, the policy of blocking permanent wartime promotions is being opposed by the army's efficient lobby on Capitol Hill; and recently, a new move was made to put through promotions for Generals Patton and Somervell.

Their names had been before a subcommittee which was adamant against promotion. Patton is now only colonel though holding the temporary rank of lieutenant general. Somervell's rank is similar.

So Chairman Bob Reynolds of the military affairs committee put their names before a subcommittee including himself, Elbert Thomas of Utah, and Warren Austin of Vermont. Significantly sandwiched in between Patton's and Somervell's names is that of General Wainwright, now a prisoner in Japan, whom every senator is anxious to promote. So it will be difficult for the subcommittee to promote one without the other two.

GRILLING GENERAL HERSHEY

Draft director Lewis B. Hershey and manpower boss Paul McNutt came in for some rough handling regarding the bungled draft situation at a closed-door meeting of the house military affairs committee the other day. Members took their hair down and said a lot of things that have been rankling in their bosoms about conflicting draft orders which have promoted confusion.

After the meeting adjourned, the committee announced that it had refused to approve a labor draft bill. Inside fact, however, is that formal action against the labor draft was taken only after the committee had heard a furious grenading against the Hershey-McNutt team, including a demand that both be fired and replaced by a single draft czar.

Chairman Andrew J. May of Kentucky, Rep. Walter G. Andrews of New York, ranking committee Republican, and Reps. Ewing Thomason of Texas, John M. Costello of California, Leslie Arends of Illinois and Forest Harness of Indiana all got in some forthright licks against the fumbling of the manpower and draft program.

The assault was led by Texas' two-fisted Thomason, who declared that one man should be put in complete charge of both military and industrial manpower with the nation at war.

MYSTERIOUS HOSPITAL

There is something awfully mysterious about the war department's determination to get rid of the Breakers hotel in Palm Beach as an army hospital, and the extent to which Attorney General Biddle seems anxious to cooperate.

In order to unravel the mystery, the Truman committee called upon Biddle for the Breakers hotel report prepared by his two-fisted young Assistant Attorney General Norman Littell. Littell, who is in charge of lands acquisition, had pointed to the foolishness of spending a lot of money making a hotel into a hospital and then turning it back to the Florida East Coast railroad just when we are on the verge of a second front and do not know what our casualties will be.

But when Biddle received the Truman committee's request, he got in touch with Rudolph Halley, its acting chief investigator, and asked him to withdraw the request. Halley diplomatically complied.

But next day, when members of the Truman committee heard about it, they called up the justice department and subpoenaed the Littell report.

Whereupon Biddle promptly surrendered. He asked that the subpoena be withdrawn and he finally sent the Littell report to the committee. Meanwhile, the army is holding up its plans to evacuate the Breakers.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER
Christopher Columbus is credited with bringing first reports of rubber to the civilized world, but rubber relics found among Mayan ruins lead some scientists to believe that rubber items were in use in the eleventh century.
Rubber, both wild and plantation, grows best in an area 10 degrees either side of the equator.
The production of one complete large bomber tire takes as much time as does the making of several truck tires, or up to 60 passenger car tires of the most popular size. The demand for large tires is severely straining the production facilities of the industry.

OVERWORKED SOILS TO NEED REBUILDING IN POSTWAR PERIOD

CHICAGO.—By earmarking part of war bond purchases for peacetime soil rebuilding expenditures, Midwest farmers will be enabled to pay back to their land the plant food elements they are now borrowing to meet present food production goals, according to a statement made public here by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee.

"That these payments will be absolutely necessary," says the statement, "is evident from the very high rate at which nitrogen, phosphorus and potash will have to be removed from the soil this year. Growing crops to win the war is the farmer's 'No. 1 job.' A heavy draft on the savings of plant food elements is a relatively small contribution to victory, IF proper steps are taken to repay the borrowed soil wealth when the war is over.

"If our farms are to be kept productive, the major job of replacement that will have to be done should be started as early as possible after the war is finished. Money to pay for this can best be provided by setting aside part of the higher farm income for this purpose. Here is where war bonds enter the picture. They offer the means of paying for soil rebuilding.

"Farmers everywhere could profitably follow the recent recommendation by the Indiana War Savings Staff that 60 cents per crop acre in war bonds be earmarked now for the purchase of phosphorus and potash, as a means of providing ready cash for restoring these plant foods lost by extra heavy war-need drains on soil. The 60 cents per acre bond investment would, of course, be only a part of the farmer's total war bond investment, but bonds to at least that amount should be laid aside for the specific job of soil restoration."

In cluclusion the statement quotes William L. Baynes, director of the farm program for the Indiana War Savings Staff, who said: "War bonds will provide the ready cash, after the war, to restore the plant food and general fertility level of the farm."

Investments make jobs. Large investments make good jobs. Paying investments make permanent jobs. Communities where substantial capital has been put to work wisely are prosperous communities. Their ratio of gainfully employed people is high. Incomes are adequate for gracious living and merchants prosper because their customers have money to spend for something besides a bare living. These desirable conditions result from investments.

Not all projects prosper. Not all investments are wise. Nobody can be perfectly certain in advance whether a proposed venture is a good one, but if our enterprisers had always withheld their investments until they could know how things were going to turn out, America never would have become the world's most influential nation. We would be on the back bench with China and India today.

Fish in the Sea

An incident in the career of James A. Patten illustrates perfectly how boldness in business creates wealth. Deals in wheat, not fish, made Patten's name familiar to every adult American in the first ten years of the 20th Century, but he once laid out a million dollars to build the first fish cannery in Alaska. While it was still in the planning stage, the famous plunger consulted his banker. Bankers are proverbially conservative.

"The fish are still in the sea, Mr. Patten," the banker reminded, after hearing the business man discuss potential returns. "It is worth trying," Mr. Patten said. "If I lose, I lose. Out of three pioneering ventures, if two are successful, it is enough." He built the cannery and it prospered and grew. Hundreds of men were employed. Good jobs were created. People in many lands were supplied food at fair prices.

More Than a Gift

Fish taken from the sea and sold in cans the first year had a value somewhat above 1.5 million dollars. In the absence of Patten's venturesome spirit, this progress would have been delayed; might never have come. This is the spirit of progress and adventure that gives America leadership among nations; that currently is feeding the families of a war-cursed world.

A mellower millionaire than Patten might have endowed very richly some uplift movement for underprivileged Eskimos (if any) and accomplished much less for humanity than did this investment for profit that started a new industry in a new country.

After this war will come the greatest demand for new jobs that the world has ever known. The whole Earth will look to American enterprisers to offer gainful work. If we uphold America's living standards which are different from any in the world, and better than any, we will need all the good ideas our 130 million people can devise. Freedom of opportunity encourages venturesome investment; makes paying jobs.

A Tame Ending

But let me tell you the rest of the Patten story. He quit enterprising. Born before the Civil War, he lived until 1928 and witnessed the coming of taxes that tended to restrict the growth of new enterprises. Two successes out of three venturesome investments had been enough to encourage his early activities but, at that rate, if he were operating now and paying 66⅔ percent tax on his profits he could only break even.

In later years taxes on profits have reached even more discouraging heights. A 75 percent tax makes two successful ventures out of three show an over-all loss. Some men pay taxes of 90 percent but Patten quit taking long chances before such rates were dreamed of. In his late years he invested in government bonds. To him this must have seemed tame. Government bonds pay returns and they are safe but they create no wealth; no jobs.

The Farmer Buys War Bonds

by O. B. Jesness
Chief, Division of Agricultural Economics
University of Minnesota

FARMER Brown does not have to ask himself whether he ought to buy War Bonds. He knows that every citizen with an income should lend part of it to the government to help win this war. The real question which Mr. Brown and all his fellow farmers must decide is how large his investment should be. The simplest and best answer to this is "buy all you can."

But what are some of the points which a farmer needs to weigh in deciding what that amount is in his particular case? Farm income certainly is one. Most farmers are receiving considerably larger cash incomes because of the war. Some of the increase may be needed to pay pressing debt. Higher taxes will take some. But most of it ought to be salted away in War Bonds for future use.

Part of the current cash income represents wear and tear on machinery and equipment. War shortages prevent farmers from buying machinery or building freely. Less money can be spent for these purposes now, but more cash will be needed later on because of this. Each farmer ought to figure the amount which this involves. The best storage place for the money which prudent farmers will set aside for this use is War Bonds.

Farm homes will need new equipment as well. Electricity has recently been installed in many farm homes and more will get this service as soon as possible. Funds saved up now can be used later to buy things to add to the comforts of the home and to ease the drudgery of farm work.

War prices will not last forever. The future will bring years of low prices or bad crops as well as good years. Some of the present income will come in mighty handy in times of low return. Farmers also are saving for educating their children, for old age and for the proverbial rainy day. Each family should think about all of these needs and set aside money to meet them. There is no safer place for such savings than War Bonds.

Should debts be paid before Bonds are bought? Each farmer must answer for himself. Due and pressing debt should be paid. If necessary, long-term debt should be reduced to a point where it can be carried. After that, available income better go into Bonds. Your own conscience will tell you when you are using debt merely as an excuse for neglecting to do your share in buying Bonds.

What about buying land? Can you handle more land profitably? Is it worth the price asked? Can you pay for it out of earnings when prices drop? A speculative boom in land may get out of hand. Better buy Bonds than speculate in land.

What about the farmer who says "I prefer to keep my funds in cash?" Stop to think, brother, how smart is that? Do you believe it good business to have idle dollars lying around? If they are hid away somewheres, they may get lost, stolen or destroyed. Put them to work and make them produce a return for you. War Bonds are the safest investment available. They are backed by the same government as the dollar. One is as safe as the other. While farmers buy Bonds intending to hold them, the E, F and G Bonds ordinarily bought by individual investors can be redeemed for cash if need arises. Unlike the liberty bonds of the last war, these cannot be sold on the open market and, hence, will never sell for fewer dollars than they cost.

Farmers have done a good job in buying War Bonds. They can make an even better showing if each one will buy all he can. Remember, you help yourself as well as your country.

WRITE OFTEN
HOLT
And Keep Your Letters Cheerful

Here is one of our most important wartime duties. Write a cheerful letter to your service man or service woman every day.

It doesn't take much time; in fact, after you get in the habit, it's easier than writing once a week. Maybe you're tired, maybe you're busy, but take just a few minutes out. You don't have to make it long—the shortest note, telling what the family is doing, and the news of the neighborhood and his friends, is a great morale-builder—and remember, high morale is one of the essentials in the equipment of every fighting man.

It takes just a cheerful word, a three-cent stamp, and a few minutes of your time every day to put your service man or service woman on top of the world! Please do it today!

Bottles and cases are scarce, too.
Be sure to return yours promptly.

Holt High School Play

On the evenings of May 26th and 27th the Junior class will present a rousing three act comedy drama entitled "America First" in the Holt School. Here is a red blooded, up-to-the-minute play of American ideals, told in a startling human fashion by Robert Ray, popular playright.

"America First" is a simple little story, but one that will be sure to arouse the patriotism of all who see it, and make them appreciate the things for which our country stands.

Those taking part in the production are, Elayne Johnson as Tillie Olson, Kenneth Larson as Grandpa Holmes, Duane Larson as Lee Holmes, Harley Engen as Jimmy Banks, Evelyn Sagstuen as Dorothy Holmes, Alice Peterson as Gladys Galley, Sylvia Sandberg as Ola Kring, Leonard Ness as Franz Kring, Eleanor Ueland as Ann Holmes, Marvin Larson as Frank Griffith and Orville Larson as Alvin Blake.

Mrs. Trost, director of the play, declared that she is enthusiastic at the manner in which the students have entered into the spirit of their parts.

Tickets are 40c and 20c including tax. If you don't see another play you must see "America First". You'll remember it a long long time.

"I Am An American" Day

The 21-year-old young Americans, and those of varying age from other lands, whose attainment of full citizenship is being marked on "I Am On American" Day are to be congratulated very heartily. Never before have the privileges of citizenship meant so much, nor have its responsibilities been so evident. We welcome the new citizens as our friends, neighbors, and fellow-Americans.

They are joining us as full-fledged members of our community at a time when there is a grave need for patriotism of the highest sort. Our enemies have shown us what "patriotism" can lead to when it degenerates into blind, flag-waving nationalism at the expense of other nations and other peoples.

The patriotism we have always sought in this country means devotion to the ideal of democratic living. Believing that every man should be judged on his merits as an individual, we have formed ourselves into a great, united people—one people out of many different people, of every nation, race, and creed. We have repudiated all the efforts of our Axis enemies to undermine this unity of ours. We have refused to be divided on racial and religious grounds. This faith in one's fellow men is the strength of our way of living. Citizens, new and old, can measure their own patriotism by how much they make this democratic faith part of their every-day living.

This is a year of decision at home and abroad. The heat engendered in a national election, the hysteria that some misguided elements may try to kindle, will put our democratic system to the test. With the exception of some of the British Dominions, ours is the only large country in the entire world to hold a wartime election. This is a unique privilege—yet one which rightfully belongs to all men. Millions of suppressed peoples, awaiting liberation, will be watching closely to see how we exercise this privilege of American citizenseip. Certainly it will be the time for a calm, clear-headed demonstration by all voters, new and old alike, of democracy at work.

$100,000,000 Trust Fund

A memorial full of significance to the boys and girls and their parents in every community in Minnesota was observed this past week when, on the anniversary of Minnesota's admission to the union May 11th, State Treasurer Julius Schmahl reported to Governor Edward J. Thye that the permanent school trust fund, set up as a perpetual endowment for common schools of the atate by Minnesota founders, had reached $100,000,134.

From the interest earned by this fund. money has come in increasing amount over the years to help support the schools here and in every other community in the state. For 1943, the apportionment amounted to about $8 for each pupil in our public schools, and the amount will grow, for Mr. Schmahl envisioned the day in his report to the Governor when the total trust fund may reach $200,000,000.

Pleased with the report, Governor Thye said:

"All Minnesota citizens must be grateful for the vision and wisdom of the men who developed the Minnesota trust funds and the long list of officials who have protected them through the years. It is a dramatic story of the fine results that can accrue from far-sighted action on the part of public officials."

Though stressing particularly the milestone which the permanent school fund had achieved in passing the $100,000,000 mark, Treasurer Schmahl's report also brought out that impressive gains have been made during the past year in the permanent University fund, internal improvement fund and swamp land funds. Total trust funds of the state, nearly all of which is set aside for educational purposes, now have reached $129,112,265, his report showed, compared to $123,931,928 on June 30, 1940.

Though established for many years, big gain in the state,s trust funds has come in fairly recent years, accelerated tremendously by income from iron ore on state owned lands. In 1900, the total in all trust funds was only $7,842,990.

State Treasurer Schmall made public proofs of a booklet he has prepared tracing development of the state's great heritage in trust funds and the efforts officials have made to protect this resource. The study reviews the sucessful fight made by Governor Ramsey and others to preservd the funds from the sale of the federal land grants as trust funds instead of using the money for current needs as other states had done. Tribute is paid to William W. Braden, state auditor in the eighties, who, without express authorithy, held up the sale of school lands in areas where ore discoveries were in prospect until the legislature could amend the law to permit the state to reserve mineral rights and thereby saved millions upon millions for the trust funds.

Chronicled too are the benefits that have accrued because officials of the state held part of the swamp land grants. On three forty-acre tracts, the report points out, trust funds have been enriched by nearly $10,000,000, representing the state's return from the Scraton mine up near Hibbing.

Sgt. Arthur Holmsirom arrived here last week end from Alaska to spend his furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. August Holmstrom.

Many Attend School Meeting

One of the largest crowds to turn out for an annual school meeting here in years, was in attendance at the meeting here on Tuesday evening. Thenty-nine voters were there and cast their votes for directors to be elected to the school board.

The terms of A. W. Carlson, O. H. Nohre and H. Moberg expired at this time and as no one had filed for the offices the election was held on the basis o submitting the names of those going out, and a free for all voting for anyone else.

A. W. Carlson was reelected to the term of one year, Marvin Sandberg was elected for the the two year term and O. H. Nohre and Walter Larson tied for the three year term. Many facts were discussed at the meeting and the people voted the board a vote of confidence for their fine work and put the OK on their proposals for the coming year.

Pfc. Russell Sanoden arrived here last Friday from a camp in Mississippi to spend his ten-day furlough at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. Sanoden.

The Lutheran World Action in Nazareth Lutheran Church Sunday morning amounted to over $90.00. The quota was $50. With what has been sent in previously, Nazareth Lutheran church has doubled its quota.

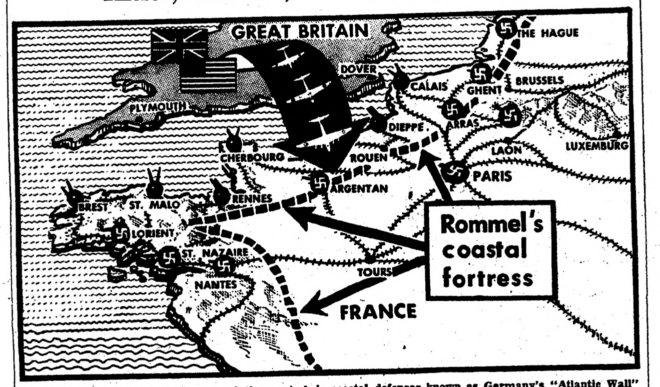
Hitler, Rommel, Visit 'Atlantic Wall'



Eleventh-hour inspection tours of the vast Axis coastal defenses known as Germany's "Atlantic Wall" are being made by Marshal Rommel, according to news dispatches, which say that Hitler has made personal "pre-invasion visits." Rommel is reported making day-by-day tours of areas shown on the above map, which provides a general picture of the coastal fortress. Broken line indicates territory referred to as "Rommel's defense zone." Swastikas indicate points which have been mentioned as "Rommel's command forts."

When painting around windows or chromium fixtures, first apply vaseline on the windows and fixtures. SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Natural rubber is still something of a mystery, even after years of laboratory experiments. It has carbon and hydrogen, but there are other qualities which have not as yet been determined.

Before the war, 60 per cent of the tires and tubes made each year were used as replacements, and 80 percent of the new motor vehicles sold replaced those annually scrapped.

Brazil rubber selling at $3.06 a pound in 1910 stimulated the development of the Middle East plantations to the extent that 3,000,000 acres were under cultivation in 1915, providing the bulk of the world's supplies.

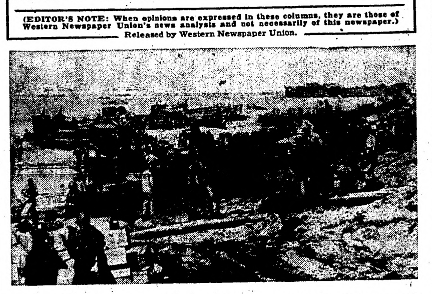
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Nazi Rail Lines Hammered by Allies In Pre-Invasion Softening Process; Lend-Lease Grants Total 30 Billion; Stilwell Advances in Northern Burma

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.



Beachhead— There's more to establishing a beachhead than merely forcing a landing. At Aitape in Dutch New Guinea, Doughboys are shown bringing up supplies for continued operations.

EUROPE:
Nazi Preparations

As it was reported that the Germans were prepared to sacrifice 200,000 men along the "Atlantic Wall" to slow up the Allies' landing operations and allow the German high command opportunity to shift large reserves to the most critical battle areas, U. S. and British bombers continued their non-stop bombardment of enemy defense installations and communication lines to blast a forward path for the invasion forces.

As the zero hour approached, the Nazis sought to assure against Allied landings in Holland by preparing to flood the lowlands, part of which already have been inundated following the removal of the inhabitants.

Heavy U. S. and British aerial bombardments reportedly razed Nazi rail lines 100 miles inland from the channel coast, putting a severe crimp into the transport system over which the Nazis hoped to rush seasoned troops to encounter early Allied landings, possibly made in conjunction with a great Russian offensive in the east.

U. S. SEIZURE:
Congress Acts

Stirred by U. S. troop seizure of the Chicago plant of Montgomery Ward and company after the latter's refusal to extend a CIO union contract upon order of the War Labor board, both the senate and the house moved to review the whole field of wartime executive authority.

Sen. Byrd
Rep. Dewey

In introducing a resolution for studying the Ward case which was quickly adopted, Sen. Harry Byrd (Va.) said: ". . . The measure . . . should lead to correction of legislation under which this (the Ward) seizure of a private business was made."

Previously, Rep. Charles Dewey (Ill.) called upon the house to authorize an investigation of the government's occupation of the Ward plant, a seizure nation's No. 2 mail order company contested in federal court on the ground it is no war industry, and an action the U. S. defended on the strength of its claim that the business sells productive machinery to farmers in advancement of the war effort.

MEAT:
Plenty on Hand

Reduction of government purchases of meat in the face of crowded warehouses and heavy hog receipts at markets resulted in OPA's removal of meat rationing except on beef steaks and roasts.

On April 1, warehouses held a near record of 1,246,813,000 pounds of meat compared with 780,806,000 pounds a year ago. Packing facilities were being stretched to the utmost as farmers continued heavy hog shipments, partly because of the tight feed supply recently aggravated by the government's embargo on all private corn sales in 125 midwest counties to divert stocks to industrial processors.

As a result of the government's program, virtually all wet corn millers were operating, with enough grain pledged for four months.

PACIFIC:
Stilwell Advances

Lieut. Gen. Joseph Stilwell's mixed U. S., Chinese and native Burmese troops pushed the Japs farther back in northern Burma in their drive to clear a new supply road to distressed China, while British and Indian forces continued to slow up the Japs' determined campaign to sever the Assam-Bengal rail line feeding General Stilwell's army.

In the South Pacific, U. S. troops strengthened their hold on the Hollandia area in Dutch New Guinea, while American bombers ranged up and down the island smashing at Jap bases, supplying straggling enemy troops.

In addition to threatening General Stilwell's supply lines, the Jap drive in India reportedly was designed to establish India's Collaborationist Subhas Chandra Bose on native soil for an intensive propaganda drive to arouse the Hindus to revolt against the British.

LEND-LEASE:
30 Billion

Including special assistance given by other government agencies, lend-lease aid now approximates $30,362,687,362, the senate was told in considering extension of the act.

Broken down into loans, grants, investments, construction, purchases in foreign countries, current expenses and other aid and expenditures, the special assistance alone, chiefly extended by the army and navy, amounts to $8,500,000,000. Ordinary lend-lease assistance totals $21,794,237,819.

Of the $30,362,687,362 spent, Great Britain has received $19,700,297,674; Russia, $4,214,921,449; So. America, $2,327,378,789; China, $920,349,451.

SURPLUS MATERIAL:
Use Considered

With U. S. sales of surplus war goods already running between $12,000,000 and $15,000,000 monthly, the knotty problem of allowing production of civilian goods, with raw materials and scrap reverting to the government through termination of war contracts, has arisen.

Although some flatirons, alarm clocks, furniture, kitchenware, radio tubes, electric fans, stoves, kitchen ranges and bathtubs are scheduled for delivery in 1944, they are but a drop in the bucket compared with civilian requirements.

Despite the admitted surplus of many raw materials, the War Production board has opposed their appreciable use in civilian goods on the grounds that such manufacture would aggravate the manpower situation.

POLITICS:
Army Impartial

The ticklish problem of supplying U. S. soldiers with political information on the 1944 national elections was bravely approached by the war department, with emphasis firmly placed on impartiality.

Although doughboys will be permitted to read their favorite magazine or newspaper, the war department ruled that in radio broadcasts and service publications, equal time or space must be granted to both sides.

Motion pictures and entertainments also drew the attention of the war department, with no partial material to be tolerated in either source, and commanding officers to closely guard against the revision of scripts violating the regulation.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

POSTAL NOTES: A plan to provide "postal notes" for transmission of money by mail in sums under ten dollars for a flat five-cent fee is being considered by the senate postal committee. The house has already approved the proposal. These notes would not supplant the use of the regular money order for small sums but would be a convenient addition to the postal services.

DESIGNER: Paul Poiret, 64, once among the world's most famous fashion designers, died in Paris virtually a pauper.

RAYON HOSE: More thin rayon hosiery will be produced and less of the heavier grades, by permission of the War Production board. The industry has been complaining that women were not buying the better wearing heavier lines.

Get EXTRA TRACTION BAR LENGTH AT No Extra Cost and YOU WILL GET EXTRA TRACTION, BETTER CLEANING and LONGER LIFE TOO!

FIRESTONE traction bars are built into the tread of a farm tractor tire to serve just one purpose. That purpose is to give traction.

Because the traction bar is the source of pulling power of tractor tires, it is obvious that greater traction bar length gives greater traction. By the same token, a shortened traction bar design, such as the broken center, gives less traction.

Firestone Ground Grip Tractor Tires provide up to 215 extra inches of traction-bar length per tractor at no extra cost. And the bars are joined in the center to form a powerful, triple-braced, leakproof traction unit.

That's why farmers prefer tires built by Firestone, the pioneer and pacemaker in putting the farm on rubber.

The Oil Choke

America's shortage of gasoline for civilian use is becoming actually acute, especially in the East where light fuel for oil-heated homes was a serious problem all winter. War's motor fuel demands are increasing, and the only apparent way to meet them is by deeper cuts into uses at home. In 1943, oil fields of the United States yielded 1.5 billion barrels of crude oil, and new fields discovered will furnish only about one-sixth that much.

No relief is in sight; 350,000 barrels daily came out of storage tanks in January, 1944. Oil producers started more than two years ago to warn government authorities of just what is happening now. Then, and for several months later the calamity could have been avoided with a fair increase in the crude oil price, but it was not allowed. Here is the rub: When oil prices were frozen in 1941, the national average was $1.17 a barrel, and now it is $1.20.

Books Show Red

Counting all puny, scattered price advances in two years, the gain has amounted to 3 cents a barrel while costs to get oil are up 60 cents a barrel. The country needed oil even in 1941. Exploratory wells should have been drilled—new fields found. But men can't spend more than they receive. Owners of small wells could have boosted the yield from many of these with sound engineering methods but the money was lacking. Many wells have been shut down.

The argument offered against a higher oil price ceiling is that it would make car owners pay more for gasoline. They would gladly pay more, however, if they could get the gasoline. Meanwhile old oil fields are dying by inches. More than 13,000 little oil wells were junked last year because they couldn't be made to pay; 10,000 perished the year before. This should never happen when our flyers need motor fuel.

We Fight Success

It probably delights our enemies to see small, successful, private enterprisers squeezed out of the oil business while the government buys into it with taxpayers' money. It is a trend fundamentally wrong and, right now, dangerous. Up near the Arctic Circle, on Canadian soil, our government has put 135 million dollars in a pipeline and refinery within the last two years. Its practicability is now gravely questioned, even as a peacetime venture. Some say work on it was abandoned, for the long Arctic winter.

The latest government mirage of far-flung oil wealth is on the sands of Arabia. People in a position to know estimate its cost at 150 million dollars. Two years may see it finished. Two years will see the European war over, experts believe, so the Arabian pipeline is no part of the war effort.

It's No Secret

Congressman H. L. Gavin of Pennsylvania, ably and eloquently told this story in a radio talk on February 14. He had his facts and figures straight. He is probably right that there is plenty of petroleum still under ground in America. I'd like to see oil fields developed at home, near to our aching need for gasoline and heating oil. Legislation to this effect should be enacted by Congress if action is not obtained otherwise.

American planes in all branches of service, trucks and tanks and ocean craft are looking to America for fuel; not to the frozen North nor the arid East. Surely most of the big money spent by our government now should be hastening victory and peace, not fortifying government in business to cramp and impoverish future generations.

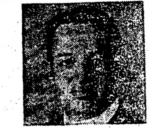
Farmers: Help Prevent Inflation

by Asher Hobson
Chairman, Dept. of Agricultural Economics
University of Wisconsin



FARMERS remember the "Silk Shirt" era of the last war. That era was marked by 75 cent butterfat, 20 dollar hogs, and 100, 200 and in some states 300 dollars an acre for farm land. Farmers also remember the "no shirt" era of the Thirties — 25 cent butterfat, 5 dollar hogs, and land so low the mortgage took it. One way of keeping one's shirt after this war is not to buy too many silk shirts now, so to speak.

There is an old saying to the effect that he who sleeps on the floor never falls out of bed. None of us want to sleep on the floor, but we should see to it that our beds are not so high as to cause serious injury in case of a fall. Unduly high prices are likely to be followed by unduly low prices. That is one reason why most people in responsible walks of life appreciate the necessity of acting now to prevent inflation. Farmers are equally concerned.

Inflation is another term for unhealthy high prices. Inflation has a younger brother. He is a bad actor. His name is deflation. He has a habit of following his brother inflation. Deflation often means serious unemployment, lower property values, more tax delinquency, and mounting foreclosures. Add these together and the sum is farm relief. That is not the answer farmers want.

Farmers can well afford to take steps now in an attempt to avoid that sort of a situation. But inflation is not easily handled after it arrives. One cannot build a cyclone cellar after the old clouds begin to roll. Then one has time only to grab the baby and run—with no place to go. Something like that is apt to happen when inflation strikes. The best way to handle inflation is to prevent its striking.

What can farmers do? They can help keep prices from getting out of hand by helping to hold prices down now. If prices are to be held in line, the pressures under prices must be removed. The Government cannot do this job alone. There are no anti-inflation white rabbits in the magician's hat. Only the concerted efforts of you and me can turn the trick.

The forces causing prices to go up may be summarized in the statement that there is more money available for spending than there are goods and services to be bought. This is another way of saying that the demand for goods and services exceeds the available supply. Let us be specific. At the end of 1943 it was estimated that there were 42 billion dollars of spendable income in this country in excess of goods and services to be bought at the then existing prices. A year earlier the excess was 33 billion dollars. If prices are to be held in line this excess purchasing power must be brought down to the level of the supply of goods and services, or the supply of goods and services must be boosted in keeping with purchasing power.

Farmers are doing their utmost to increase the supply of agricultural products. In this way they are helping to prevent inflation. The other way in which they may help is to buy less. In general there are two ways of reducing consumer purchasing power. They are:

Heavier taxes
Voluntary savings

The greater the voluntary savings the less the need for more taxes. Let us do it the voluntary way by buying more WAR BONDS and holding those Bonds until manpower, plant capacity, and raw materials are available for increasing the supply of consumer goods. Spending then will be less likely to boost prices through the ceiling. Saving has always been an outstanding farmer trait. It is now a patriotic duty.

WRITE OFTEN
HOLT
And Keep Your Letters Cheerful

Here is one of our most important wartime duties. Write a cheerful letter to your service man or service woman every day.

It doesn't take much time; in fact, after you get in the habit, it's easier than writing once a week. Maybe you're tired, maybe you're busy, but take just a few minutes out. You don't have to make it long—the shortest note, telling what the family is doing, and the news of the neighborhood and his friends, is a great morale-builder—and remember, high morale is one of the essentials in the equipment of every fighting man.

It takes just a cheerful word, a three-cent stamp, and a few minutes of your time every day to put your service man or service woman on top of the world! Please do it today!

Bottles and cases are scarce, too.
Be sure to return yours promptly.

"America First" is a simple little story, but one that will be sure to arouse the patriotism of all who see it, and make them appreciate the things for which our country stands.

Those taking part in the production are, Elayne Johnson as Tillie Olson, Kenneth Larson as Grandpa Holmes, Duane Larson as Lee Holmes, Harley Engen as Jimmy Banks, Evelyn Sagstuen as Dorothy Holmes, Alice Peterson as Gladys Galley, Sylvia Sandberg as Ola Kring, Leonard Ness as Franz Kring, Eleanor Ueland as Ann Holmes, Marvin Larson as Frank Griffith and Orville Larson as Alvin Blake.

Mrs. Trost, director of the play, declared that she is enthusiastic at the manner in which the students have entered into the spirit of their parts.

Tickets are 40c and 20c including tax. If you don't see another play you must see "America First". You'll remember it a long long time.

Two Canning Sugar Periods Set

Starting last week, there will be two canning sugar ration periods in order to accommodate the early berry crops and the late tree fruit crops, according to an announcement made by P. R. Fields, District Rationing Executive. A maximum of twenty pounds of canning sugar will continue to be allowed each person to be issued during the two periods of the canning seaaon.

The move was made, Mr. Field explaind, in order that sugar would be availabe for canning of late fall fruit crops.

Applicants may obtain up to ten pounds of canning sugar per person through July 31, by submitting spare stamp number 37 for each person applying. One application is sufficient for each family.

Beginning August 1, another application will be required to obtain the additional ten pounds of canning sugar. It will not be necessary at that time to attach spare stamps 37 as local boards will have record of the first issuances.

Those persons who do not find it necessary to apply for the ten pounds during the first period may apply for the amount of sugar needed up to 20 pounds during the second period.

Consistent with OPA's policy of setting no expiration dates on stamps, those persons who have not used their first allotment of 10 pounds by August 1, may still apply for additional sugar rations during the second ration peoiod.

People who have already received the total allowance of 20 pounds of canning sugar are cautioned to ration themselves in order to take care of late fruit crops, as no additional sugar will be allowed.

Rev. and Mrs. Hanson and sons expect to leave Sunday evening for Minneapolis and St. Paul. Rev. Hanson will attend the biennial convention of the Norwegian Lutheran church of America next week. Mrs. Hanson will attend the International W. M. F. convention. Mrs. Hanson and boys expect to remain for a longer visit in St. Paul with her mother and other relatives.

5th War Lean Qnota Is Cut

Because of an overate developing in establishing quotas throughout the state, Marshall county's quota for the Fifth War Loan Drive has been been reduced $11,000 from the original figure and now will be $675,000 O. M. Mattson, county War Finance Committee chairman, announced.

Members of the county committee met at Hotel Warren in Warren on Thursday, this week, where plans for the big drive which opens June 12 were discussed. Every angle to be used in promoting the bond sale were considered by the committee in an effort to complete a whirlwind drive during the opening days of the campaign.

The executive committee of the county organisation met in the afternoon, preliminary to the general commtttee meeting to assign quotas for each township and village for the drive. These figures were announced at the general committee meeting in the evening.

Schools of instruction for the county's 275 or more bond salesmen and saleswomen are being planned for each of the districts preceding the drive under the direct supervision of W. O. Braggans of Warren, chairman of this division of the county committee. Mr. Braggans will enlist and train a crew of instructors for the schools which will be held during a week preceding the campaign. Individual quotas for each person or firm in each village and township will be recommended for the committees as one of the best methods to reach the county goal.

Chas. N. Kranz, chairman of the Marshall County AAA committee, was named as farm chairman of the county committee and will work with the county committee in contacting the farm population of the county about the coming program.

Memorial Day Next Tuesday

We cannot but halt a moment, as we cross the threshold of the beautiful month of May, in silent honor of those who gave their all that we might prosper. "Their" day comes in May. A single day out of a year in lenght yet more hearts, and minds, and love will surrender on Decoration Day than on any other day of the year.

The torn hearts of the mothers who lost their sons and daughters on the battlefronts of the world, will rest easier as the Almighty casts his reflection over the World on Decoration Day. The graves of those 'boys' and 'girls' will again feel the tears of the loved ones left behind.

No honor is to great for those who laid down their lives in the wars of our nation since its birth. No flowers are beautiful enough to grace the graves of our "Soldiers."

It is our prayer, and the prayer of countless others in all parts of the world, that Decoration Day, this year will serve to tender the resting places of our great, and ease many heavy hearts.

Sunday afternoon visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Ness were: Mr. and Mrs. George Johnson, Kenneth Rafteseth, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Peterson and Vivian, Mr. and Mrs. Tony Peterson, Joyce and Marles, Mrs. O. B. Johnson, Lavern Bakke and Avis Johnson.

On this Memorial Day lets not pay homage to only those heroes of the past, but also to those heroes of the present who are now bieng called upon to really shape fundamental human destiny.

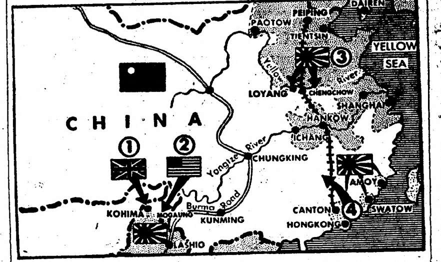
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Allies Hammer at Gustav Line; Japs Continue Advance in China; Delay Induction of Men Over 30

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)



China—Allies fight to open back door to China in southwestern part of country as depicted by 1 and 2, Japs seized control of Peiping-Hankow railroad in drives shown by 3 and 4.

ASIA:
Chinese Set Back

Gallant China's defenders took one more step back in the eastern belt of their country as 80,000 Japanese supported by strong reinforcements drove beyond the Peiping-Hankow railroad, upon which they tightened their hold.

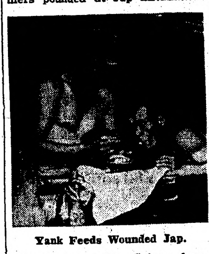
As the Chinese fell back, Lieut.-Gen. Joseph Stilwell's mixed U. S. and Chinese troops hacked their way forward in north Burma, far to the southwest of the main Chinese battleground. Purpose of General Stilwell's offensive was to clear the Ledo road, over which supplies could be trucked into sorely pressed China from the southwestern corner of the country.

By grasping the Peiping-Hankow railroad, the Japs consolidated their positions in eastern China, which extend inland from the sea coast. It is in this rich region that the cagey enemy has established heavy industry to utilize the country's abundant manpower and natural resources.

Near Inner Lines

As U. S. army and navy forces drew closer to the Philippines and Indies within the Japs' inner defensive ring, Yankee airmen continued to hammer at the enemy's tottering outer fortifications guarding these prized conquests.

To the west of Hollandia, army fliers pounded at Jap installations near the tip of New Guinea, forming one side of the gate to the Indies, and drew stiff fire from some of the planes the enemy has supposedly concentrated in the region.



Yank Feeds Wounded Jap.

To the north, both army and navy fliers collaborated in blasting at Jap installations in the Caroline islands, the front door to the Philippines, with the big base of Truk being an especial target.

OIL:
Big Strike

Mississippi's little village of Heidelberg in the southeast corner of the state, became the mecca for the nation's sharpest oil men with the development of two high producing wells in the region and giddy anticipations that it might blossom into another East Texas field, which has given up almost two billion barrels in 16 years.

As oil men rushed to be in on the kill, the region's poor, struggling farmers who have eked the barest living from the stingy soil, suddenly visioned manna from heaven. Besides receiving fancy sums for leasing their land, they would get a royalty of one-eighth on production. Already, a Negro reportedly obtained $17,500 in royalties alone.

First probed by the Gulf Refining company in 1940, the Heidelberg field has two heavy producing wells, both reportedly capable of producing 15,000 barrels daily.

Diamond in the Rough

Twelve years ago a boy named William Jones was playing horseshoes with his father on a farm near Peterstown, W. Va. One pitch dug into the earth and uncovered a large bright stone. "Gee, I found a diamond!" exclaimed the youth.

Afraid of ridicule, however, he did not submit it to experts until recently. Then, R. J. Holden, professor of geology at Virginia Polytechnical institute, reported that the stone is the largest alluvial diamond ever found in the United States.

EUROPE:
First Blow

Taking the first crack at Hitler's Fortress Europe in the expected three-headed offensive from the west, south and east, the U. S. and British armies in Italy launched a powerful drive against German Gustav line below Anzio.

In the west, Allied bombers poured thousands of tons of explosives on the Nazis' rail network in France, Belgium and Germany, over which anti-invasion Comdr. Erwin Rommel must shuttle troops and supplies to meet the assault against his coastal defenses. In Russia, the Reds reportedly moved troops up in line for a big offensive to coincide with western operations.

Under command of Britain's Gen. Harold Alexander, the Allied push in Italy up the broad valleys leading to Rome got underway after a thunderous artillery bombardment, while the Nazis tried to neutralize other Allied forces massed on the Anzio beachhead in their rear to the northwest.

U. S. VS. WARD'S:
Nothing Settled

Although government troops marched in and out of Montgomery Ward & Company's Chicago plant arousing the nation to a pitch over the dramatic course of events, nothing, it seemed, had been settled.

An election had been held to determine the CIO United Mail Order, Warehouse and Retail Employees' union right to bargain collectively for the company workers, but Ward's had never objected to such an election and stood ready, as previously, to negotiate with the union.

Left unsettled, however, was Ward's objection to extension of the maintenance of membership contract with the union, which provides that its members must remain in good standing for the life of the agreement.

DRAFT:
30-37 Spared

Confident of meeting the services' demands for manpower out of the pool of younger men unless unexpectedly high battle casualties are suffered, draft officials gave a new lease on civilian life to men from 30 to 37 years of age by indefinitely deferring them if engaged in essential occupations.

At the same time, it was ruled that men in the 26 to 29 year age group were to be eligible for six-month deferments if found to be necessary and regularly employed in an essential occupation. Deferments in the 18 to 25 year age group will continue to be confined to strictly key-men.

In indefinitely deferring men in the 30 to 37 group in essential work, local boards were advised not only to go by the War Manpower commission's list of necessary jobs, but to make determinations of their own.

'EYE BANK':
Store Corneas

For use of attempted restoration of sight in persons blinded by explosions, burns and ulcers, an "eye bank" has been established at the New York hospital for storing corneas, the transparent part of the coat of the eyeball.

Corneas will be collected either from living persons or from those arranging for their removal after death, in which case they have to be obtained within four hours of the individual's expiration.

Cornea transplants are effective in restoring eyesight in 20 out of 100 cases of blindness, it is reported.

Specialists in Guerilla Tactics Practice Bloodless Raids in Preparation for Big Battle to Come.

"Halt—who's there?"

This sentence, barked out in one startled exhalation, stopped the stealthy form which had suddenly materialized out of the shadow of a plane. His dark wet suit stuck to his lithe form. His hands went up as the sentry's bayonet stopped just short of his midriff. There was no moon. The two figures, hardly visible to each other in the black, froze for a second as the sentry's nervous trigger-finger grew a little more steady. He called the guard.

There was the crescendo scuff-scuff-scuff of hurrying feet and a moment later, the sentry was patrolling the airdrome again very much on the alert. . . .

"For the fifth time, I ask you where you came from," the angry colonel demanded. For the fifth time came the same answer from the prisoner in the wet jungle suit.

"Private, first class, James O'Fallon, Serial No. 3030496."

"Take him away," said the colonel finally, "he can stay in the guardhouse for the duration."

The guards hustled No. 3030496 off to the hoosegow where he stumbled over an assortment of "AWOLS" and other bleary-eyed offenders. He saw three other men lying peacefully on the floor arrayed like him. But no sign of recognition on their blackened faces.

Bloodless Raid

Private first class O'Fallon and his four comrades (although the colonel didn't know it at the time) were the only men captured out of a raiding party of 40. The rest had slipped catlike over the whole airbase, chalked their initials on planes, sketched the location of the radio room, noted the position of the antiaircraft guns, estimated the size of the garrison, checked each rock and sandbar in the shallows through which they had crawled before they reached the beach.

Of course, this was only a practice raid like dozens of others, the preparation for which I have witnessed. But real bullets had twice that night whistled out over shadows and set the big grey Snauzers yipping and the flashlight stabbing into the black sky above the base.

The unwritten story of these specialists will all come out some day. The Japs did this kind of thing at the beginning of the war and we thought it incredible. The British did it later with their brilliant "commandos."

The old name for it is guerilla warfare . . . fighting behind the lines, or in the more official language of an article by Douglas Smith in that trenchant military publication, the Cavalry Journal, "a phase in trained armed warfare that concentrates on destruction (the raiders destroy, the scouts merely get information) of enemy personnel and equipment in the enemy's own territory."

Back in the French and Indian wars, the ancestors of Douglas Smith began learning these tricks; Captain Smith, an American citizen and later of the French foreign legion, has put on paper some of the principles he has adduced from his own experiences in World War II.

Excellent Results

"The usual method of attacking an airdrome," says Captain Smith in recounting one of his experiences with the guerillas composed of British and French in Libya, "was for the men to leave their cars (the rubber boat of the desert) and go on foot up to the airdrome at night. When possible, they passed the sentries without detection and put their bombs on the airplanes (chalk marks when you just rehearse) then left the airdrome and got sufficiently far away before the bombs went off.

"Of course," says Captain Smith laconically, as the descendant of a good Indian fighter would, "this was not always possible and many times, sentries had to be killed in hand-to-hand fighting by a sudden attack with a knife. . ." Although the Germans made every effort to protect their planes against such attacks, approximately 300 enemy planes were destroyed by this guerilla unit in a single 12-month span.

Captain Smith, writing in the early days of the war, says, "in case of the invasion of Europe," the benefits derived from guerillas would be "of the greatest assistance to an army opening a bridgehead."

Well, not only the land guerillas but also the men who come up out of the sea by night are of "greatest assistance" whether you call them by the romantic name of "commandos" or the more prosaic American designation of "scouts and raiders." The French have their land guerillas who are already playing a vital part in the battle of Germany. The part our Scouts and Raiders have in the same epic event will some day be sung in appropriate measures.

But let's get back to our personal history. The day after the bloodless "raid" which I described to you, a captain from the raided airbase was visiting at "raider" headquarters.

Said the captain, after his third coca cola: "About your raiders running hog wild over our joint last night. We caught them all—four of them. They walked right into the sentry's arms—and darn near got drilled."

The raider officer who lived his part and looked it—he was still unshaven—got up and picked up a rifle, shining like a schoolboy's morning face, that was standing in the corner.

The Colonel Errs

"Take this back to your colonel," he said, "and have him check its number. He knows it stands in the rack right outside his door and if you have an inspection worth a nickel, it's been missing about nine hours."

The captain cocked an eye.

"Yep," said the raider, "I plucked it from the bush and would have had the name plate off the skipper's door too if I hadn't heard a step in the hall. Want to see a sketch of your layout?" He tossed a sodden notebook on the table.

Yes, it was just "play." But the young officer who had been pushing the pigskin around for one of our storied gridirons only two years ago had played at more serious games in Africa before he came back to be an instructor—he had landed on more than one enemy beach, wiggled past sentries, human and canine, just as he had when he worked his way up to the commandant's door, stole the rifle, inched his way back to a clump of bushes, dug out his deflated rubber raft, blew it up and paddled back to safety.

Duck soup for him. He'd done it all before in earnest — once when there had been a quick flash of a knife and some blood—and a sentry's last groan, stifled by a hand that had to wipe some enemy blood from it. And for that, he wears a little ribbon on his dress tunic which you can't buy by the yard.

Women and the War

What is going to happen to the millions of women who are now filling jobs in war industries when (1) those industries are discontinued or converted to peace-time operations, (2) millions of men come home from the war looking for jobs?

A group of women who meet in Washington frequently, have been hard at work for months on plans to deal with such an emergency. They are the women's advisory committee of the War Manpower commission, headed by Miss Margaret A. Hickey, and they have just made some specific recommendations to War Manpower Chief McNutt.

The women's committee says that:

Employers should give their women workers notice of cessation of work as far ahead as possible;

Women to be laid off first should be those on the split-shift, including mothers of children for whom part-time working arrangements have been made;

Women who wish to resign from their jobs voluntarily should be asked to do so as soon as possible;

Women who have to be dismissed because of the curtailment of work should be given consideration as to skill, seniority and dismissal pay, based on length of service;

Plans should be made for advising women who are dismissed about such things as transferring to other jobs, retraining for other jobs and their social security rights.

What action the manpower commission will take along these lines remains to be seen. But at least the women have spoken up.

Fountain Gushes 'Blood'

The "Fountain of Blood," flowing from a grotto near La Virtud, Honduras, is one of the world's strangest sights. The liquid, which coagulates and has the appearance of real blood, obtains its color and consistency from a microscopic organism that dies in it.

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.
You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.

"Oh yeah!" was the reaction of Private Oscar Purkey today. "It all depends on the WAC. Personally I would not marry no girl for her military experience!

"Now if she is just a private maybe it would not be so bad, although I think it does no good to a marriage to have the wife used to military routine, to driving trucks maybe and to sleeping four or six to a room. And if she is a officer, no dice!

—*—

"Once a girl has got used to being saluted it is a bad business. She will think she always rates it. Also a wife who has been a officer, even if just a corporal will be used to giving orders that she will never want to just give hints when she wants something. If there are any words which does not fit in the language of love they is 'Attention!' 'On the double!' and 'Forward march!'

—*—

"And how is a G.I. gonna get a wife all excited over what he done in the war if she was in it too? She could even have more citations than he ever got! A husband should be a hero to his wife and it won't be easy if she also has decorations.

—*—

"Yeah, there may be some advantages. I guess a wife from the WACs would be handy around the house. She could change the tire, fix the carburetor, find out what blew out the fuse and everything like that. And she would be satisfied with just a couple of hats a year.

—*—

"But I would not marry no WAC, as swell as they are. They are great gals. But they will of got the army spirit and met a lot of other WACs and all their lives they will be packing and rushing off to Chicago, Boston and San Francisco for annual conventions and reunions.

—*—

"And another thing. If a man marries a WAC who gets up and investigates noises at night?"

—*—

All-Out Arlene, the WAC of WACs, had something to say. "I don't know whether I'll make a better wife," she said, "but I will need a better husband. The army has shattered a lot of illusions about men. They no longer wow me as superior creatures.

—*—

"War has made us girls self reliant, independent, tough and practical. We will never be awed again by a man just because he is good looking, has a deep voice and is rather sweet. But I don't think I'd marry a military man anyhow. Who wants to sit up all night comparing battle experiences?"

Belated Confession to a Criminal Past

We see where some men have landed in court for selling some little pills on the claim that, dropped into a gas tank, they will increase mileage. Well, we don't know anything about this particular case, but the arrest makes us tremble a little. For back in our boyhood days we were a party to a similar project.

—*—

With old Bob Hyman, who used to be cashier on the New Haven Register, we became New England agents for a gasoline energizer. Mr. Hyman shared our burning yen to get into business. We read about a pill that would give more pep to gasoline. Gas then cost only around 12 cents a gallon, but is was thought pretty costly.

—*—

We acquired the agency by the simple process of putting up a few dollars and providing an address to which the pellets could be shipped. We received several crates of them. Several natives tried them free and announced that they not only increased mileage but gave a car wings. However, nobody seemed inclined to try them out on a cash basis. The pills must be in Bob Hyman's cellar even now.

The Nazis claim they have a new secret weapon which can freeze people to death at 500 yards. Something that has as its basic element Hitler's bloodstream, we understand.

With all but the choicer cuts of beef point-free there is some chance of a hamburger becoming almost as good as a hamburger.

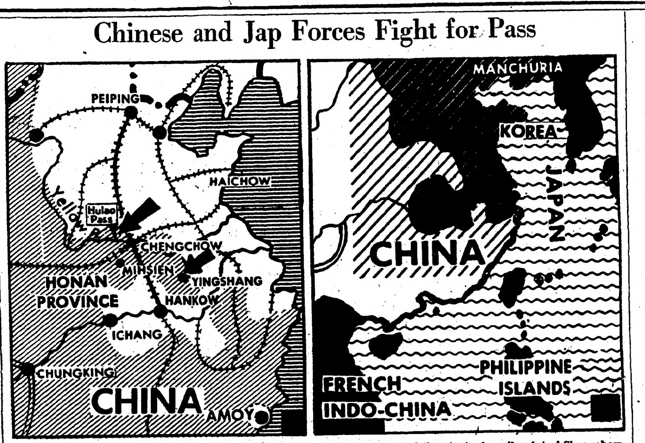
A druggist who has served seven years in prison has been found innocent and released. The courts have cleared him, but the man, now 64, must feel something less than satisfied. We would hate to be a druggist in a similar position and recognize the judge or prosecutor asking: "Have you something that will put me to sleep?"

Chinese and Jap Forces Fight for Pass



Savage fighting between Chinese and Jap forces in Honan, west of the strategic rail point of Chengchow, now centers on Hulao Pass, which the enemy is reported as rapidly fortifying, following its capture, to prevent counter-attacks. Arrows in the map indicate centers of fighting outside Mihsien, where the Chinese have circled the enemy, and Yingshang where the Japs have been more successful. Diagonal lines in map at right indicate the general zone of action in relation to China.

Mass Baptism on Anzio-Nettunio Beachhead

Squatting on the sand, this choir of American doughboys (left) supplied hymnal music during a mass baptismal ceremony held at the Anzio-Nettunio beachhead, in Italy. More than a score of U. 'K' Ration Feast

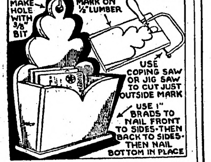
A Marshallese boy perches comfortably on a wind-twisted coconut tree and prepares to open a box of marine K-rations. The natives found U. S. rations a welcome change.

Handy Wall Pocket For Ration Books

EARLY American wall pockets cut out of light weight pine or scraps of half-inch material may have many modern uses. In the kitchen they are just the thing for ration books and a pad for the grocery list. Just inside the front door one will lend a decorative note and make a convenient place for driving gloves and keys.

Originally these pockets were made in a great variety of designs and were used for letter boxes.



MAKE HOLE WITH 3/8" BIT
MARK ON ½" LUMBER
USE COPING SAW OR JIG SAW TO CUT JUST OUTSIDE MARK
USE 1" BRADS TO NAIL FRONT TO SIDES-THEN BACK TO SIDES-THEN NAIL BOTTOM IN PLACE

They are still useful for this purpose or for a leave-a-note pad and pencil. If you enjoy working with wood you may want to cut these pockets out by hand as shown here. But if you have a jig saw available it is much faster.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Milk, or latex, flows from the rubber tree best in early morning. Therefore, rubber tappers start their day's work long before dawn.

An overload which might reduce the life of a crude rubber tire only 25 per cent or even be carried through until the tread was worn smooth, may reduce the life of a synthetic rubber tire 50 per cent or more and result in a blowout while there is still wear in the tread.

Rubber belting, which now plays such an important part in mining and industrial operations, was first manufactured in this country in 1836.

One-Way Ride

When a nation of free people turns its political course in the direction of State Socialism, there is something strangely final about it. Not one comes back without a revolution. Many an ignorant European toiler has danced in colorful costume beneath what he was told to call an arch of triumph for Government Management, learning very soon that it was a yoke of endless bondage.

Why do they blunder into such traps? This question puzzles many Americans. Don't Europeans know any better? Can't they see what happens to other nations nearby? To both questions, the answer is "No." In many European countries the enlightened class is the ruling class and it is small. Many poor folk who read a little can't afford a newspaper. They don't have a chance to use their heads. Craftier people fool them and rob them endlessly.

Can Happen Here

Somebody is always trying a European shell-game on the American people with rather poor success because the average American is equipped to protect himself. Unfortunately socialistic flim-flam has fooled some people on this side of the ocean. Americans who boost government management have little to say in its favor. They talk more about the abuses of Private Enterprise than about the advantages of other systems.

I wonder how often I have heard some intelligent person say, "In America, 5 per cent of the people own 95 per cent of the wealth." Most people who repeat the falsehood have no idea where they first heard it. It sounds like statistics but it's not. It is plain propaganda to dissatisfy honest people with what they have and make them want something else—anything else.

Here's the Truth

Just recently the U. S. Department of Commerce gave out some real figures on national income, and they ought to blot out that 5-95 myth everywhere. National income is no puzzle either: Everybody understands personal income; that's what one person earns. Family income is the sum of what everybody in the family earns. Just so, national income is the grand total of what all Americans earn.

In 1943, our national income was 150 billion dollars. Two thirds of this (100 billion dollars) went to working people in the form of salaries and wages. Farmers got 13 billion more. Corporations got eight billion dollars, and most of them were not big corporations. If all corporations are big-bad-wolves with greedy hearts, how did they permit workers to beat them to 87½ per cent of the money last year?

A Fatal Decision

Whether they have any reason for it or not, most advocates of government management (which leads eventually to government ownership) are angry at corporations. They have not been taught that corporations provide the jobs at which workers earned their 100 billion dollars, nor that the 13 billion dollars received by farmers was money used to feed the families of those same workers.

If prejudiced people turn to government management as the plainest road leading away from capitalism; if they can get enough other people to turn with them, they should understand that they are taking a one-way road. Private enterprise has made the world's most prosperous country; State Socialism has consistently failed. Some systems can be changed, but nations going to government management do not return without violence.

War Bonds in the Farmer's Reserve Fund

by O. R. Johnson
Professor of Agricultural Economics
University of Missouri

FAVORABLE seasons, wartime prices, and a lot of hard work as their contribution to the war effort, have brought corn belt farmers three years of record breaking production and income. Every farmer naturally wants to use this income in the best possible way. Recent experiences in insecurity have no doubt impressed us all with the wisdom of using these earnings to increase as much as possible the security of our homes and professions.

Certainly complete or substantial debt repayment or better adapted terms of repayment will contribute to security. Provision for a substantial reserve fund to protect against unusual hazards or as a basis of non-mortgage credit for temporary needs adds to this security. When well handled, this reserve is one of the most useful features of a good farm business. For effective farming, adequate reserves are as useful as modern equipment, and lack of reserves about as serious a handicap as the lack of modern equipment.

Such a reserve should be regarded as a permanent feature of the farm business setup. It will facilitate effective farm business operation year after year.

War Bonds can provide this reserve in a most desirable way. They are as safe as our government itself, earn interest, and can be readily turned into cash if absolutely necessary. Their purchase achieves the additional objective of helping to finance the war.

The present boom in land prices indicates that many farmers, along with city investors, are putting some of their earnings into land. Unless such purchase is completely paid for, a mortgage debt, possibly at inflated values, may jeopardize the security aspect of such procedure. This practice is certainly contributing to a land price boom, which will not prove of help to American agriculture.

Security for the farm family will require some replacement of equipment and some restoration of soil and improvements. Judgment would indicate gradual replacement and restoration because supplies will be limited and costs probably high in the early postwar period. Should our postwar economy resemble that of the past, there will be more favorable times a little later for such replacements and improvements. Dollars will have more purchasing power than in the early postwar period.

Savings carried as War Bonds should, therefore, be regarded as reserves for two purposes, (1) postwar necessary replacements; and, chiefly, (2) continuous reserves to provide for emergency operating needs, just as extra power or feed serve to meet emergency needs.

War bonds are especially adapted for investment of reserve funds not only because they are secure and can be turned into cash to meet an emergency need, but also because they are constantly earning interest. Reserves carried as cash seldom do this. We will all need to help provide the carrying charges for the public debt when the war is over and the readjustment to peacetime employment is completed. Interest on such a reserve fund will insure the owner that, to this extent, taxes to pay carrying charges on the public debt are not an extra burden.

Fluff Plant Runs 24-Hour Day

For the first time in all history of the village we now have a factory here that is running the full twenty-four hours a day. This is the Cattail Fluff plant which started on Monday with three shifts of men working there. The day shift consisting of the old crew, Frank Smith, Carsten Sagstuen, Oscar Carlson and Clarence Bottem start at 7 a. m. and works until 4 p. m. Then the swing shift Duane and Kenneth Larson, Marvin and Irvin Larson and Leonard Ness, work from 3 p. m. to 11 p. m. The graveyard shift from 11 to 7 a. m. is taken over by O. L. Johnson, Willie Sorum, Reuben Bottem and Howard Horien.

The making of fluff from the cattail picked last winter in now trebled at the plant and they expect to have it all processed here by late fall.

Orlin Ness is manager of the plant and O. T. Ness is the general supervisor. This means a lot to a small town to have a plant running that employs 15 people on a 24 hour basis and the pay roll involved is not to be sneezed at as it will run into a lot of money for this community and the men working.

The bride attended Concordia College in Moorhead and is now stationed in Washington, D. C. The groom was also graduated from Concordia and is employed in the Navy Department.

5th War Loan Starts June 12

An intensive one- week campaign—June 12th through June 17th — during which Marshall county's 275 or more representatives of the U. S. Treasury department will call on every individual to secure pledges to raise Marshall county's $75,000 quota in the Fifth War Loan, was planned at a meeting of the Marshall County War Finance committee at Hotel Warren last Thursday night.

The committee members were guests of the Warren Commercial club at a dinner preceding their organization and planning meeting which precedes a series of district meetings to train solicitors which will get under way next week.

Speakers at the meeting Thursday included R. E. Melbo, president of the Warren Commercial club and chairman of the Warren district; W. O. Braggans, chairman of solicitors training; Chas. N. Kranz, chairman farm organization; Miss May Nelson, chairman of the women's division and O. M. Mattson, county chairman.

"While the quota is high, Marshall county cannot afford to ever let it be said that Marshall county failed to back up its sons by lending the nation its dollars to pay the costs of our fight for freedom," it was emphasized at the meeting. "Our task will be great, but not in comparison to what our boys who are sacrificing their all for us on the fighting fronts of the world. Every individual must subscribe generously to this campaign starting on June 12."

Townships and village quotas have been established and every village and township will have a 20 per cent increase over the 4th War Loan.

Lumber Jacks Do Their Bit in Biggest Log Roll

Jean Mullins, 15, lives in one of the many logging camps near Allagash, Maine, which recently contributed a total of 10,000,000 feet of lumber to the largest drive in the East since 1900. The drive was aimed to tie in with the European invasion, since every foot of this wood will go to the war effort. Jean is shown at left rolling a log with her peavey from the pile into the St. John river. PRESIDENT'S HEALTH

When congressional leaders called at the White House for the first legislative conference following the President's return from South Carolina, he looked fit as a fiddle. However, Senate Majority Leader Alben Barkley popped the question that has had the capital worried because of those wild rumors about the Commander-in-Chief's health.

"How do you feel?" asked the Kentuckian.

"Great," replied Roosevelt. He added that he had got in 12 hours of sleep a night and plenty of sunshine.

He was brown as a berry and buoyant as ever. However, congressional leaders noted that his face was a little thinner. Admiral Ross T. McIntire, the President's physician, accepts responsibility for this. Roosevelt has knocked off 10 pounds under McIntire's orders. He is still five pounds overweight according to his physician's standards, but McIntire figures that this can be corrected by proper dieting.

NAZI CHANNEL DEFENSES

Of all the variegated defenses Hitler has conceived to block the Second Front — from rocket-guns to flame on the Channel—the one which the Allies are worried most about is the plain, relatively old-fashioned machine-gun nest.

The Nazis have developed a new type of machine-gun nest, tried it out at Cassino, and it was one reason for our failure to advance.

This pillbox is of very heavy concrete, quite small, extends only a foot or so above the ground and is extremely difficult to see from the air. The pillbox usually houses two machine guns, hitched together so that one man can fire both.

One Nazi is in each pillbox so that if he is hit only one man is lost. But it takes almost a direct bomb hit to knock him out, so air pounding of them from overhead is not too effective. These pillboxes, buried in the mountains at Cassino, were terrifically effective, and more of them are reported lying in wait behind the shore along the coast of western Europe.

DISCHARGE BUTTONS

With more than a million men now honorably discharged from the army for wounds, health or age, the question of honorable discharge buttons becomes more and more important.

It took the army some time to design a discharge button, but now that it is designed, men and officers have a hard time getting it—unbroken. The buttons are made of plastic and when mailed to veterans, usually arrive in broken pieces.

One discharged air force captain got his discharge button all right in an envelope from Maj. Jesse C. Hicks, assistant quartermaster, Hill Field, Ogden, Utah. But there was no packing around it and it was in several pieces. When he wrote back for a new button, Major Hicks replied:

"There are no provisions for replacing broken buttons. Therefore, we are unable to comply with your request."

Note—Some of the boys think that with all the gold we have buried at Fort Knox, we could spare some for those discharged.

STATE DEPARTMENT HARANGUE

Dignified, delightful British Ambassador Lord Halifax called on Undersecretary of State Stettinius some time ago on a secret matter. While they were closeted together, Assistant Secretary of State Adolf Berle, diminutive and precocious, joined them.

Soon, high-pitched scolding voices came from Stettinius' office. Callers in his anteroom could not help overhearing the harangue as it reverberated even through the heavy mahogany doors of the state department.

Finally, Lord Halifax was ushered out. Later Stettinius came out, followed by Berle, who looked a bit agitated.

"Was I too tough with him?" asked Berle.

"No," said Stettinius, "you were just right."

"I felt," said Berle, with the air of a parent who has just delivered a good spanking, "that it simply had to be done."

What it was all about was not divulged, but Berle has been carrying on long discussions and arguments with the British regarding the future air routes of the world.

JEEP INVESTIGATION

Government bureaucrats were taken for a sleigh ride behind closed doors when they attempted to justify budget requests for "investigating" jeeps, during hearings on the supplemental national defense bill.

Engineering experts of the department of agriculture sprang the jeep scheme, claiming that they needed $15,000 to determine the value of the jeep for farm work "as a substitute for tractor power." It was noted that the current tractor shortage might get worse after the war.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

U.S. Employment Shows Decline; Nazis Continue Retreat in Italy; Japanese Tighten Grip on China

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Zero Hour—Yanks await signal to attack Jap machine gun nest in Burma.

EMPLOYMENT:
On Decline

For the first time since the war began, the nation's manpower appeared in balance with needs, with supply of labor in critical areas the only problem, the National Industrial Conference board said.

Earlier the department of agriculture noted a 4 per cent decline in farm labor, with some of the decrease attributed to the inability to get into the fields because of unfavorable weather. As a result of the delay, many farmers were expected to switch acreage from small grains to row crops, necessitating additional work.

Reflecting the continued drop in manufacturing industries, there were 41,800,000 non-farm workers in March, compared with the peak of 43,000,000 in July, 1943. Only in transportation was there an increase shown over last year.

EUROPE:
Foe Reels

With soldiers from six nations fighting shoulder to shoulder in Allied ranks, the Germans fell slowly back in Italy, their retreating columns under heavy fire of the advancing host, drawing closer to the Eternal City of Rome.

As the Allied blow fell in Italy, thousands of U. S. and British planes continued their heavy bombardment of Axis communications and industry in western Europe, their explosives twisting steel rails into fanciful forms and reducing segments of factories into smouldering pyres. Preparatory to a great offensive from the east, Russian bombers hammered at Nazi supply bases.

With the collapse of their Gustav line in Italy, the Germans fell back slowly toward the Anzio beachhead to the north, where their embattled troops clashed with massed Allied forces slugging for a breakthrough, which would trap the retreating army from the rear.

West Wall

The searching eyes of aerial photography have uncovered what lies ahead of Allied troops massed to storm Germany's formidable west wall.

Under command of icy, 69-year-old Field Marshal von Rundstedt, the west wall shapes up as a series of deeply entrenched steel and concrete fortifications stretching back far inland, and carefully camouflaged to prevent concentration of Allied fire on them.

Dotting the scenic French landscape are innocent-looking, little houses, sheltering the muzzles of big German field pieces whose carriages are sunk into the ground, and poking their noses from the sides of hills, are rocket guns buried in the terrain.

CRYPTOSTEGIA

The government's experimental rubber project in Haiti has been abandoned as a failure and an investment of $8,000,000 is being written off. It was explained that it was found impossible to recover any appreciable quantity of rubber from the desert vine "cryptostegia" which was grown on the 40,000 acre tract.

It had been confidently hoped that this tough plant would become a major source of rubber for this hemisphere and would provide a money crop for the natives.

PACIFIC:
1,000-Mile Advance

With his forces taking another long jump of 125 miles to the northwest in Dutch New Guinea, Gen. Douglas MacArthur advanced closer to his cherished goal of the Philippines, there to avenge Bataan.

The latest gain drew U. S. forces nearer to the thick cluster of islands lying off Dutch New Guinea which the enemy reportedly has fortified with air bases to counter any Allied thrust against the Indies to the south or the Philippines to the north.

In advancing 125 miles westward, U. S. forces were 1,000 miles away from Milne Bay, far to the southeast and from which General MacArthur launched the campaign that has gradually pushed the Japs out of their farthest South Pacific holdings.

TRANSPORTATION:
Overhauling Asked

Correction of inequalities and discriminations in present freight rate structures to reflect the cost of service, and creation of three permanent federal agencies to keep abreast of transportation problems, were among the recommendations made by a special board of investigation and research organized by congressional enactment in 1940.

At the same time, the board went into the south's protest against certain freight rate differences benefiting the northeast, declaring that figures showed that what the south really needed was a development of her own industry to utilize her abundant natural resources.

The board called for the shippers' freedom in the selection of reasonable joint routes and rates of the same or different types of transportation facilities to speed commerce.

CHINA:
Seek Unity

With the Japanese tightening their grip on China through their control of her seaports and productive industrial centers, Chiang Kai-Shek moved to gird the country for a final stand against the enemy by drawing the Communists in the north fully into the battle.

As Chiang met with Communist leader Lin Tso-han, Chinese regulars continued their drive into northern Burma, in an effort to join up with Lieut. Gen. Joseph Stilwell's troops moving eastward from India, and thus open a new supply route to China.

Upon the extent of Chiang's concession of self-rule and participation in the Chinese central government to the Communists reportedly will rest the degree of their cooperation.

BRITISH EMPIRE:
Favor League

Having concluded their long conference with Prime Minister Churchill, Britain's dominion premiers packed their bags for the trip homeward, but not before issuing a statement favoring a world peace organization and avowing a fight to the finish against the common enemy.

"We affirm that after the war a world organization . . . should be set up and endowed with the necessary power and authority to prevent aggression and violence," the premiers said.

"We rejoice in the unquenchable spirit of our comrades in every country still in the grip of the enemy," the premiers declared. "We shall not turn from the conflict till they are restored to freedom. Not one who marches with us shall be abandoned."

MISCELLANY:

LESS MEAT: There will be about ten pounds less meat per capita available during the latter half of the year, the bureau of agricultural economics estimates. This would mean that average consumption per person for the six month period would total 67.5 pounds, about the same as in the second half of 1943, when all meats were on the ration list.

REHABILITATION:
Navy Program

After six months of operation of the rehabilitation program for men and women at the U. S. naval hospital at Great Lakes, exhibits told an interesting story of the success of the project under direction of Lieut. Comdr. R. E. Kinneman.

On display were fancy scarves, purses and belts in yellows, whites and greens. There were such useful articles as ash trays and billfolds, and such chippery bric-a-bracs as clay turtles and yarn dogs. Pictures caught the charm of the outdoors and depicted naval life.

Created to stimulate the minds of patients as well as restore the mobility of injured limbs, the rehabilitation program also has served to help the convalescents to uncover many talents of which they were never aware.

OIL:
New Field

With the discovery of a promising big oil field in Mississippi which alreay has brought in two large wells, attention was focused on a whole tier of southeastern states.

According to oil authorities, approximately 155,000 miles of territory at the roots of the Appalachian mountains in North Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Mississippi are underlain by sedimentary rocks, which might bear much petroleum.

Although a 130,000 mile territory in Texas and Louisiana has already given up 14 billion barrels of oil, authorities' enthusiasm for the prospective southeastern field has been tempered by reports that its zones for accumulation of petroleum are fewer in number and the thickness of the sedimentary rocks are less than in the Texas and Louisiana regions.

LABOR:
Foremen Back

Gen. Arnold
R. H. Keyes

Three thousand five hundred members of the Independent Foremen's association of America trooped back to their jobs in Detroit, Mich., plants after the chief of the army air forces, Gen. H. H. Arnold, declared their strike had already cost production of 250 long-range P-51 fighter planes and could affect invasion operations.

As a result of the foremen's walkout over demands for union recognition which industry opposed on its traditional grounds that foremen are a part of management, nearly 50,000 workers had been laid off because of the lack of adequate supervision of production.

Following General Arnold's testimony, the association's national president, Robert H. Keyes, issued instructions for ending the strike, charging the government with delaying settlement of the case.

REFRIGERATION:
Ease Space

With warehousemen and food handlers cooperating fully with the War Food administration's information centers, cooler occupancy was at 82 per cent in May, with much space of this type not ordinarily used at this time well filled.

At the same time, WFA announced that freezer occupancy stood at 85 per cent in May, with much room made available by the clearance of fruits, vegetables and poultry.

With demand for cooler space expected to continue, WFA revealed that it would push its program for converting cooler space at 32 degrees to 50 degrees to freezer space at 31 degrees and lower, and vice-versa.

JOINT COMMAND:
Draws Support

The touchy question of combining the different branches of the services into a single command, so strongly favored by the army, drew the support of President Woodrow Wilson's secretary of the navy, Josephus Daniels.

Mincing no words, Daniels declared that the disaster at Pearl Harbor resulted from a divided command, and asserted: "History is replete with the squabbles between the army and navy which prolong wars, showing the necessity of combination."

When he was working for unification of the services during World War I, Daniels said, Secretary of War Lindley Harrison told him: "Joe, I don't care a damn about the navy and you don't care a damn about the army. You run your machine and I will run mine."

DISEASE

The campaign against social diseases scored a victory on one front and lost ground on another last year. In the second half of 1943 there was a decline of 16 per cent in new cases of syphilis among civilians but gonorrhea cases jumped 11 per cent.

The number of new syphilis cases for the six months term was 245,000, compared with 290,000 in the second half of 1942. Gonorrhea cases were set at 158,000, compared with 137,000 in the latter part of the preceding year.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

After the war American synthetic plants should produce enough to meet our military requirements, perhaps 200,000 tons or more a year, and as much additional as can be justified through the free play of economic forces to meet then current civilian needs. This is the recommendation of John L. Collyer, president of The B. F. Goodrich Co.

At the beginning of the year our stockpile of natural rubber was less than one quarter of what it was at the time of Pearl Harbor. Unless plantations are recaptured from the Japs and immediately put into operation our imports of crude are not expected to exceed 80,000 tons in 1944.

Pulling Together

One of the first political discussions I ever heard that rose above the level of gossip had to do with something called "the tariff wall," a high, protective, import tax. I listened only, as becomes small boys, while two mature neighbors talked it over. Their genuine interest was contagious and I still remember much of what they said. The impression I got might not have been accurate but it was fairly typical of views at that time.

Manufacturers in the North, I gathered, were all in favor of a high protective tariff. They didn't want foreign-made things to enter the United States and be sold in competition with things they were making. Those northern manufacturers, I was informed, were Republicans. My neighbors, like most farmers in that climate, were Democrats and opposed a high tariff. If Europe had better and less costly merchandise to offer, they were in the market for it.

Farmers Produce

Those two respected neighbors have passed on, along with most men of their generation. The tariff wall, as a political issue, is dead too. I have told this homely story, however, to spotlight an issue that is very much alive. Suspicion. All Americans need each other. Mutual distrust among men of different industries is a bigger hazard to this country than prejudices based on race or religion. Business progress requires confidence; credit is only part of it.

Besides being a great country, the United States is big. In its three million square miles dwell 135 million people. They can't all be acquainted but they need to be friends in spite of personal interests and tastes that differ. We have to look out for one another now or we are sunk. Patriotic groups do not have completely opposing interests in the United States. Farmers are not merely consumers; they are the real producers. Manufacturers and their employees, no matter what they produce or how much, are still the country's big consumers.

Workers Consume

Of all the people in America who toil, 18 per cent work on the farm and 82 per cent do something else. It was not that way 100 years ago when nearly two-thirds of our workers plowed the soil, but things have changed. Now two farm hands working in a field produce for nine factory workers whose families must eat. In statistics: Ten million farm hands stock the pantries of 43 million other laborers, not counting the white-collar workers.

The factory town is America's big market for farm products and practically everything else. Those 43 million workers last year received 100 billion dollars in their pay envelopes; two-thirds of America's national income. Dreamers who careen their necks toward Europe looking for post-war farm prosperity need waking up. America's exports in recent pre-war years have been running less than 5 per cent of national income. Every little bit helps but it's still 5 per cent.

We Help Ourselves

Devastated Europe can't do much for America soon after the war. Post-war favors will be from us to them, exclusively. One of our greatest possible post-war services to Europeans would be to lower our tariff bars and buy what they can spare so they, in turn, may buy more of our manufactured goods. We can't serve the rest of the world well unless our own people are prosperous. But if ingenuity and enterprise may remain free, our factories will hum and our farms thrive as never before.

LAND O'LAKES NEWS

SELLING... OR BUYING ...there are advantages for YOU in this organization

THE LAND O'LAKES organization is best known as an efficient, cooperative agency for nationwide distribution of dairy products produced by its individual farmer members.

LAND O'LAKES offers the producer more control over more movements of his merchandise ... expert advice on latest dairy production methods ... participation in patronage dividends ... and greater marketing economies through highly efficient marketing methods.

BUT IN ADDITION, this same efficiency is applied to buying. Mass purchasing of the many things the modern dairy farmer needs results in substantial economies for him. These economies are apparent not only in the initial low price of the goods, but also in patronage dividends that are the result of pooled purchasing of equipment, plant supplies, feeds, seeds and fertilizers.

EARLY CROP PLANS VITAL IF FERTILIZER NEEDS ARE TO BE MET

CHICAGO. — The cooperation of farmers in making early arrangements for their fertilizer supplies is vitally essential this season if producers are to provide the plant foods necessary to help win the battle of food production, according to a statement made public here by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee.

"With supplies of fertilizer smaller than the demand," says the statement, "manufacturers are doing their utmost to see that each farmer gets his fair share of the plant food available. Each farmer, in his turn, should cooperate by helping the fertilizer manufacturer plan to fill farm requirements with the least possible difficulty or delay.

"War-time conditions have drastically changed production and distribution schedules in all fertilizer factories. Formerly the shipping seasons were concentrated into fall and spring rush periods. Now shortages of labor, materials and transportation have changed all that.

"Fertilizer production schedules must be on a year-around basis now instead of on seasonal peaks. Producers are being allocated their raw materials on a relatively uniform basis thruout the year.

"The supply situation is further complicated by a scarcity of both potash and superphosphate brought about by American lend-lease agreements for shipments overseas.

"In view of all these factors, it is evident that the fertilizer tonnage must flow from factory to farm in a steady volume for all the months to come instead of on a seasonal rush basis which cannot be handled as in the past."

It's still BIG MONEY in our business!

The ordinary copper penny has lost a lot of its purchasing power these days—and even some of its copper. But it still buys as much electricity as ever.

For example, right now in your home a penny will toast about twenty slices of bread—or brew ten cups of coffee—or clean five big rugs—or run your refrigerator for several hours.

Rather startling what a penny will do when you think of it that way, isn't it?

Actually, the price of electricity came down so steadily before the war—and it has stayed down so successfully since—that today the average family gets about twice as much electricity for the same money it paid fifteen years ago.

All this didn't just happen, of course. It's due largely to the hard work, efficiency and experience of your friends and neighbors who man and manage this company. That's why a penny, spent for electricity, buys so much.

CAUTION: Even though electricity is cheap—even though it isn't rationed—PLEASE DON'T WASTE IT. Coal, oil, manpower, transportation go into the making of electricity and these are critical war resources.

COME ON HOLT
LET'S DO IT AGAIN!

During the Fourth War Loan Drive in February, Minnesota was the first state in the Union to make her quota. A record like that requires cooperation from every investor—large and small.

The Fifth War Loan starts on the 12th of June. You don't have to be told any longer how necessary it is to buy War Bonds. You KNOW. You don't have to be told what a sound investment they are—how they help to prevent inflation, and to equip our boys, and how helpful they'll be to you ten years from now ... in giving the youngsters an education, buying a new home, or taking care of you when you're working days are over. You know all that by this time.

So all we have to say is, Come on, Holt do it again!

Scrap Iron Emergency

The invasion of the continent by British and American forces marks the beginning of an expenditure of men and material far greater than anything heretofore known in the history of the world, said C. S. McCullock, general salvage executive secretary for North Dakota, WPB.

During the last war, on the first day of the Somme in 1916, the British artillery fired 13,000 tons of artillery ammunition. In the opening attack on July 31 at Ypres, they fired 28,000 tons, and on two successive days, a total of 42,000 tons of artillery ammunition were fired. This is far more iron and steel than we have been able to acquire from the collection of scrap in region 12, which consists of Minnesota Montana, North and South Dakota, during any month this year.

For the past ten months the inventories of scrap iron and steel have been steadily declining The loss since July 1, 1943 has now reached a figure in excess of 700,000 tons. Paper mills have been unable to meet the demand for their products because of an insufficient supply of waste paper.

Every farm, every home, every factory is urged to do its utmost to return every available tin can, every pound of waste fat, paper and iron and steel back to the war effort. The war must not be prolonged because ~~of lack of material needed by our~~ men at the front.

Mr. and Mrs. Ole Hanson of Huron, S. D. and Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Hanson visited at the Sanoden home Tuesday evening and at the V. E. Johnson home Wednesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Haglund and family arrived here Friday from Tacoma, Washington. They have spent the past two years on the west coast. Mrs. Haglund and children will make their home here while Mr. Haglund is going back to work there in the saw mill.

5th War Loan Starts June 12

With the news of the invasion of Western Europe on the minds of every American, Marshall county residents will swing into action next Monday morning to back up this tremendous undertaking in an enthusiatic effort to reach its Fifth War Loan quota of $675,000 in record time.

Marshall county's 275 solicitors will be all primed for the big financing task when they visit every farm, residence and business firm starting Monday and will bend every effort to complete the drive within a week, O. M. Mattson, county war finance chairman, announced today.

"While invasion is the big news of the year, Marshall county residents will be thinking of their loved ones serving with our allied forces in this world's biggest battle, and will be ready to back their boys to the limit of their financial resources to quickly gain victory, said Mr. Mattson.

We must continue to support these invasion forces and the areas they liberate from oppression—and this takes money—lots of it.

"There is no sudden way to end the war, but there is a way to hasten that end: to keep a ceaseless stream of supplies of every sort flowing to the battlefronts. The men (our sons) getting those supplies will do the rest and do it effectively and speedily. They have never let us ~~down.~~ We ~~cannot and dare not~~ let them down now in this critical hour of need. Let's show these boys that Marshall county is backing their every move and in a hurry" Mr. Mattson pleaded.

A Hint To Bicyclists

If a motorist came driving down the street with a passenger in his lap, he would probably be arrested for careless driving. If he had a passenger sitting on the steering wheel, very likely he would be given an examination as to his sanity. Riding a bicycle with a passenger on the handlebars is just as dangerous, says a bulletin from the safety division of the Minnesota Highway Department. A bicycle is made for one person. Two on a bicycle is just as bad as four in the front seat of an automobile.

Polite Storks

American storks (wood ibis) are efficient and polite. When a flock descends on a shallow pond, these birds do a sort of dance to rile the water and force tadpoles and small fish to the surface. As these rise to the top, they are killed by the nearest birds. But only when enough food is floating on the water for the entire flock do the birds begin to feast.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Maintenance of our synthetic rubber plants after the war as "a rubber insurance policy" is advocated by leading rubber authorities. They hold that the U. S. cannot be adequately prepared at all times to defend its national interest unless it is free from the threat of a rubber shortage, a feeling subscribed to by most thinking Americans.

World capacities for producing natural and synthetic rubber after the war will aggregate nearly 2,800,000 tons yearly, predicts John L. Collyer, president of B. F. Goodrich. This is more than twice as much as the world has ever used in any one year.

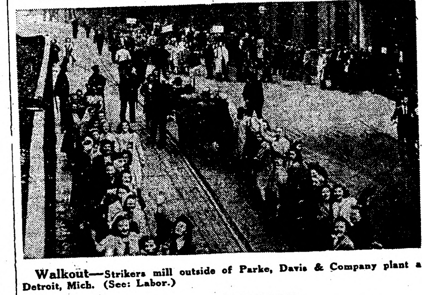
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Allies Continue Advance in Italy; U. S. Airmen Rain Blows on Japs; Political Break Looms in South

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)



Walkout—Strikers mill outside of Parke, Davis & Company plant at Detroit, Mich. (See: Labor.)

PACIFIC:

Buck Air Power

Nibbling further at Jap air power based in the eastern New Guinea area as a defensive bulwark of the Indies and the Philippines, U. S. aviators continued their strikes against enemy airdromes in the region and U. S. ground forces fought over rough country to set up airfields for them.

As General MacArthur's air and ground forces struck out at eastern New Guinea, navy bombers from a strong task force of aircraft carriers hit at enemy island holdings farther to the north, dotting the roadway to the enemy homeland.

U. S. casualties in the eastern New Guinea area remained light as Doughboys expanded their holdings with support of heavy artillery, tanks and warplanes.

POSTWAR:

Churchill Speaks

Organization of the great powers emerging victorious from the war into a single force to preserve future world peace was outlined by Prime Minister Winston Churchill in a discussion of foreign policy in Britain's house of commons.

To prevent either the planning or conduct of future wars by "restless and ambitious nations," Churchill said the Allied powers intend to set up a world organization equipped with all necessary means for maintaining order.

Touching on the delicate Russian-Polish situation, Churchill declared that Poland's surrender of territory in the east might be countered by acquisition of German land.

SOLID SOUTH:

Threaten Break

Long rumored, southern rebellion against the New Deal's social reform, especially in regard to the advocacy of Negro equality, took tangible shape in Texas, where the regular Democratic organization instructed its presidential electors to cast their vote for the party's nominee in the electoral college only if the national convention:

1. Votes disapproval of efforts to nullify state laws for segregation of white and colored school children;

2. Backs up Texas' opposition to the Supreme court ruling opening Democratic primaries to Negroes;

3. Seats the delegates selected by the regular Texas Democratic party instead of delegates chosen by a rival rump organization, composed of members who broke with the regular party over its instructions to the electors.

Electoral Vote

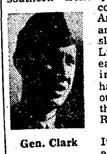
While calmer minds sweated over working out a compromise between the two factions in Texas, speculation arose as to what might happen if the 23 Texas electors should join eight similarly dissatisfied North Carolina electors in voting against the Democratic candidate in the electoral college, whose vote determines the presidential winner.

Since the 31 Texas and North Carolina representatives in the electoral college, made up of electors chosen by the states, could form a majority for either side, they could swing the election to either a Republican or Democrat, being free to vote as they wished. Or then, again, they might vote for an independent person, in which case neither of the two regular candidates would receive a majority and the presidential election then would be referred to the house of representatives. In the house, the party in the majority would decide the election.

EUROPE:

Back Nazis to Wall

With Fifth army troops on the southern front joined with their comrades on the Anzio beachhead, and with the British slugging through the Liri valley to the east, Allied forces in Italy locked hands for a knockout punch against the Germans below Rome.



Gen. Clark

As the fighting in Italy came closer to a showdown, invasion preparations continued, with thousands of Allied bombers ripping up German defenses and airfields in western Europe, and the Allied command issuing detailed instructions to the underground to report enemy troop movements to U. S. and British soldiers when they land.

Tottering under the combined pressure of Lieut.-Gen. Mark Clark's Fifth army and the British Eighth, the Germans fell slowly back to the southeast of Rome for a bitter defensive fight, while Allied aircraft hampered their movements by a steady bombardment of supply lines and motorized concentrations.

LABOR:

Local Punished

While the CIO United Automobile workers suspended officials of a local union for a strike in the Chrysler plant at Detroit, Mich., the CIO Gas, Coke and Chemical workers sanctioned the walkout of 1,900 members of a local at the Parke, Davis and company drug factory in the same city.

In suspending the local officers for the walkout which resulted from their support of a CIO chauffeurs' union fight with a rival AFL organization, the United Automobile workers said they had violated their contract with the company, the UAW constitution, and their no-strike pledge.

Accusing Parke, Davis and company of a "vicious union busting campaign," the Gas, Coke and Chemical workers supported its local's strike, which halted production of blood plasma, penicillin and smallpox vaccination for military and civilian use. Protesting that the position of the company jeopardized the standing of the union, the local's president defied a War Labor board directive to return to work before resuming negotiations.

FOOD:

Supply Good

A factor in the government's possible restoration of rationing on point-free meats may be the necessity for assuring a more equal distribution of such meats, three federal agencies reporting on the general food situation declared. Meantime, some cuts or better grades of meat may become more difficult to obtain.

Although supplies of canned fruits and juices will continue at low levels for the rest of the year, fresh apples, peaches, pears and cherries will be more plentiful. The situation in canned vegetables can be expected to grow tight. Increases in stocks of margarine, shortening and other edible oils will probably offset declines in butter and lard. Because of record spring production of eggs, need for greater consumption persists.

"Civilian diet is sufficient in calories, proteins, iron and vitamin A, but with little margin . . . in the B vitamin and C vitamin," the agencies reported.

BIG GUNS:

The army has sharply increased its demand for large caliber cannon and ammunition it is announced, giving rise to speculation that military leaders anticipate long and severe fighting after invasion beachheads have been secured.

New plant construction has been approved and factories now on a standby basis will return to full operations, official sources disclose. Ammunition schedules have been stepped up to four or five times previous levels.

MISCELLANY

CITRUS RECORD: The Texas crop of grapefruit and oranges this year was the largest in history, and sold for the highest price, the general manager of the Rio Grande Valley citrus exchange said. Grapefruit yield was estimated at 17,539,081 boxes and oranges at 3,354,350 boxes. Total value of both crops was set at $53,469,000 by the exchange official.

STASSEN-DEWEY DOUBLE HITCH?

Very quiet moves have been launched recently by the Dewey and Stassen forces to get together in advance of the Chicago convention.

The approach was made through a close friend of Governor Stassen who came to see Governor Dewey the other day and suggested that while he couldn't speak outright for Stassen, the Stassen forces might be willing to get on the Dewey bandwagon if Stassen could be assured of the No. 2 spot on the Republican ticket.

Dewey replied that he had preferred Governor Warren of California, but he would certainly be glad to consider Stassen for vice president providing, of course, the Minnesota governor withdrew from the race for President in advance.

It was left that Stassen's friend would write to him asking him categorically whether he would withdraw from the presidential race if given the No. 2 place on the ticket, and also whether his forces would cooperate to nominate Dewey. There has not been time as yet to receive a reply.

What the Dewey forces want to prevent is any remote chance of a deadlock at Chicago which might swing the nomination to Stassen, Justice Owen D. Roberts or to Willkie. While they have so many delegates they don't believe there is much chance of this. Nevertheless, they know that Pennsylvania's Joe Pew has been hoping for a deadlock which would throw the convention to Justice Roberts.

NOTE—Friends of Roosevelt are frank in admitting they would much rather have Dewey as an opponent than Roberts. The Supreme court justice has cooperated with the President at Pearl Harbor, has an even better record than Dewey's in breaking up graft as prosecutor of the Teapot Dome scandals, is tall, handsome, a powerful, brilliant speaker. However, GOP diehards consider him too much in favor of international cooperation.

SEVEN-COME-ELEVEN

Maybe war leaders are superstitious or maybe there is something to the old seven-come-eleven system for shaking the dice. Anyway, Stanley Arnold of Cleveland has worked out a calendar of the war showing that every significant event has happened on either the seventh or eleventh of the month. Here is the calendar:

Pearl Harbor	Dec. 7, 1941
Declaration of war on Germany and Italy	Dec. 11, 1941
Fall of Guam	Dec. 11, 1941
Fall of Wake	Dec. 11, 1941
Invasion of Singapore	Feb. 11, 1942
Fall of Corregidor	May 7, 1942
Invasion of Kiska	June 7, 1942
Invasion of Guadalcanal	Aug. 7, 1942
Invasion of No. Africa	Nov. 7, 1942
Invasion of unoccupied France	Nov. 11, 1942
Retaking of Tunis and Bizerte	May 7, 1943
Retaking of Attu	May 11, 1943
Fall of Pantelleria	June 11, 1943

Finally Mr. Arnold points out that the recent renewed attack on Italy started May 11 at 11 p. m.

BREWSTER AXED

The navy has decided that the controversial Brewster Aeronautical corporation will be the first to feel the axe of discontinued war production.

This is good news for the country in that it means that war losses of airplanes are less than expected and that the navy will not need so many replacements. Actually our losses in the Pacific have been about 50 per cent less than estimated.

Also, the news is extremely significant for the airplane industry, because Brewster will be the first big plane company to be turned loose on its own to manufacture commercial planes—if it can get priorities. If it can't get them, it will have to fold.

The Chance Vought company, also making Corsairs (the same type of plane as Brewster), will continue operation, largely because they were the chief pioneers of Corsairs. Also, the Goodyear company will continue, they being about to start on a big new navy plane.

But the Brewster company will now have to fight either for new war contracts or else for priorities for commercial planes. It will be an uphill fight.

NOTE—The Brewster plant near Philadelphia, built with U. S. government funds, will be taken over by the navy and will work on "modification"—in other words, planes that need minor changes. The other Brewster plants around New York will finish up what they are working on and then fold.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

¶ Mrs. Harold Burton, wife of the Ohio senator, complained that her husband's inside coat pocket bulged out with too many papers. So Burton now has his tailor put an inside pocket on both sides, to distribute the burden.

¶ It never leaked out at the time but, on December 7, 1943, the army was worried over a possible token attack on Pearl Harbor as an anniversary raid. The whole island was alerted for fear the Japs would repeat their original performance.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

MR. WALLACE AS AN OFFERING TO CIO

WASHINGTON.—The guessing as to whether Mr. Roosevelt will pick Mr. Wallace as running mate again has been whetted somewhat lately in the congressional smoking cloisters, but it is a rather dull game.

The frequently publicized movements for Speaker Rayburn or Senator Barkley as replacements hardly represent any action or any attempt at organizing a fight, but rather the preferments of senators.

The A. P. and INS tried to conduct polls of the senate, and found most democratic legislators yawningly surmising Mr. R. would probably select Wallace as an offering to CIO, and that nothing they could do or say would make much difference. In fact, most democratic politicos seem to have decided to watch their tongues most carefully, and thereby have created a strange situation, not unlike the period of frozen silence which prepared the way for the third term campaign.

On a free vote of the democratic side of both houses, either Rayburn or Barkley would run far ahead of Wallace. A few months ago, few legislators would have hesitated to say so.

At that time also, the CIO was highly unpopular. Since then, CIO has not changed, but its political action committee has started spending the $700,000 appropriated for the campaign with some successes in the primaries.

The fall of Starnes in Alabama and retirement of Dies has been followed by defeat of Costello (in the aircraft workers district in Los Angeles) and the defeat of Senator Holman for republican renomination in Oregon.

Holman was defeated by a former public member of the War Labor board, Wayne Morse, generally regarded around here as not unfriendly to CIO. The congressional interpretation is that the CIO went into the republican primary, as there was no contest among the democrats, and gave enough votes to defeat Holman, who was not especially popular anyway.

POPULAR SENTIMENT UNCHANGED

There is no ground for interpreting attitude in the nation as a whole toward CIO (the last measuring of popular sentiment nationally having been reflected in the Montgomery Ward case). But those who make democratic politics their business have coupled these events with Mr. Roosevelt's determination (they think) to run and have thus pulled a blanket over their heads, to do any future business thereunder.

Of course, CIO is a minority of a minority, the lesser part of the union labor movement, and these are thinly voted primaries. What force it could bring to bear in an election may be something else again.

For the present, it has at least $700,000 and an apparently ruthless determination to exert its fullest political pressure (even opposing at least one democratic representative who has voted with labor on all except two or three remote issues.)

Mr. Wallace is a leader of this group, in the sense that he chooses to act like a talking custodian for that residue of votes while Mr. Roosevelt is busy with the war.

In dispatching him to China, Mr. R. said he was "a messenger" not a high sounding title (others flying the same route have been called "ambassadors" and "emissaries"), but Mr. Wallace picked up the title proudly in a formal statement. He spoke in the cosmic gradeur of an Oriental mystic with such sentences as:

"The future of China belongs to the world, and the world in justice and peace shall belong to China," whatever that means.

It would appear wiser for Mr. Roosevelt to stand with Wallace, but allow the party to fight for Rayburn or Barkley if it chooses.

The president already has the CIO which has no place else to go, but could gain votes and prestige by pleasing the democratic party men who are awe-struck at the possibility of Wallace again, but realize Mr. Roosevelt has as close or a closer hold on the democratic delegates to this next convention than he had on the last one when he nominated Wallace against the opposition of every other leader.

Senator Truman of Missouri, for instance, came back from Missouri and publicly announced himself for Rayburn.

If all this sounds somewhat perplexing, remember it is not new (Lewis having played the CIO role for the second term and the American labor party and CIO having played it jointly for the third term which was similarly silently approached.) Otherwise, the story is still all in one man's mind, a mind which even Chairman Hannegan and Barkley in their speeches are careful to say they do not know yet.

Sponges Reach Immense Size—Gathering Difficult

In their natural state some sponges grow to gigantic sizes. One recently fished from a great sponge bed off the Bahamas measured ten feet in girth and weighed 100 pounds when dried. Capturing such a monster is hard work. The fisherman has to detach its root with his harpoon, a hooked bamboo rod from 20 to 30 feet long, and then calls in numerous helpers to assist in the catch. When the gelatinous mass reaches the surface, a diver strips it of its trimmings.

William F. Munch Retired

Chester S. Wilson, Minnesota conservation commissioner, today announced the retirement of William F. Munch of Crookston, after 38 years in the state service as a game warden and later as a conservation lecturer.

Munch was appointed by Governor John A. Johnson as a game warden for the state Fish and Game Department in 1905. He recalls that in those days there were only twenty wardens to patrol the whole state and that all their work had to be done on foot and by team. Munch says that through the years he has noted a remarkable change in public sentiment toward game law enfornement - where once there was antagonism and open hostility, there is now understanding and cooperation.

Munch continued to serve as a game warden until nine years ago. Since then he has devoted his full time to lecturing and other educational work for the bureau of information of the state conservation department. He has carried the conservation message to over 600 different schools, many hundreds of civic groups, and 4-H clubs. Bill Munch's large frame and friendly smile are familiar to many thousands of Minnesota youngsters whom he has interested in finding healthful recreation in the outdoors. "There is nowhere in the world," he tells them, where you can get closer to God than on the water, under the trees or beneath the open sky - - study nature, learn the ways of the wild and your thoughts can't help but be pure."

Mrs. C. A. Davis returned here Saturday from Greenbush where she has been staying with her son-in-law and daughter.

Holt Went Over In Bond Drive

Geo. Fricker, Chairman of the Holt District for the Fifth War Loan Drive, reports that the Village of Holt went over the top on its $4,000 quota in this drive in three days. This shows that the people of Holt are willing to back up the boys in the service who now are at all battlefronts of the world giving all they got, that we may have it the way we have it here now and, still better in the future.

You can pay no better tribute to them that to "Buy More Than Before" in this great drive to raise 16 billion dollar for victory.

Buy an extra bond now and keep it. It takes a tremendous amount of material to keep the supplies flowing to the boys in the advance lines of battle and we should all be willing to loan our money to the government for bonds so as to hasten the end of this gigantic conflict and get the boys back home.

Quotas for Holt District

THE STRANGE STORY OF TWO DAIRY FARMERS

John Doe was a good farmer. Sold his butterfat at top market prices (particularly today!) . . . and then forgot about it. He worked hard. But he worked alone!

Richard Roe was a good farmer. Sold his butterfat at top market prices, but HE had an ever increasing interest in his creamery. And the creamery marketed and controlled HIS brand in the major markets of America! And his creamery got expert advice on quality and production. So did Richard! And HE and his creamery bought feeds, seeds and supplies at low prices AND received patronage dividends on their purchases! And HE was represented and kept informed on regional and national dairying problems and planning!

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Synthetic inner tubes need lubrication before being inserted in a casing. Partially inflate the tube and use ordinary pure soapsuds as a lubricant in the absence of a special tube lubrication preparation. Dry synthetic tubes do not "slide" in the tire and unless lubricated may not adjust themselves properly.

Proponents of the continuance of our synthetic rubber insurance policy after the war hold that jungle growth on the rubber plantations and the probability of the Japs wrecking the plantation equipment may mean a loss of two years before normal levels of rubber production can be realized.

The tube on the left is the torpedo, the other is the driving compartment, housing one man. The torpedo tube is shackled to the driving tube and can be released, allowing the pilot to return safely. Admiral Nimitz Wins Horseshoe Contest

The Admiral wins again. In a double match at a recent picnic held for the fleet, the team headed by Admiral C. W. Nimitz, commander in chief, U. S. Pacific fleet and the Pacific ocean areas, won the horseshoe match. While Admiral Nimitz gets set for one of his ringers, Earl R. Lavender, BM 1-c, U. S. navy, of Los Angeles, Calif., awaits his turn. In addition to the horseshoe contest, ball games, swimming, races, boxing, wrestling and other sporting events were included during the picnic. These events are provided whenever possible, but under present fighting conditions in the Pacific it is seldom possible for the sailors to land and enjoy themselves. Most of their entertainment is carried on aboard ship.

Sportlight

by GRANTLAND RICE

NO ONE can say how long Joe Louis and Billy Conn will be in the army or how they will look in the ring after the war is over, and they have traded the khaki for ring shorts.

No one can come close to guessing what new or good heavyweights the armed forces will develop—whether or not said forces will give the game another Gene Tunney.

Billy Conn

In the meanwhile Mike Jacobs is getting along with the best he has left, which at the moment seem to be Lee Savold and Baksi.

Baksi, a big, strong, rugged fellow, game enough and a pretty good puncher, has had some time in which to iron out a few kinks and polish off a number of rough spots. He was at least a prospect when he first came along, but just how much polishing he can absorb is another guess. His main needs have been more speed and much more cleverness, which only come through hard work along these two important lines. These two qualities don't look up and knock.

In their last meeting Savold was much the smoother competitor, but Baksi still proved that he had certain possibilities that could be carried much further with any touch of smartness or ambition.

About Louis and Conn

Joe Louis and Billy Conn still have some time on ahead in which to retain a good part of their stuff.

After all Bob Fitzsimmons was 35 years old when he knocked out Jim Corbett at Carson City. Fitz, with a pair of shattered hands, was still good at the age of 40. Corbett was close to 34 when he carried Jim Jeffries into the 23rd round at Coney Island. It will be several years before Louis and Conn are as old as Fitz and Corbett were in two of their greatest fights.

The point has been made that army life won't be any great help to either. I disagree with this angle. Army life, in the matter of keeping physically fit, is sure to be better than civilian life. I know Louis has been boxing in army shows for the last two years. He is over his old fighting weight by some eight pounds, maybe ten pounds, but that will be easy to take off. Louis never gets far off the proper road. The primrose trail has never appealed to him.

Outside of Gene Tunney, I'd say that Louis has kept in better shape, year after year, than any fighter I've known. Certainly old Ruby Roberts, winning the title at 35, was no stickler for the straight-and-narrow path.

Louis won't be as fast as he was a few years ago. But he will still have most of his punching power and most of his ring skill. He will keep most of his ring instinct. His reflexes won't be quite as rapid, but they will still do in a pinch.

After all, Jack Dempsey had a three-year rest between his Firpo and Tunney contests, without an intervening fight. Jack, in this long layoff, did nothing like the ring work Joe Louis has been doing in the army. He was in nothing like the same shape that Louis is today, and will be for two or three years more. My guess would be that Louis at 34 or 35 will still be something to beat.

Have Some Years Left

Billy Conn is harder to guess. Not so much has been heard about his army life or his army work. But Conn, younger and faster than Louis, a better all-around boxer, should have the same chance to finish the war as a first class ringman.

Conn could always afford to put on a few pounds without losing any speed. I hear that he is now up around 185 pounds. It would be no trouble to boil this down to 180, which should be his more effective weight.

The Pittsburgh entry has an amazing amount of vitality and too much courage for his own good—especially when he meets a Louis. Conn is another who should be a first-class heavyweight at 34 or 35, provided he takes any care of himself on the physical side.

Both Louis and Conn have more than one or two years to go, before starting downhill at any rapid pace. Just how long the war will last—just how long they will be kept in service — is anybody's wobbling guess.

American League Race

I asked a group of Yankees how they figured the race, leaving the Yankees out of the argument. "Washington," one said. "Probably the best balanced team in our league. Should run 1-2 sure."

"Detroit," another added. "Better pitching, day in and day out."

There was a vote for the White Sox and a vote for the Browns.

"But any club that loses one or two good men to the draft will be in a bad way," another added.

Watch Your Kidneys!
Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Allied Gains Mark Italy Battle; Plan Four-Power Peace Meeting; 5,000,000 U. S. Men Overseas

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

EUROPE:

Allied Progress

Allied troops cracked the last German defense line on the western end of the front below Rome as enemy forces completed their withdrawal to the east, and the glittering dome of St. Peter's came first into view of fighting U. S. doughboys, wading through hails of Nazi fire.

As Allied forces closed on the Eternal City and the enemy fell back, U. S. and British bombers continued their invasion bombardment of western Europe, and Russian troops in the east withstood a strong Nazi assault designed to upset their alignment for their scheduled big push.

Rome—With water supply blasted, Italian women do their washing in streets.

By pulling back the bulk of his 10th army which opposed the Allied onslaught in the Cassino area, Nazi Marshal Kesselring managed to save them from complete annihilation, but U. S. and British forces exacted a heavy toll in the desperate, rearguard fighting, and their battle-planes ranged along the whole line of enemy retreat, shooting up marching columns and vehicles.

As the battle-clouds rumbled over Rome, Pope Pius XII appealed against the principle of total victory, declaring: total victory or complete annihilation ". . . works as a stimulant for prolongation of the war, even with those who . . . would be inclined to a reasonable peace."

Over There

With 3,657,000 U. S. army men overseas, Secretary of War Henry Stimson declared that they are ". . . poised to strike victory winning blows against Germany and Japan by land, sea and air."

At the same time, the navy revealed that it had 1,566,000 men afloat or on foreign duty, with 900,000 more in transit or in training for combat service.

The army's 3,657,000 men overseas represented 47 per cent of total strength, and this would be boosted to 5,000,000 men, or two-thirds of total strength, by the end of 1944, Secretary Stimson said.

Declaring that disposition of troops overseas was in conformance with plans of the high command, Secretary Stimson said early transport of forces was to plug holes in the Allies' tottering lines, and later shipments were to crack the Axis' outer defenses for the grand assault, for which preparations long have been under way.

GOVERNORS:

State Program

Meeting in Hershey, Pa., the nation's governors called upon the federal government to formulate a postwar policy on public works which might possibly fit into their own extensive plans for such projects.

In addition, the governors declared for:

1. The individual states continued administration of unemployment insurance in the estimation of their probable postwar unemployment and the solvency of their insurance funds, the provision for adequate reserves, and development of plans for quick payments;

2. Future convocation of a federal-state tax parley to overhaul the nation's entire tax structure and provide each governmental division with sufficient funds for operation;

3. Postponement in the formulation of a postwar military policy and army until the war's end offers an opportunity to judge the extent of our responsibilities. Retention of the national guards as provided in the act of 1916.

MISCELLANY

WHEEL TRACTORS: During the week ending May 27, production of farm-type wheel tractors reached the highest point yet attained. In that week 6,098 units were made, the War Production board reports. Average for the preceding five weeks had been 5,906 tractors. Total made in 11 months since the start of the farm year on July 1, 1943, is about 200,000 machines.

FOREIGN POLICY:

F. D. R.'s Stand

Closely paralleling the Republican party's celebrated Mackinac Island declaration on foreign policy, President Roosevelt declared for maintenance of U. S. sovereignty or self-determination in the activities of any postwar organization to secure peace.

Said Arch-Nationalist Gerald Nye (N. D.): "It is only too apparent in the light of his statement, that the door has been opened for Roosevelt to become the No. 1 nationalist or isolationist in the campaign next fall if the Republicans adopt a platform tying them to internationalism. . ."

President Roosevelt's declaration came during the course of a press conference, in which he envisaged an international organization of nations cooperating freely and closely in the preservation of peace to prevent future aggression.

New Procedure

President Roosevelt made his statement shortly after Secretary of State Cordell Hull had issued invitations to Great Britain, Russia and China to participate in discussions of forming a postwar peace organization following consultations with members of the senate's foreign relations committee.

By conferring with the senators, the administration sought to eliminate partisanship from the formulation of postwar foreign policy, and, also, avoid Pres. Woodrow Wilson's mistake of seeking senatorial sanction for the World War I Peace Treaty without previously consulting the chamber on its provisions during its composition.

In Secretary Hull's talks with the senators, it was revealed that some of them objected to formal commitment to any organization of enforcing postwar peace until the U. S. was apprized of the nature of the final settlement.

PACIFIC:

Bloody Episode

Bloody as any of the fighting in the South Pacific was the U. S. thrust against the enemy airfield on Biak island off Dutch New Guinea, with reinforcements called in to aid in the suppression of the stubborn foe.

With access to the airfield along a roadway below a commanding ridge doughboys found themselves under sight of entrenched enemy snipers in the brush above, and when they climbed to the level of the airdrome, they encountered formations of Japanese tanks.

Under cover of the big guns of the 7th naval fleet, however, reinforcements were landed, and doughboys again pressed on the airfield, capture of which would assure the U. S. of another link in the chain of air bases being established in the northwestern New Guinea area for cover for the grand assault on the Philippines or Indies.

PRICE CONTROL:

Parity Problem

Extension of the OPA for 18 months appeared certain only after a bitter fight over Sen. John Bankhead's amendment, calling for readjustment of textile prices to reflect parity returns on cotton to farmers.

Headed by Sen. Robert Wagner (N. Y.), opponents of the Bankhead amendment claimed that it would lead to similar demands by other segments of industry, thus increasing the general price level, giving rise to pressure for higher wages, and, in all, destroying the economic stabilization of the last few years.

In advocating approval of the amendment, its supporters pointed out that the original stabilization act directed that ceilings were to reflect parity prices for farm commodities. Supporters also contended that readjustment of prices of cheap textiles would lead to the greater production of such goods, thus directly benefitting low income groups now compelled to purchase higher quality material.

War-Planes

American aircraft factories are now turning out far more war planes than both Germany and Japan combined, latest reports show. The United States is now producing at the rate of 100,000 planes a year, as compared with 21,600 for Germany and 14,000 for Japan.

The British empire and the United States together have made about 300,000 planes since Great Britain entered the war, while the Axis reportedly produced 151,000 in the same period.

PAYCHECKS WITH A punch!

Along the 8,000 miles of Great Northern Railway thousands of men and women are co-ordinating hundreds of different tasks into one mighty big and important job every 24 hours.

They are helping to produce war-winning transportation.

In the meritorious service of Great Northern men and women these days is pride of workmanship. And, something else. Plain, old-fashioned American patriotism!

Sure, you can hear the boys up and down the line holding forth almost anytime on how the war really should be run. But, that's as American as Dan'l Boone, baseball or ice cream! Just listen a bit longer, and soon you'll hear them mention, with undisguised pride, lads in uniform . . . the best Victory gardens under the sun . . . how many pints of blood they've given the Red Cross . . . and their stakes in War Bonds.

Great Northern paychecks, like those of any large employer, are subject to deductions required by law. Each month, the railway's treasurer issues thousands of paychecks which are subject to still another deduction—voluntary allotments for War Bond purchases.

These are Paychecks With a Punch, and the allotments from more than 18,000 employes total nearly $500,000 in War Bonds monthly. In addition, many employes make cash purchases of bonds through the company, which is a government-licensed issuing agent.

The Paychecks With a Punch have bought for Great Northern employes almost $10,000,000 in War Bonds, earning for them a top-ranking position among all transcontinental railways for payroll allotment purchases.

They will continue to do their part, wherever they work and live along the Great Northern, during the forthcoming Fifth War Bond drive, which opens June 12.

Fifth War Loan Coming Good

Marshall county is well on its way toward meeting its Fisth War Loan quota with a tabulation of reports Tuesday afternoon indicating pledges and sales totaling $441,650.75 or a trifle more than 61 per cent of the $675,000.00 goal, O. M. Mattson, county chairman, announced.

However, Marshall county residents have a long ways to go the last $233,349.25 will be the hardesr to raise and it will require every resident to dig deeper to reach the high goal set for the county.

McCrea township was the first township in the county to report going over-the-top, solicitors on Thursday last week reporting pledges totaling $14,418.75, against a quota of $14,000, while Holt village was the first village to go over with pledges totaling $4,081.25 last Friday against a quota of $4,000.

Other precincts in the county going over-the-top during the first week of the drive include Newfolden with pledges of $12,001.50 against a $12,000 quota; Grygla pledges $6,331.25 against a $6,000 quota; Alvarado just making its $11,000 quota and Valley township with pledges of $7,037.50 against a $7,000 quota.

Many communities in the county are just getting started in their campaigns, district chairmen report, and all solicitors are requested to keep on the job until the quotas are reached. "The task isenormous, but when completed it will be welcome news to our more than 1,000 Marshall county men fighting for us throughout the world," said Mr. Mattson.

A reception was given by the bride's parents following the ceremony, at which 60 guests were present.

New Drive For Heavy Scrap

Arvid Carlson, chairman of the Marshall County Salvage Committee, announced this week that he had received a letter from the government pointing out the critical shortage of heavy scrap metal.

Mr. Carlson said, "The supply of heavy metal, melting steel, etc. in various mills throughout the country has declined sharply in the past nine months. Now that the Invasion is on, we must take immediate steps to insure an adequate supply of heavy melting scrap to the mills so that we can support our men on the fighting front. The government has set a quota of 141,000 tons for Minnesota in 1944. This amount must come from farms alone. I am sure that if all of us "take another look around" we will find some iron that we overlooked in the past campaigns. Marshall county has done splendidly in the past. I am sure that we will do even better now. The Invasion is on! We must provide the materials to insure speedy victory. Your government is depending on you to accept the challenge and turn in every ounce of heavy scrap metal you can gather from your farm.

A meeting of all local salvage chairmen of the county, the county Defense chairman, County Superintendent of schools, Highway engineer, County Salvage chairman, Publicity chairman and other officers of the county was held in Newfolden High school on Thursday, June 22nd at 8 p. m. At that time plans were made for the coming scrap iron campaign. Mr. Alden Johnson, field representative of the General Salvage Branch of the W. P. B. was present to outline plans for the drive.

Rev. Hanson Takes Roseau Call

At the services at the Nazareth Lutheran church on Sunday, June 11th, Rev. T. C. L. Hanson submitted his resignation to the Holt parish. Rev. Hanson came here in 1936 after graduating from Luther Theological seminary, St. Paul, and ordination into the ministry. He has now accepted a call to the Roseau Lutheran parish and will move there on September 15.

The Holt parish consits of the Nazareth Luthern church here and the Siver Creek church four miles east of Steiner. Rev. Hanson has also been serving the Landstad Lutheran church at Gatzke since May 5, 1939 and, since January 1st this year, he has served as temporary pastor of the Middle River Lutheran parish which is now vacant.

With increased numbers of vacationists due to seek respite from war work and routine duties in Minnesota's famed recreation areas forest fire protectionists are faced with a double-edged problem. The need to prevent fires is greater than ever because of timber's position as the number one critical material, and because forest protection agencies are faced with reduced manpower.

A. E. Pimley, in charge of forest fire prevention for the state Division of Forestry, reports that already this year there have been 295 forest fires upon which control action was taken in Minnesota. Most of these fires were caused by carelessness and could have been prevented. Let's Keep Minnesota Green by preventing additional fires.

Two Youths Captured Here

On Thursday of last week there was great excitement here when a large number of local men took part in a man hunt in the vicinity of the John Ness farm 7 miles northwest of Holt.

Those hunted were Raymond Musall, 17 years old, a German and Skinder Alli, 15 years old, a very dark Albanian. These two young boys broke out of jail at Roseau on Monday night last week after being picked up by the sheriff there and held for the authorities at Northland, Michigan where they had skipped from the Wayne County Training School just recently.

Frank R. Steineke, of the Immigration Border Patrol, stationed at Thief River Falls, directed the hunt and took the youths with him from here after their capture near a heavy woods.

The old sun has come and gone. Wednesday we enjoyed the longest day of the year and yesterday Old Sol started its journey back south after reaching the end of its northward summer trek.

Mrs. A. W. Carlson and children returned home last week from Bertha, Minn., where they spent two weeks at the home of Mrs. Carlson's parents Mr. and Mrs. Herseth.

Special Festivities Sunday Eve.

Once more it is Bible Camp season. With it comes the desire to aid those who wish to spend a week in wonderful spiritual fellowship among towering pines and verdent foliage beside the balmy waters of the Rainy River. With many other Luther Leaguers from all over the northwest they will again share the spiritual blessings which are always obtained at Bible Camp.

You cannot help but have seen by now the benefits that Bible Camp brings. When you hear of the inspirations that young people have gained after spending a week there, the benefits cannot be measured by dollars and cents If you wish to help some young person you can do so by attending the special festivities they have prepared for you on Sunday evening, June 25.

There will be a supper served from 6 to 8:30 and we are asking your help in supplying the food to be served. We appreciate the fine cooperation.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

First Phase of Invasion Ended As Initial Foothold is Secured; French Hail "Liberation Troops"

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

This first picture made from French soil shows American doughboys, rifles ready, wading through the surf onto the French beachhead. The photographer who made the picture was in the first group to hit the beach. Note the invasion craft in the background. Soundphoto.

THE INVASION:
First Phase Ended

The first phase of the Allied invasion of Europe was completed.

To a tense world, supreme headquarters of the allied expeditionary forces announced this phase as the "securing of a foothold and the defeating of local German reserves."

Against fierce, last-ditch resistance of 10 hastily massed Nazi divisions, totaling nearly 150,000 men, allied forces were plunging inland on a 100-mile front of curving shoreline from the Seine Estuary near Le Havre to the Cherbourg area.

Allied forces are now in the second phase, which is one of defeating the German "tactical reserves," said headquarters. The third phase, which must be won before the Allied position is completely secure, is that of defeating the German "strategic reserves."

(Tactical reserves are those in or near the combat area; strategic reserves are those held in readiness at a distance.)

The Air Umbrella

Headquarters announced that 27,000 individual air missions were carried out in the two and one-half days following the dawn of D-day. Great air fleets, probably greater than those of D-day, hammered Nazi strong points, transport and troop concentrations within a 150-mile radius of the beachheads. Nazi fighter opposition was weak. The German high command had not yet thrown its long-hoarded fighter reserves into the battle for Normandy.

The battle was joined around Bayeux, first city of France to be freed from Germans, and Caen. A fierce tank battle raged in several wooded areas near Bayeux, where the Nazis were strengthened by parachute troops.

The navy supported foot troops with a gigantic bombardment of Caen. Nazi forces were attempting to hold the city as a pivot for counterattacks. But on the second day of invasion, the Germans were forced to admit street fighting already was being waged inside Caen.

Single Front

It became increasingly obvious that Allied positions were fast being welded together into a single front, stretching from Caen through Bayeux to just outside Carentan and some distance up the Cherbourg peninsula toward Valognes.

It was disclosed that the first forces ashore on D-day might have pushed ahead more rapidly than they did, but General Eisenhower's supreme command decided it was wiser to slow the advance somewhat while awaiting more adequate strength rather than make a risk having the spearheads choked off.

OBJECTIVE PARIS:
By Bastille Day?

Bastille day, French national holiday, falls on July 14 and in the first days of the invasion of western Europe, veterans of the 1940 battle of France forecast that the Allies would be in Paris by that date to help the natives celebrate.

In New York the French language weekly, "France-Amerique" carried a column by Ernest R. Bauer, which indicated that French military veterans familiar with the terrain over which the battles are now being fought predict rapid progress from the beachheads to Paris—120 miles away.

Meanwhile in London Winston Churchill urged the house of commons to guard against "the idea that things are going to be settled in a rush."

LIBERATED BAYEUX:
First of Many

Eyewitness accounts described great joy in the streets of Bayeux, France, first city to be liberated by Allied troops in the invasion of western Europe. On the main rail line linking the big port of Cherbourg to Paris, Bayeux is five miles inland from Seine Bay.

"God save the King. We've waited for this day. On to Paris. Vive Tommy. Vive Amerique." These were some of the rejoicing cries that greeted the first detachments to march through the narrow streets of the Normandy town. Cheering men and women danced through the same streets as the troops came in. Cafe owners began throwing open their doors with pianists striking up patriotic tunes to add to the festivity of that first day.

Europe is to have many towns cleared of the enemy in the weeks to come but Bayeux got its niche in the history books when the French Tricolor was hoisted above it again on the second day of the Allied landings in France.

SHUTTLE-BOMBING:
Russian Bases Used

News dispatches began carrying a new dateline that read "From a U. S. Air Base Somewhere in Russia" and this spelled historic military significance in cooperation between the United States and the Soviet Union. For the first time, U. S. planes had taken off from bases in Italy, bombed German targets, and continued flying eastward to land at secret U. S. air bases set up on Russian soil.

This new program opened the farthest corners of German territory to bombing attack by Allied planes based in Britain, Italy, North Africa and Russia. American military leaders had long wanted these Russian bases but it took diplomatic skill of the first caliber to get the Russians to agree to the strategy. They were finally convinced when it became obvious that the U. S. and England had the necessary planes and the Russians did not.

First target was a Rumanian freight yard in which the Nazi had concentrated supplies for troops fighting the Russians. American Flying Fortresses were accompanied by Russian fighter planes on part of the mission.

ITALY:
'Major Break' in Lines

The German high command in Italy was forced to admit a "major break" through their lines north and west of Rome as the Fifth army smashed toward Lake Bracchiano and Civitavecchia, key port of the Tyrrhenian sea.

German resistance was described by the allied command as "only light." It amounted to little more than disorganized activities by delaying infantry units and self-propelled guns.

The Fifth army had taken more than 18,000 prisoners and many more thousands were captured by the British Eighth army, which was meeting heavier resistance northwest of Rome, where the hardest fighting is being encountered.

The Vatican

"Whoever may be the military authorities actually having control of the city of Rome," the Vatican has announced its determination to maintain a policy of neutrality. Observers took this to mean that the holy see gave the Germans credit for correct behaviour with regard to Rome in its final hours.

AIR FIELD:
Near Philippines

A base within bombing range of the Philippines fell to General MacArthur's forces when the Mokmer airdrome on Biak Island was stormed and captured on the 13th day of the invasion of the Schoutens.

The beachhead on Biak was established late in May. A frontal stab was repulsed, following which American forces got in behind enemy positions and swept to the air field from the rear.

The Mokmer field is within 880 miles of the Philippines to the northwest and is within good fighter range of Palau, Japanese western Carolines naval base guarding the approaches of the Philippines.

The island also has two other airfields desired by the Sixth army invaders. The Americans immediately began a push toward the Borokoe airdrome a few hundred yards to the west.

INDUSTRY:
Must Take Initiative

Warning that industry must find its own work when war contracts are no longer available, Donald Nelson, chairman of the War Production board, told the house postwar committee, that:

". . . it won't be the government's job to find work for each company in its present expanded position. It's impossible to find a postwar market for the 8,900 airplanes we now produce monthly."

Stating that he was 100 per cent in favoring government's assistance in postwar planning for industry, he said that he was against government "running" small business. He urged that companies now engaged in war production use their own ingenuity and initiative in planning their postwar programs.

He forecast a postwar "expansionist" period in which private enterprise rather than the government would provide the necessary "spark." Government pump priming would be at a minimum under such conditions.

Lookout

A German sentry pictured as he scanned the skies over Boulogne, France—looking for trouble that came unexpectedly. Boulogne was one of the cities hit by sea and air bombings, paving the way for landing of Allied forces.

FOOT SOLDIERS:
Pay Increase

In reply to a request by War Secretary Stimson, Chairman May of the house military affairs committee introduced a bill to increase pay of skilled infantry men $5 to $10 a month.

Soldiers holding the expert infantry man's badge would get a $5 increase and those having the combat infantry man's badge, $10. Cost of the increase would amount to between 55 and 71 million dollars yearly.

In asking for the legislation, Stimson said infantry casualties are the highest of any branch of service. In the North African campaign, including Italy, the infantry suffered 70 per cent of the casualties, although comprising only 19.6 per cent of the total forces.

FARM MACHINERY:
Restrictions Removed

Small manufacturers (employing less than 100 workers) can now engage in the unlimited production of farm machinery, equipment, and repair parts made entirely from surplus materials or materials with an AA-4 preference rating.

This new arrangement, announced by the War Production board, is limited to firms employing not more than 50 workers in group 1 labor areas, or on the West coast. Elsewhere plants employing fewer than 100 workers may participate.

Manufacturers meeting these regulations can use surplus materials and component parts from inventories together with AA-4 preference rating materials in such production.

TRAVEL BAN:

Because of the increased loads placed on the nation's transportation system by the invasion, Director of Defense Transportation J. M. Johnson has asked immediate cancellation of all nonwar conventions, trade meetings and all nonessential civilian travel.

An ODT spokesman said there were no plans to ration train and bus travel through priorities, but that reserved space may be commandeered by orders of the army surgeon generol for casualty cases

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

TYPHUS: American medical corps have conquered the dreaded scourge of all armies—typhus. The disease has been brought under control by a new vaccine, and by a poison called DDT that kills the lice that transmit the germs. Brig. Gen. Leon Fox told news correspondents:

"Typhus has been removed from the death list of the U. S. soldier."

MORE FRUIT: The peach crop shows an increase of nearly 150 per cent over last year, according to reports from growers, William Graffitt, vice president of the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable association, told dealers. The apple crop is expected to be at least 50 per cent larger than last year, and citrus prospects are much better, Graffitt said.

Smart Cushions Made From Odds and Ends

A HANDSOME pair of cushions to brighten up your living room may be made from things on hand or from remnants of silk. Frequently the largest pieces of the skirt of an old silk dress may be used for a pair of matching cushions. The backing may be made of sateen. A soft fold of a contrasting silk around the edge makes a smart finish. The sketch shows how such a fold is cut and applied.

Eighteen inches square is a good size for the cushions and, if you have an assortment of cushions of different sizes, it is easy to transfer the filling into ticks of the size you want. Stitch and turn, leaving a four-inch opening in one side. Rip a smaller opening in the old ticking; sew the large opening over the smaller one and then work the filling through. Rip apart and sew the new ticking with close stitches.

Always remove the ice from trays when defrosting a mechanical refrigerator. Wash the trays in plenty of warm water and soapsuds. Scald, cool and refill with water to freeze. You will then have clear, tasteless ice cubes.

Yanks on Way to Invasion by Air and Sea

By air and sea the army and navy of the Allied countries join in invasion of French coast. The U. S. paratroopers reflect confidence as they fly over the English channel en route to the invasion of Europe. They were among the first assault troops to land on the continent. More than 4,000 vessels were employed in the initial landings. The landing craft, one of newest types, is shown loaded with American troops about to sail for somewhere in France during the first days of invasion.

Coastguardman 'Flagging' the Sarmi Invaders

Coastguardman B. W. Long, coxswain of Detroit, Mich., directs incoming LSTs to their beaching positions with semaphore signals from the shore at Sarmi, on the north shore of Dutch New Guinea. Capture of Wakde Island and Sarmi beachhead after stiff Japanese army opposition brought two more vital landing strips into American hands on their steady thrust westward toward China and the Philippines and that much nearer to Tokyo and the final victory over the Japs. Heavy naval bombardment blasted Sarmi.

First Nazi Prisoners Taken in France

These are among the first Nazi prisoners captured by the Canadian invasion troops on the soil of France, in the great Allied invasion. Returning ships to England from the first invasion wave carried a large number of Nazi prisoners, which were increased by later returning ships of American and British naval forces.

Honor American Dead at Anzio, Italy

A firing squad sends a volley over the graves of soldiers in an American cemetery at Anzio, Italy, at a Memorial day ceremony. The salute followed an address by Fifth army commander Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark given a few days before the invasion of France. Temporary markers have been placed until after the war.

Nazi 'Butterfly'

A German "butterfly" anti-personnel bomb is examined by Maj. L. Ehrmann, New York, commandant of the Bomb Disposal school at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md. These bombs are dropped from planes in clusters.

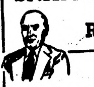
SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER



Alcohol base butadiene is expected to provide an important portion of the synthetic rubber used in the U. S. in 1944. One instance where alcohol and the automobile go well together!

Passenger car tire shortage is expected to continue well into the summer months, at which time synthetic tires may make their appearance in growing numbers. That's why extreme tire care is important now.

In 1910 crude rubber sold for an average of $2.06 a pound in New York. Since September 12, 1941, it has been fixed by a government agency at 22½ cents a pound. In 1932 the average price was 3.4 cents.

Among the feature acts to be seen with the Bud Anderson Circus are performing elephants: dainty Miss Attebery, the riding Nelson troupe, the Gomez troupe from Old Mexico. Then there is Bounding Silver, Ponco Bill and the famous string of wild and domestic animals, acts of all description, and these are but a few of a myriad of marvels.

With Our Boys In Service

Following is a letter received recently by Mrs. C. Hagglund from her son Pfc. Irvin who is in the Medical Corp and is now in Italy.

Dear Mother:

It is nigh onto dusk, the waning sunlight is slowly dying out as I sit here writing this in our pyrimidal tent propped up in the beautiful countryside within a stones throw of a quaint, little Italian village. which, no doubt, was established long before the United States of America was formed.

By Naples stands the huge crater, Mt. Vesuvius, which recently errupted, as you have read by the papers. I witnessed the crater on a recent visit to the bombed city of Naples. Vesuvius is still shooting appalling clouds of smoke at the sky. One does not realize it's colossal magnitude until getting a first hand view. The flow of lava destroyed villages in its relentless, terrible path of destruction which made the largest bombing raid seem small in comparison. The peasants villagers tried to stop its flow with religious ceremonies and by placing the statue of Virgin Mary in its path. The villagers, of course, had to evacuate. When seeing Vesuvius belching smoke and shaking the earth with it's rumblings, one realizes how little this foolish struggle of mankind is compared to the earth and everlasting universe. The peasants toil away in their fields with age old implements and oxen regardless of war.

This is an interesting experience. Your loving son, Irvin.

County Fair Opens July 12

Marshall county's third wartime Agricultural Fair will open its gates in Warren on Wednesday, July 12 for a four night run of education and entertainment with indications pointing to a record display of agriculural and home economics exhibits plus another outstanding array of entertainment features.

Premium lists for the big fair were distributed in all county newspaper last week to provide practically every family in the county with a copy of the list, giving them an opportunity to plan their extensive exhibits which will compete for more than $1,550 in prize awards. Additional copies of the list may be secured from the secretary of the fair, O. M. Mattson, or the county agent Frank W. Forbes, both at Warren.

For the first time in history the Marshall County Fair will present the WLS National Barn Dance with it program of nationally known radio stars on opening night, July 12. There will be free admission to the grounds until 5:00 p. m. on Entry Day, but after that hour the regular admission schedule will prevail.

On Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights, Williams & Lee Attractions of St. Paul will present their colorful revue, "Flying Colors," with a complete change of dance routine each evening. The revue numbers will be interspersed with 10 big time circus acts which will thrill the big crowds expected to attend from a wide area in Minnesota and North Dokota.

An ad for the fair is published in this issue of the News.

"FOLLOW-THROUGH" HELPS DAIRY FARMERS

When nearly 100,000 dairy farmers, members of Land O' Lakes, deliver their milk and cream to their cooperative creameries, they aren't done with it by a long shot.

Land O' Lakes dairy farmers "follow through" with their products—"follow through" all the way to the grocer's counter—and with advertising and merchandising that builds consumer preference for Land O' Lakes products.

In this sort of "follow-through," there are additional advantages to Land O' Lakes members. They assure themselves a steady market. They get returns from their shares of interest in a great marketing organization. They receive the benefits of a group which has pioneered in and protected improvement of dairy product quality for 22 years.

Over the Top by July 4th

"Over The Top by the Fourth of July!"

That is the goal set by the Marshall County War Finance committee this week with county tabulations of pledges and purchases during the first two weeks of the 5th War Loan reaching 81 per cent of the $675,000,000 quota.

By going over the top by the Fourth, Marshall county will have a just reason to celebrate the anniversary of American Indepence and liberty and will provide a welcome message to our fighting sons who will be thinking of American liberty in all parts of the world.

The tabulation of bond pledges and sales Tuesday afternoon reached a total of $546,150.75, leaving a balance of $128,849.25 to go during the few days before the Fourth.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Up to the beginning of last year, B. F. Goodrich produced more butadiene-type general purpose synthetic rubber than all other plants in America, including those owned by the government. The first U. S. commercial butadiene-type synthetic plant was set up by B. F. Goodrich in 1939.

Black derbies, frequently called "iron hats," are said to be the most popular exchange medium for rubber among the Indians of the San Blas region of Panama. No mention has been made of premiums for brown derbies!

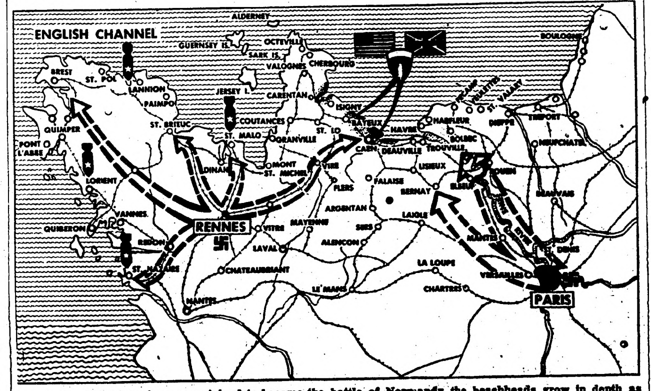
Where Counter-Attacks Spawn as Allies Advance



As the Allied invasion moves inland to become the battle of Normandy the beachheads grow in depth as new thousands are landed on well-cleaned coast. Constant threat of violent counterattack by the enemy becomes closer and louder. Shown here are two counterattack hubs of the Nazis. In the west the Allied thrust from landing zones has resulted in the capture of Bayeux and a drive to the south toward Caen.

Allied Army and Navy Chiefs Confer in France

Allied Wounded Return

Wounded in the invasion of France, British soldiers are shown lined up, tier on tier along the walls of an LST hospital ship. These were among the first wounded to be returned following the initial landings on the coast of France. Censor has blacked out faces.

De Gaulle in France

Gen. Charles de Gaulle is shown as he landed in France on a Normandy beachhead before he proceeded inland on tour of inspection of allied occupied territory. It was nearly four years since he last set foot on French soil.

Jap Prisoners Taken

When U. S. forces landed at Humboldt bay during the Hollandia, Dutch New Guinea, operations these eight Japanese were captured. The second and third men from the left are officers and both have tried to hide their faces from the photographer. The group is being taken by truck to a plane.

Nazis Leave Markers

The Germans retreated so fast in many sections of France that not only did they leave a vast store of equipment, but the markers showing mines were left intact. The Allied troops found some of them duds.

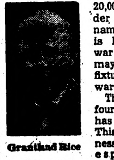
by GRANTLAND RICE

SATURDAY, Sunday and night baseball have already taken care of the 1944 season and these factors will continue to operate until autumn leaves begin turning red and gold.

Weekday afternoon attendances jump from 1,200 and 1,500 per game to anything from 20,000 to 50,000 under the conditions named above. This is largely due to war work but it may also become a fixture after the war is over.



Grantland Rice

There is still a fourth factor that has been a big help. This is the closeness of both races, especially the American league, where there is no outstanding team.

From the 16 teams in both leagues only the Cardinals have any decided advantage and if they happen to lose a few men to the draft, the scramble will then be complete.

The one big weakness in major league baseball has been the fact that in the last few years, two or three teams have dominated the two races, leaving the other 13 or 14 outfits struggling to see the leader's vanishing dust.

Year after year, we've seen the Yankees so far in front by July that you could turn your attention to something else. In the last few years the Cardinals and Dodgers have been the only teams that counted in the National.

A few years back the Tigers, Indians and Reds broke up this combination for a short spell, only to subside later on.

But it's all different now. The greatness that was the Yankees belongs to "the glory that was Greece—and the grandeur that was Rome."

Week after week eight American league clubs have been running along only a few games apart, from top to bottom. Six of the eight clubs have been traveling in a compact bunch and there isn't a manager in the league who can pick you a favorite with assurance. The Yankees can win it, or they can finish fourth. This applies to the Senators, Browns, Tigers and others.

More Interesting Races

There have been only a few seasons in some 40 years where baseball had two or three teams in both leagues still in the race after August. The greatest single season was 1908 when Cubs, Giants and Pirates were deadlocked through September in the National league and where the Tigers, White Sox and Indians were well bunched in the American.

But in later years the Yankees began wrecking their league, where you knew by July Fourth there was only one club left in the race. In the meanwhile Cardinals, Reds and Dodgers at least gave the National league a few continued thrills.

Everyone knows today the caliber of war baseball has fallen off badly. No game can lose such men as DiMaggio, Feller, Dickey, Ted Williams, Joe Gordon, Herman, Red Ruffing, Keller, Slaughter, Terry Moore and a hundred others without showing the deficit. But the quality of the two pennant races has more than made up for the absence of so many shining headlights. After all there is no big kick in watching the home club struggling along from 12 to 30 games in the rut.

The wonder is that baseball has done as well with so many lopsided races, with certain teams losing from 90 to a 100 games each season as others won from 90 to a 100.

Baseball has needed a better distribution of playing talent, but I still wouldn't know how to bring that about with larger cities and wealthier owners having all the best of it.

The war has taken charge of this weakness. Among the 16 major league clubs it has left only the Cardinals with any decided playing advantage so far. The Cardinals will still have to lose more than one or two of their best men to fall back with the pack, and make it a real two league scramble. Just how many more will be taken into war service is still anybody's guess.

After all, what the public wants is a contest—not a runaway or a walkover. Those who have lived in second division cities, watching their ball clubs try to finish sixth or seventh, can understand this much better than those pulling for pennant-winning teams, high up in the race.

Home-Run Timing

When it comes to the matter of home-run timing, pound for pound, weight for age, displacement and power, Mel Ott of the Giants comes close to leading the entire collection. It must be remembered that Ott, the lone entry from the National league, had to battle against such American league mammoths as Babe Ruth, Jimmy Foxx, Lou Gehrig and Hank Greenberg, who outclassed Mel in every physical way, all over 200 pounds, all six footers, with Greenberg at 6 feet 4.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

Washington, D. C.

CREDIT WHERE DUE

Across the Potomac, in the sprawling Pentagon building, Gen. George C. Marshall, U. S. chief of staff, gives all credit for U. S. invasion success to the boys over there, their officers and to General Eisenhower. However, those who have watched lean, graying General Marshall close-up during the tense months of the war, know how he too has worked, planned, dreamed almost every detail of the invasion.

Three years ago, before we entered the war but when everyone knew it was a certainty that we would, this columnist asked General Marshall what chance there was of a British cross-channel invasion.

"Do you realize what it takes to land an army in France?" he replied. "It takes not merely ships and men—and naval vessels to protect those ships. It also means docks, warehouses, railroad terminals, and freight cars by the thousand. But especially it means docks—some place to land. In the last war, we didn't have to worry about any of these things. The French supplied them. But in this war"—he shook his head ruefully—"it is different."

As he talked, Marshall thought back to 1917-18, when he was only 36 and a captain. At that time, he performed a modern miracle of maneuvering—second only to that of the present second front. He worked out for Pershing the plan whereby one million men were transferred from the St. Mihiel to the Meuse-Argonne front.

Nineteen railroads, 34 hospitals, 40,000 tons of ammunition, 93,000 horses, 164 miles of railway, 87 supply depots and 4,000 cannon all were moved up just beyond the German lines—and the enemy didn't even know it.

COOPERATION WITH EISENHOWER

A general in modern warfare does not ride into battle waving a sword. He sits behind a desk. And this time General Marshall, instead of being close to the battle-front, has done his planning from behind.

And unlike the situation in the last war, Marshall and his European commander cooperate beautifully. They are close friends. In the last war, General Pershing was in bitter conflict with Gen. Tasker Bliss, the U. S. chief of staff; later with Gen. Peyton March, who succeeded Bliss.

Today, Marshall and Eisenhower are considered Pershing's boys. He is strong for both of them. And every Sunday before the war got too tense, General Marshall went out to Walter Reed hospital to chat with his former chief. Pershing still believes he can win wars, and gives Marshall his opinion on various strategic problems. After each interview, Marshall rises and salutes.

"Thank you, General," he says.

"Thank you, General," is the reply.

NOTE—General Marshall is one of the few chiefs of staff we have had who did not go to West Point. Due to the fact that his father was about the only Democrat in Uniontown, Pa., during the McKinley administration, he could get no West Point appointment, went to Virginia Military institute instead.

THEY DIDN'T KNOW EITHER

War department officials are laughing behind their hands at the fact that military intelligence, supposed to know all about everything going on behind enemies' lines and inside our own lines, chose D-day to move their offices. In the Pentagon building, where military intelligence, or G-2, is housed, moving day was called "G-2's D-day." They "invaded" their new offices.

But never could they have chosen a worse day to move than the Allied D-day. Other war department officers kept calling up G-2, asking for information.

"Sorry," said the operator, "but the telephones are all torn out. G-2 is moving."

Furniture was being moved down corridors, files of secret information were being shunted from one place to another. Everything was confusion on the one day which meant most to the war.

Apparently, military intelligence, supposed to know everything, didn't know when the big day we were to cross the English channel was scheduled.

REASON FOR CRACKDOWN

Now it can be revealed why President Roosevelt was so tough in his crackdown on the Irish regarding the removal of Axis diplomats.

It long had been planned, though a strict secret, to land on the Cherbourg peninsula. To reach it, many U. S. troops had to steam through the Irish sea.

Naturally, the President wanted no scrap of information regarding the early passage of landing barges through the Irish sea to leak out in any manner, shape or form.

Mr. Extra Traction represents the Extra Bar Length that gives Superior Pulling Power to Firestone GROUND GRIP TRACTOR TIRES

EVERY FARMER KNOWS an unbraced corner fence post leans with the pull of the wire, weakening the entire fence.

Unbraced tread bars on tractor tires, likewise bend and weaken under heavy loads. They slip, lose traction, lose time and wear rapidly.

Traction bars on Firestone Ground Grip tires are triple-braced and have up to 215 inches of extra bar length per tractor. That gives them extra strength, extra pulling power and extra long life. And triple-braced traction bars clean better, too.

If you want tires that pull better longer buy Ground Grips — the tires made by Firestone, the pioneer and pacemaker in the farm tire field.

Rail oddities
A basic principle for using railroad freight cars efficiently was recognized in 1862, during the war between the states, when U.S. military authorities ordered that "all cars will be unloaded and returned immediately — they must not be detained for use as storehouses."
If placed end to end the 1,539 railway tunnels in the United States would have a combined length of about 320 miles....
American railroad trains carried an average of 915 tons of freight in 1941—the highest on record and 41 per cent more than in 1929.

County Fair Opens July 12

Stressing the importance of Marshall County Agriculture and 4-H club work in war-time food production together with the greatest program of entertainment available, Marshall County's 38th Annual Fair is ready to open in a blaze of glory at Warren next Wednesday and continue through Saturday night, July 15.

Next Wednesday, July 12 is Entry Day in all departments from 1:00 p. m. until 9:00 p. m. an as an added attraction, the much heralded WLS National Barn Dance will present an evening's program in front of the grandstand. The big Golden West Shows on midway will be all set up and operating during the entire Entry Day.

Judging of exhibits will get under way on Thursday morning in all departments. Record entries are expected in all divisions of the fair with farmers and homemakers planning extensive displays of livestock, poultry, crops, gardens and home economics.

Marshall county 4-H club members are putting in extra long hours in arranging their part of the big Fair program of events and the 440 members will be out in full force during the four days. It is expected that all booths in the 4 H club building will be taken in competition for premium awards. The subject of the booth project this year is "Vitimins for Victory." Club members will also contribute entertainment features at the Grandstand program each evening during the Fair after the first night.

Attend the Fair next week.

Buy Your Bonds by July 8th

Unless some sizeable voluntary purchases of War Bonds are made within the next few day, Marshall County will fail to meet its $675,000 Fifth War Loan quota, members of the County War Finance committee predicted Wednesday after a tabulation showed pledges and sales totaling $631,500, or a trifle more than 93 per cent of the goal.

The Fifth War Loan will officially close on Saturday, July 8, for all special issues although E. F and G bonds and savings notes sold to the end of July and remitted to the Federal Reserve Bank by July 31 will count in the final standing.

Marshall county's drive has shown excellent progress in most districts of the county, although several of the townships are lagging far behind their quotas and unless much hard work is done, their quotas will not be met, said O. M. Mattson, county chairman.

Harvest Grass & Clover Seed

Due to the shortage of grass and clover seeds, farmers are advised to save all acreages for this purpose not necessarily needed for forage. The shortage is critical and every acre harvested will not only relieve this situation, it also will bring a good cash return to the farmer, said Chas N. Kranz, chairman of the AAA. A payment of $3.50 per acre, for not to exceed 25 acres per farm, will be made under the 1944 Agricultural Conservation Program for the harvesting of red clover, alfalfa, alsike, sweet clover, broomgrass, reed's canary grass, white clover and wheat grass seeds.

with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

ON THE center table in most Victorian parlors there was a kaleidoscope. Guests gazed into this after they tired of looking at the family album. Bits of colored glass were reflected in an endless number of intricate patterns in this ingenious device. Very much the same effect was obtained by the method of putting together the simple six-inch quilt block shown here and that is why the pattern was called the kaleidoscope.

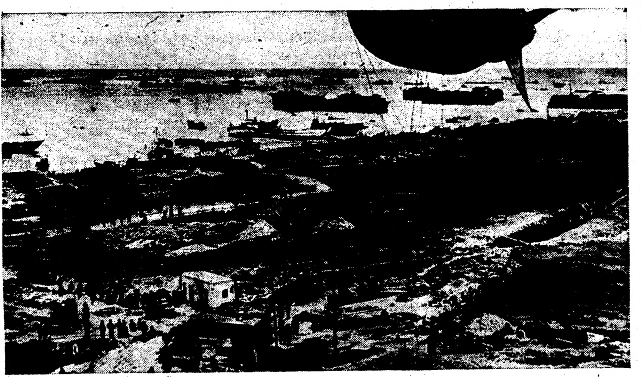
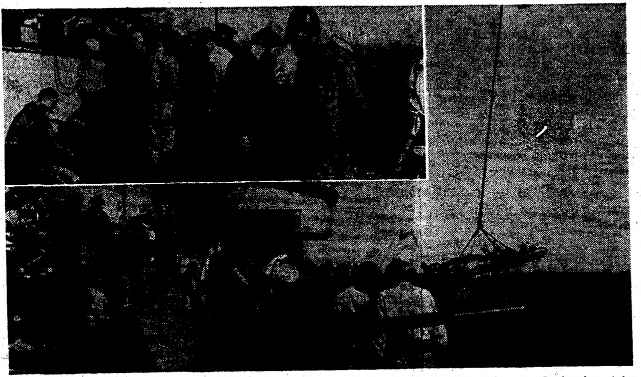
Grandstand View of Normandy Beachhead



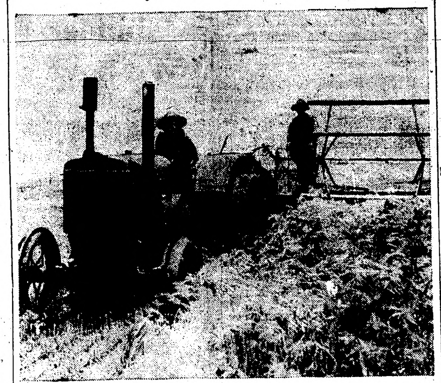
This is how the American section of the Normandy beachhead looks, viewed from a bluff where German gunners once had a position. As far as the eye can see there are invasion crafts, ferrying fighting Yanks and other Allied soldiers as well as munitions and equipment to the beach. Barrage balloons swing above the transports like lazy cows to protect them against possible dive bombing attack. All is quiet on this strip of beach now, but in the first hours of the invasion death and terror ran rampant here.

Yanks Given First-Aid Treatment on Ship



Insert shows United States navy hospital corpsmen aboard the battleship giving speedy treatment to wounded Yank army rangers, casualties of the fierce battle for the beachheads that marked the first few days of the Allied invasion of Normandy. In lower photo the casualties are being brought aboard. Wounded in France, the rangers were carefully hoisted aboard the battleship U. S. S. Texas after a speedy trip out from the embattled shoreline in one of the latest landing crafts.

Family Starts 1944 Harvest



With sons and farm hands in the armed services and defense plants, 1944 harvest begins to look like a "ma" and "pa" job. In many parts of Kansas the farmers are pooling their work in order to get the harvest done. Prisoners of war as well as a large number of school children and city people on vacation will be doing their part.

Morte Pour La France

MORTE POUR FRANCE

"Morte Pour La France," translated means, "Died For France." The French civilians made this grave for a Yank who died in action. He was one of the first to land on the Normandy beachhead during the initial landing stages of the invasion operations.

Romans Arrest Fascist Leaders

Armed anti-Fascistic civilians help a Roman policeman escort an ex "big shot" of the Fascists to the jail where he will be held until tried for crimes committed under the Mussolini regime. The civilians, soon after the fall of Rome to Allies, armed themselves and began an open hunt, until Allied authorities took over the job.

First Invasion Nurse

Second Lieut. Margaret Stanfill of Hayti, Mo., first American nurse to land on the invasion beachhead in France, is shown as she unpacked medical supplies.

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action
Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.
You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

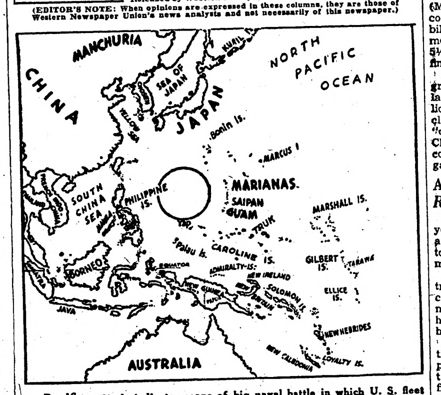
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

U. S. Navy Blasts Japan's Fleet But Enemy Refuses Showdown; Allies Push Forward in Europe

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)



Pacific—Circle indicates scene of big naval battle in which U. S. fleet clashed with strong Jap forces.

EUROPE:
Last Stand

As U. S. Doughboys closed on the big French port of Cherbourg at the tip of the Cotentin peninsula about 75 miles from Britain, desperate German defenders acting on Field Marshal von Rundstedt's orders to resist to the last man, put up a bloody last-ditch fight, demolishing the harbor facilities to prevent their immediate use when the town fell.

As the Yanks pressed in on Cherbourg, other Allied forces along the 100-mile-wide beachhead continued to probe deeper inland, meeting up with stiff Nazi counterattacks designed to curtail their advances.

Fleets of Allied bombers roared over the battle area, hitting at Nazi strong points and aiming at enemy reenforcements moving up to the front. Ramps in the Calais region from which the Germans were launching their rocket bombs for attacks against southern England and London, remained under heavy fire of Allied aircraft.

Other Fronts

On other European fronts, the Russians reportedly launched a large-scale offensive against the Germans' big bulge on the north end of the 1,200-mile eastern battle line, while Allied troops chased the Nazis up the Italian peninsula to prepared positions guarding the northern plains.

Using strong tank and infantry forces, the Reds reportedly struck at German forces massed to retain the Nazis' last great foothold on Russian territory, even while they were continuing their drive through tiny, tottering Finland from the southwest and east. Not only would the direction of the new big offensive point Red armies toward Warsaw and Berlin, but it would also serve to whittle down a potential Nazi springboard for an encirclement attack against Russian forces to the south.

In Italy, Allied forces moved ahead after eliminating pockets of stubborn German rear-guards, putting up a desperate delaying action to permit the bulk of the Nazi forces to retire behind the new defense line.

BILL OF RIGHTS:
For GIs

Estimated to cost from 3 to 6 billion dollars, congress passed and the President signed the so-called "bill of rights" for vets of World War II, designed to avoid the hardships suffered by soldiers of World War I upon their demobilization.

Under the "bill of rights," vets will be entitled to an unemployment compensation of $20 a week for 52 weeks during the first two years after the war, if unable to find suitable work. Also available will be at least one year of schooling for vets whose education was interrupted by the war, with the government providing $500 for tuition and $50 monthly for subsistence, plus $25 for dependents.

For vets seeking to buy or repair farms or homes or establish small businesses, the government will guarantee 50 per cent of the loan up to a maximum of $2,000, with interest at 4 per cent and the amount repayable in 20 years. The veterans' administration also is authorized to spend one-half billion to provide hospital facilities for the care of returning servicemen.

PACIFIC:
Japs Run Out

Venturing forth from its home waters, Japan's boasted imperial fleet sailed within proximity of the U. S.'s mighty Fifth naval force but dodged a showdown fight after U. S. planes sent one enemy aircraft carrier and three of his tankers to the bottom of the sea between the Marianas and Philippine islands.

Adm. Spruance

Plowing boldly into the foe's home waters to support U. S. marine and ground troops in their assault on Saipan island in the inner ring of the Japs' defense system, the Fifth naval force under command of Adm. Raymond Spruance offered a brave challenge to the enemy fleet close to its major bases, but the Nips broke off the engagement after suffering loss of 373 planes besides the four ships in two days of continuing action.

Meanwhile, U. S. ground forces met bitter opposition on Saipan, about 1,500 miles from the Japanese homeland, as they fought to extend their hold on the central sector of the island.

OPA:
Vote Extension

By agreeing to allow revisions in ceilings of major textile items to reflect parity prices on cotton, senate and house conferences paved the way for extension of OPA to June, 1945. The nation's farm bloc scored another victory in the act's provision that the President take all lawful action to assure parity on cotton, corn, wheat, rice and tobacco.

Whittling down a maze of amendments to the act, the conferees did provide for some changes in OPA, including:

1. Filing of protests against OPA regulations;

2. Adjustment of rent ceilings where they are higher or lower than the prevailing standards, or if landlords' costs or taxes have increased substantially;

3. Permission for retailers to carry higher priced goods in certain lines than they did in the prewar period.

FOOD:
Postwar Stocks

In order to avoid the glut of 1919, the government's surplus stocks of foods will be released through normal trade channels after the war, M. Lee Marshall, War Food administration director of distribution, revealed.

Although original vendors would be given the opportunity to repurchase food stocks, WFA will only accept fair bids and sell in areas where particular types of commodities are scarce, Marshall said.

With the termination of the war in Europe and the shipments of food overseas, there will be no need for the stockpiling of commodities, Marshall said. Coupled with military reserves, present food stocks should provide a large part of the needs of liberated people, who will have to eat while being rehabilitated.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

P.O.W. STRIKE: German war prisoners have refused to work in beet fields near Scotts Bluff, Neb., because their pay basis has been changed. Formerly they received 80 cents a day flat rate. This has been changed to a piece work rate of 30 cents for each quarter acre thinned. Lieut. Col. Clyde Dempster said disciplinary action would be taken if the men continued on strike.

EMPLOYMENT: A decline of 100,000 workers per month in war plants has been the trend since the beginning of the year, the department of commerce reports. While in sections shortages of manpower exist, the overall picture of the nation is a downward movement in factory employment, the report went on. In nonwar jobs, employment will remain the same.

CONGRESS:
Spends Less

For the first time since the war broke out, congressional appropriations will fall below the 100 billion dollar mark for the fiscal year starting July 1.

Because of the completion of capital outlays and the large stockpile of war materials, Chairman Cannon (Mo.) of the house appropriations committee estimated provision of 66 billion dollars for the impending 12 months, including approximately 5½ billion dollars for such items as financing the national debt.

Following Pearl Harbor, congress appropriated 147 billion dollars, and then supplied 114 billion dollars for the next year. Declaring congressional appropriations "definitely have passed the hump," Chairman Cannon said they would continue on the down-grade, regardless of war developments.

AGRICULTURE:
Release Trucks

To help in the harvest of this year's big wheat crop, surplus used army trucks will be made available to farmers and haulers through the medium of county AAA offices.

Because of the limited supply of trucks, however, only a small percentage in proportion to actual demand will be available, and the vehicles will be allotted only on the basis of the most critical need.

After certification of an application by the AAA, dealers will then purchase the trucks from the U. S. treasury's regional procurement office at an appraised price, and sell to the farmer or hauler at or below OPA ceilings.

SURPLUS GOODS:
Overseas Disposal

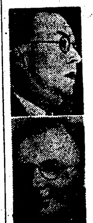
Treated as a valuable national asset, U. S. surplus goods overseas should be disposed of in foreign countries with the aim of realizing the highest possible profit, a business advisory committee established by the government said.

Although keeping one eye cocked on postwar trade, the committee advocated the disposal of surplus industrial equipment, observing that the sooner the devastated countries can be restored to production, the sooner they will cease to be candidates for relief.

In cases of low bids for surplus materials, sales might be made on the condition that the foreign purchasers will buy other new equipment from this country, the committee counselled.

RECONVERSION:
Conflicting Plans

The question of whether policy on the reconversion of industry from a war to a peacetime basis should allow certain manufacturers to resume civilian output while competitors are still engaged in war work, reportedly has divided the War Production board into two camps, with W P B Chairman Donald Nelson favoring the procedure and W P B Vice - Chairman Charles Wilson opposing it.



Donald Nelson
Charles Wilson

In recently relaxing restrictions on use of materials for civilian production in areas with labor surpluses, Nelson declared that the withholding of civilian production until all companies might return to such work would result in regimentation of industry for a prolonged period.

On the other hand, Wilson reportedly contends that manufacturers allowed to resume civilian production before others would enjoy a jump in the market on war contractors, who would virtually be penalized for their efficiency in fulfilling government orders.

WHISKY:
May Ban Corn

Although distillers' facilities have been released from the production of industrial alcohol for war purposes during August, the prospect arose that they would be unable to use corn in the manufacture of whisky during the month because of the War Food administration's opposition in view of the tight feed situation.

Because of this opposition, distillers may be compelled to use wheat, rye and possibly Carribean molasses, it was reported, with restrictions even on wheat.

With farmers already having turned in close to 65,000,000 bushels of corn to the government for processing uses despite the tight feed situation existing, the WFA promised that none of the grain would be diverted to alcohol.

PATENTS

"Distinct patent rights should not be granted for the sole purpose of handicapping future inventors whose discoveries would not otherwise infringe the complete patent," ruled the U. S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia in a case involving a canning company.

A concurring judge stated that the decision will "require considerable reexamination—if not readjustment—of patent office practices and procedures, especially with respect to subcombination claims."

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER
Latest government figures show that 80 per cent of the nation's war workers travel to and from their war jobs by automobile. Still an important reason why available tires have to be distributed cautiously.
B. F. Goodrich has created and is now beginning to produce an improved general-purpose synthetic rubber, the details of which must remain confidential until after the war. Introduction of a certain abundant natural material has developed a synthetic rubber that approaches natural rubber in characteristics during processing and has proven superior in large truck tires.

ATHLETE'S FOOT NEWS
"80.6% of sufferers showed CLINICAL IMPROVEMENT after only 10-day treatment with SORETONE
Foster D. Snell, Inc., well-known consulting chemists, have just completed a test with a group of men and women suffering from Athlete's Foot. These people were told to use Soretone. At the end of only a ten-day test period, their feet were examined in two ways: 1. Scrapings were taken from the feet and examined by the bacteriologist. 2. Each subject was examined by a physician. We quote from the report:
"After the use of Soretone according to the directions on the label for a period of only ten days, 80.6% of the cases showed clinical improvement of an infection which is most stubborn to control."
Improvements were shown in the symptoms of Athlete's Foot—the itching, burning, redness, etc. The report says:
"In our opinion Soretone is of very definite benefit in the treatment of this disease, which is commonly known as 'Athlete's Foot'."
So if Athlete's Foot troubles you, don't temporize with this nasty, devilish, stubborn infection. Get SORETONE! McKesson & Robbins, Inc., Bridgeport, Connecticut.

Superphospahate For Farmers

Farmers interested in superphosphate should place their applications with community committeemen or notify the county office said Chasles Kranz, Chairman of the Marshall Count AAA.

Sufficient material to supply all requests is on hand or being shipped into the county at presedt and cooperators finding it hard to earn their soil building allowances can take care of the matter very nicely by applying phosphate to grasses and legumes, Mr. Kranz stated.

A shortage of phosphate is anticipated due to excellent results users have experienced in the past few years. With this thought in mind we suggest that the phosphate be accepted by the farmers at this time, while available, in anticipation of the large grain crop to be harvested shortly and moved by the railroads, as all available cars will be needed for shipment of farm commodities.

We have been very fortunate in being able to secure all this material and than turn down any shipments we would like to see farmers take advantage of it by placing orders with us now, said Mr. Kranz.

Saw Large Deer Family

Driving home from Grygla on Monday the Publisher and wife had a chance to see a beautiful sight when coming thru the Mud Lake Wildlife Refuge. As we neared the west entrance a large doe and three speckled fawn were playing by the roadside. When we got close to them the fawns all got on top of the road only 30 feet from the car and the doe stood guard in the middle of the road a few feet behind them. They all stayed there about ten minutes facing the car. This is a sight that is only seen once in a thousand deer according to wild life reports.

Belles and Beaux Get Timely Advice

"HE WHO hurries the fastest sometimes misses the boat" is the advice Holly Miller gives 'teenage boy and girl readers of her column in nationally circulated Capper's Farmer.

"Time may be a-wastin', belles and beaux," she writes, "but don't let the thought get you in such a dither that you forget your rearing."

Here are one or two instances of the value of avoiding haste cited by this Capper's Farmer authority:

"Wait for the car to stop and for your swain of the evening to come around and open the door for you. House doors, theater doors and the swinging opening to the drugstore come into this consideration. Give him a chance to be polite.

"Take your time when making introductions. Repeat names plainly and, incidentally, say the name of the most respected first. Spend a little time getting folks acquainted before you leave them cold. Just adds a little to your smoothie air.

"You won't starve if you don't get your meal into your stomach in 2 minutes flat. It's not a very pretty show for your family, and some day you might forget when you're away from home. Take time to be polite to your kinfolks. It pays off in the end, since practice gives poise."

Problems concerning etiquette, manners and the means of acquiring smoothness are dealt with by Miss Miller in issues of the magazine. She is always ready to answer questions that puzzle youthful readers and to suggest methods of meeting various situations.

Harvest Grass & Clover Seed

Due to the shortage of grass and clover seeds, farmers are advised to save all acreages for this purpose not necessarily needed for forage. The shortage is critical and every acre harvested will not only relieve this situation, it also will bring a good cash return to the farmer, said Chas N. Kranz, chairman of the AAA. A payment of $3.50 per acre, for not to exceed 25 acres per farm, will be made under the 1944 Agricultural Conservation Program for the harvesting of red clover, alfalfa, alsike, sweet clover, broomgrass, reed's canary grass, white clover and wheat grass seeds.

Bonita Jean Schenke, the infant daughter of Pfc. and Mrs. Paul Schenke was baptised at the Edwin Anderson home on July 4th, Rev. Hanson officiated. She was born in Seattle, Wash., on on Feb. 22, 1944, and her sponsors were Mr. and Mrs. Hilmer Lunke and Mr. and Mrs. Ragnar Anderson.

The following families enjoyed a picnic Sunday afternoon at the farm home of Mr. and Mrs. William Stienhauer: Fred Stienhauer, Ronald Scultharp, Arno Stienhauer from Thief River Falls; M. J. WHY not make a week-end project of putting together a couple of comfortable chairs with the special features shown here? You don't have to have a fancy workshop. The whole job may be done out in the yard or on the porch. Just three stock widths of lumber are needed; all the cuts are straight and the pieces may be nailed or screwed together.

HIGH HEADREST BACK MAY BE LIFTED OFF FOR WINTER STORAGE
WIDE ARMS
GOOD PROPORTIONS STRAIGHT CUTS EASY CONSTRUCTION
COMFORTABLE TILT TO SEAT

But the really important thing about this chair is that it is comfortable to sit in and good to look at. The removable back makes it easy to move around and to store for the winter. Even though it is made with all straight cuts of the saw, it is so designed that it has no awkward angles and no jack knife posture is necessary when sitting in it.

NOTE—Mrs. Spears has prepared a large sheet with working diagrams; complete list of materials; dimensions and step-by-step directions for cutting and assembling this chair. Ask for Design 269 and enclose 15 cents. Address:

Rain Stones

A hailstone is a drop of rain that is carried up and down between currents of warm and cold air which alternately coat it with moisture and then freeze the coat, says Collier's.

Consequently, as these coats, or concentric layers, are visible when the stone is cut in two, the number of times it was carried up and down before falling can be determined.

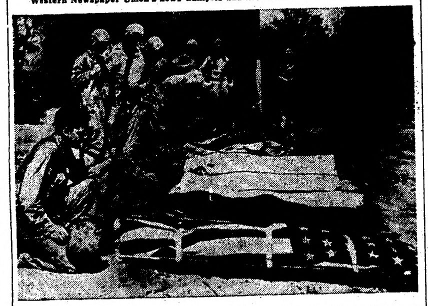
Dewey Pledges Strong Postwar Market for American Producers; Batter Nazi Defenses in France

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)



Saipan—U. S. marines pay last respects to fallen buddies on Saipan in Marianas islands.

EUROPE:
Big Battle

In a great drive to encircle the Nazi defense pivot of Caen on the eastern end of the 125-mile Allied front in Normandy, British Gen. Bernard L. Montgomery compelled German Field Marshal Von Rundstedt to commit large forces to the raging tank battles on three sides of the town.

Gen. Montgomery

As Montgomery forced Von Rundstedt's hand on the east flank, U. S. troops resumed the attack above the vital communications hub of St. Lo to the west, and U. S. engineers undertook to clear up the wreckage in the port of Cherbourg to permit its early use for funneling in supplies.

With Montgomery reportedly using 100,000 men in the Caen drive and pushing the offensive under a curtain of heavy artillery, tank and aerial fire, the Nazis were compelled to call in reserves to stem the British thrust, which threatened to remove the pivot on which the enemy had resisted Allied advances.

Russia

Within 250 miles of flaming front in north Russia, German troops slowly fell back before the powerful surge of Red forces chewing into the big bulge overhanging the southern end of the battle-line, and Hitler's last springboard to Moscow.

The Germans were compelled to retire from prepared strongholds when large Russian forces broke through their lines on all sides, threatening to encircle them from the rear.

In Finland, the Reds continued their offensive in the face of stiffening resistance both on the Karelian isthmus near the capital of Helsinki, and in the lake country farther to the east.

Italy

With the Germans moving in reinforcements and increasing their artillery and anti-tank gunfire, the Allied advance up the Italian peninsula was slowed by hard fighting.

Still operating in the mountainous terrain which lays before their last major defense line guarding the rich Po industrial and agricultural region to the north, the Nazis were taking every advantage of the rugged country to impede the Allies.

As U. S., British and French forces fought steadily ahead, the Nazis were converting little villages into small fortresses.

MEAT:
Beef Scarcer

Because of a 12 per cent decrease in supply of rationed beef as a result of larger allocations to the army, navy and lend-lease, point values on steaks and roasts for the month of July were raised to their highest levels.

Nearly all cuts of lamb were returned to rationing, with only breast, flank, neck, shank and lamb patties point free. Despite shortages of better grades of pork loins, all pork will continue unrationed.

Point-free for over a week, all so-called soft cheeses, including most varieties except cheddar, were put back on the rationed list at four points per pound. Canned milk was raised to two-third point per can from one-half.

PACIFIC:
Serious, Says Tokyo

Facing compression on the northern end of Saipan island by advancing U. S. troops, the Jap defenders offered vigorous resistance to attacking Doughboys in the mountainous interior after having been driven from the southern extremity.

Sheer cliffs, blind ravines, and rough, wooded ridges bulked before the Doughboys as they fought their way forward over the rugged terrain, broken in many spots only by goat paths.

As U. S. troops tightened their foothold on Saipan, the enemy reported that naval aircraft continued attacks against American shipping supplying the ground forces, and added: "We, the 100,000,000 people of Japan, must realize now, if ever, that the outcome of the battle of the Marianas will exert a very serious influence upon the future war situation."

GOP:
Shape Fight

Under the leadership of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York as its candidate for President and Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio as vice president, the Republican party will make the 1944 campaign on a platform designed to assure a strong American market for U. S. producers.

In the field of foreign relations, the party's 1,057 sweltering delegates to the Chicago convention approved a platform based upon U. S. cooperation with other nations to preserve world peace without impairment of sovereignty or self-rule and with the consent of the senate in accordance with constitutional provisions.

In addition to guaranteeing the producer a protective tariff to exclude cheap foreign competition, the party agreed to the principle of establishing an "American market price" for agriculture, and approved crop adjustment during periods of abnormal surpluses.

Quick restoration of private business in the postwar world was promised through speedy settlement of cancelled war contracts and orderly disposal of surplus goods. The party also pledged lower individual and corporate taxation consistent with government expenditures when conditions permit.

Knows Answers

Surrounded by a battery of newspaper men in the grand ballroom of the Stevens hotel, "Tom" Dewey gave his first press interview as the GOP's presidential candidate, showing a tactical skill in answering the barrage of questions.

In reply to queries, Dewey said future developments might make compulsory military training necessary; that congressional power to declare war to resist aggression would not hamper operation of a world cooperative program to preserve future peace, and U. S. acquisition of Pacific bases would be left to future events.

Declaring that the party's program did not refer to "high" but rather to "adequate" tariffs, Dewey said the heart of the foreign trade plank was centered in the sentence calling for U. S. cooperation in promotion of world commerce. At first, federal help may be required to assist in providing full employment, Dewey said.

"Are you satisfied with gas rationing?" someone asked.

"Do you know anybody who is?" Dewey retorted.

DIPLOMACY:
Troubled Relations

Finland's refusal to lend its ear to U. S. approaches that it negotiate a peace with Russia, and the tiny Baltic state's determination to remain in the war beside Germany following promises of military aid, led to an open rupture of relations with this country.

At the same time, U. S. Ambassador Norman Armour was recalled from Argentina for consultation with state department officials, following reported increasing Axis sentiment in that South American country, particularly since the invasion.

Meanwhile, Gen. Charles de Gaulle was scheduled to confer with President Roosevelt over alterations in the U. S. attitude toward the French National Committee for Liberation as the provisional government of reoccupied territory.

CASUALTIES:
Total 250,000

As a result of losses of 24,162 men during the first two weeks of the invasion, total U. S. casualties up to June 22 approximated 250,000 killed, missing and wounded.

Total Allied losses in France were 40,549 for the two week period, with the U. S. dead averaging 12.7 per cent of American casualties; the British 13.5 per cent and the Canadian 12.9 per cent.

A large percentage of U. S. losses in the invasion came in the first two days, when elements of two divisions ran into a German division practicing maneuvers on the beaches. Enemy casualties were estimated at 70,000.

For the first four years of the war, Prime Minister Churchill placed British losses at over 667,000 men.

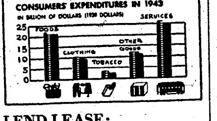
CHINA:
Japs Gain

Pressing their drive in southern China, the Japs threatened to seize the country's entire eastern seacoast and secure an unbroken rail route of over 1,000 miles.

The Japs pushed their offensive as U. S., British and Chinese efforts to open up a back-door into southeastern China from India slowed in the mountainous Burmese jungle country.

U. S. warplanes joined in the valiant Chinese defense against the Japs, who continued their favorite tactic of driving forward on either side of by-passed strongholds. Allied thrusts to open a back-door to China continued even as the Chinese asked for greater assistance to resist the enemy.

TELEFACT



LEND-LEASE:
In Reverse

With the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand pitching in, Britain's reverse lend-lease to the U. S. for the two years ending last March totaled 2½ billion dollars, and if continued at the same rate as the first three months of 1944, was expected to approximate 2 billion dollars for the whole year.

Out of the United Kingdom's contribution of almost 2 billion dollars, the U. S. received rail transportation to invasion ports; British planes; airfields and other construction; fresh vegetables and other foodstuffs; lightweight gas tanks; 25,000 miles of steel landing mats; thousands of parachutes, and 2 million pair of woolen socks.

Meats and dairy products constituted a major portion of Australia's reverse lend-lease of almost ½ billion dollars, while foodstuffs made up one-third of New Zealand's contribution of over 100 million dollars.

CIVILIAN GOODS:
Feeling Pinch

With large stockpiles dwindling and scarcities of material and manpower prevailing, the public will start feeling the shortage of civilian goods more and more from now on, an official of the War Production board declared.

Although some demand for such merchandise as electric irons, alarm clocks and aluminum kitchen-ware will be partially met this year, WPB disclosed, manufacture of stoves and other steel products and availability of lumber are expected to be affected by shortages of materials.

In remarking on the continued restriction of textile production because of the tight labor supply, a WPB official declared: "Our manpower is not always applied to the right things—there probably is plenty if it were properly distributed."

JEEPS

The famed army jeep is not so well suited for a general utility farm vehicle as is popularly supposed, according to the U. S. department of commerce. It was found that the jeep is less powerful than a small tractor, has small carrying capacity when used as a truck, and is uncomfortable and ugly looking.

"On the farm," concludes the article, "the role of the jeep seems to be that of a handy, amusing, plucky, but expensive to operate jack of all trades."

NAVAL HOSPITALS: Beds in the U. S. naval hospitals are 85 per cent filled, Vice Admiral Ross T. McIntire, naval surgeon general, stated. Hospitals are capable of caring for 70,000 men, he said. On the West coast, where Pacific area casualties are taken, the hospitals are 95 per cent filled. Some men are being moved to convalescent hospitals near their homes.

HAVEN FOR JEWS: Great Britain has agreed to set up a refuge for Jewish refugees from Nazi-controlled Europe, Undersecretary of State Stettinius revealed. This is the former Italian colonial possession in North Africa. Stettinius continued that large numbers of refugees are arriving in southern Italy daily from Yugoslavia and other Balkan areas.

The Dark Ages

Roughly speaking, the Dark Ages extended from the fall of the Western Roman Empire in the fifth century to the revival of learning in the 12th century—altogether about seven centuries. During a good part of that period learning was at its lowest ebb in Europe.

Civilization had been put in reverse by the masses of barbarians who swept down from northern Europe to overrun the former seats of learning.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Back in January, American troops recaptured from the Japs the first invaded rubber-producing land. They took possession of Saidor in New Guinea with its 300 acres of rubber trees. All Saidor rubber normally goes to Australia.

Informed rubber officials insist that when peace comes, our synthetic rubber plants will be just as vital to the security of the American people as they are during the war period. They say that the amount of post-war synthetic which will be made in this country after the war will depend upon the total world demand for rubber and upon the crude prices established by plantation operators.

'Why, What, When, Where' Of Fertilizer Use Explained

IN A statement outlining the "how, why, what, when and where" of fertilizer use for wartime crop production, the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee urged Minnesota farmers to make arrangements for their plant food supplies as early as possible for next season's crop operations.

"Uncertainties of transportation, labor shortages at fertilizer factories and the possibility of further scarcities of potash and superphosphate because of increasing lend-lease requirements," says the statement, "make early purchases a necessity, if a farmer is to have his supplies when seeding time arrives."

Because every ton of fertilizer must be stretched to the utmost to help meet the vast new crop goals, the statement says, the cooperation of farmers in helping move plant food from factory to farm early is essential. Only through such cooperation can available supplies be effectively distributed and last-minute bottlenecks avoided.

THIS MEANS A LOT to Land O' Lakes members, because they have more potential returns in their products; because they control them all the way to the store! Tomorrow it will mean even more!

YET, a preferred, nationally advertised brand is not the only advantage of marketing through Land O' Lakes! Why not investigate ALL the advantages?

Bought Many Lots In Village

A. P. Thompson, former lumber man here has now purchased the two corner lots east of Carlson's store from Ole Westman of Radium, who bought the property some years ago and moved the house out to his farm.

Mr. Thompson also bought three more lots adjoining this property from the county and expects that after the war is over he will establish a lumber business on this site. Besides these lots he also bought three lots east of the Mission church on which he will in time build a home and have a large berry field.

Rev. T. C. Hanson spent Friday and Saturday in Minneapolis. While there, he officiated at the wedding of Miss Gail Peterson and Ph. 2-c Leonard H. Norman on Friday evening. Seaman Norman had just returned from the battle of Saipan in which the battleship that he sailed on had been damaged by enemy action and had come to Seattle for repairs.

Superphospahate For Farmers

Farmers interested in superphosphate should place their applications with community committeemen or notify the county office said Chasles Kranz, Chairman of the Marshall Count AAA.

Sufficient material to supply all requests is on hand or being shipped into the county at present and cooperators finding it hard to earn their soil building allowances can take care of the matter very nicely by applying phosphate to grasses and legumes, Mr. Kranz stated.

A shortage of phosphate is anticipated due to excellent results users have experienced in the past few years. With this thought in mind we suggest that the phosphate be accepted by the farmers at this time, while available, in anticipation of the large grain crop to be harvested shortly and moved by the railroads, as all available cars will be needed for shipment of farm commodities.

We have been very fortunate in being able to secure all this material and than turn down any shipments we would like to see farmers take advantage of it by placing orders with us now, said Mr. Kranz.

The state highway department gave the trunk highway department thru here a light coating of oil and a sprinkle of gravel last week. This improves the top of the tarvia as it fills up a lot of the small chuck holes.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Tice and family and Mr. and Mrs. Julius Borchert and Bonny of Mentor visited at the G. Sanoden home Sunday.

Harvest Grass & Clover Seed

Announcing details of a newly expanded program to encourage the harvesting of legum and grass seeds this year, Charles W. Stickney, State Chairman, Agricultural Adjustment Agency, St. Paul, warns farmers that there is critical shortage of these seeds.

"Our domestic hay and pasture supply and soil conservation program cannot be maintained unless we harvest more seed," the AAA State Chairman has written Chas N. Kranz, chairman of the Marshall county AAA committee.

Recognizing the need for emergency action, Congress has provided a special fund of $12,500,000 to the Tripple-A to siimulate harvesting of legume and grass seeds. Under the expanded program:

1. Harvesting of certain legume and grass seed becomes an "unlimited practice" in the Tripple-A conservation program which means that cooperating farmers can obtain the regular Triple-A payment of $3.50 an acre for this practice on any number of acres harvested.

2. Additional special payments will be made by Triple-A of 3½ cent a pound on red clover seed (cleaned basis) and 2½ cents a pound on alfalfa and alsike clover seed (cleaned basis) for harvesting these varieties.

There will be no restriction on the total payments which can be earned by a farmer for harvesting legume and grass seed, Stickney explained. In the past, such payments could be earned only up to 25 acres. The triple-A also has exempted such payments from the so-called "farm allowance" eatablished by the county committee for each farm.

Red clover, alfalfa, and alsike clover have been chosen for the special poundage payments because of their extreme scarcity relative to our needs, Stickney stated. Other legume and grass seeds harvested in Minnesota for which the $3.50 per acre payment will be made are: sweet clover, broomgrass, Reed's canary grass, white clover, and wheat grasses.

"Every farmer who can harvest some of the seeds included in this special program should do so in his own interest and in that of the nation," he said.

"Unfavorable weather plus the greatly increased demand for hay, pasture and food crops during the war have reduced our harvest of legume and grass seed during the past two years. We need seed to grow soil-enriching legume and grass crops in this country. If at all possible, we also want to share some seeds with the farmers of countries being liberated by our armed forces. By giving them seed, we can help them get their farming operations back to normal and thus reduce their dependence upon this country for food."

Additional detail on the assistance availabe to Marshall county farmers can be obtained at the county AAA office in Warren.

Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Hanson and Dorothy spent the week end at Bemidji on an outing. They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Torrance Lillevold and son of Grygle.

The following families gathered at the Ben Lardy home in St. Hilaire for a birthday party for Ole Anderson who was 81 years of age on Sunday: Geo. Johnson, Herman Peterson, O. T. Ness, Tony Peterson and Mrs. O. B. Johnson.

Marshall County Went Over Top

Marshall county has overscribed its Fifth War Loan quota of $675,000 with $89,303 to spare, final tabulations completed last week showing pledges and sales totaling $794,303.00, according to O. M. Mattson, county War Finance committee chairman.

Sales and pledges were made at a rapid pace during the last week of the drive as solicitors and war finance committee workers made teeir final drive in an effort to put the county over the top—just as they have done in every warbond campaign since the start of the war.

"The nearly 300 volunteer solicitors in every township and village in the county are to be highly congratulated for their efforts in putting the county over the top and the district committee chairmen, who are members of the county war finance committee, are to be commended for their enthusiastic and energetic conduct of the drive," said Mr. Mattson, "When this news reaches the Marshall county men serving on the fighting fronts of the world, they will be justly proud of the people on the home front who are doing their bit to back them up with their dollars in order to help speed the end of the war."

The Stephen district stepped out in front in the final week of the campaign with every one of the nine townships and the village itself going ower the assigned quotas; The distric pledges and sales total $161,879.50 against a quota of $141,000, the largest in the county. The Alvarado district also went over its quota of $41,000 by a $1.25 margin.

The city of Warren stepped up its sales and pledges to $80,221 with sales for the district going to $135,663.50 against a quota of $130,000 for the four townships and the city.

The county quota was augmented with an allocation from the state of Minnesota of $47,200, which sum was not reallocated to any of the precincts of the county.

While pledges indicate that the county is well our the top, official reports from the state headquarters reveal that Marshall county still has a long ways to go, indicating that people are not taking up their pledges. On the total quota, the sales had reached only 83.8 per cent while sales to individuals reached only 73.6 per cent of the $600,000 goal and Series E bond sales were only 72.5 per cent of the $472,000 quota.

County residents are urged to take up their pledges at once in order to officially go over the top. All sales of Series E. F and G bonds through the end of July will count in the final reports.

THIS bag was planned as a hospital gift for someone who was finding days in bed difficult enough without having books, magazines, writing materials and spectacle case scattered about and forever getting lost. If you like to take an assortment of reading matter to bed, sick or well, you will enjoy a bag like this. Its hanger hook may be sewed to box springs and there you are with everything at hand.

The bag shown here was made of a remnant of heavy cotton upholstery material in tones of green with a touch of red in the pattern. The red was repeated in the sateen lining. The sketch gives all the dimensions and shows how the lining and the outside part were made. A coat hanger was cut down to measure 12 inches from end to end and was placed between the lining and the outside; these being stitched together around the top, as illustrated.

Railroads Forced to Turn Down Over-Sized Freight

Twice in recent years the railroads have been unable to accept pieces of freight for transportation because of their large size. In one case, a giant oil tank had to be towed from Hoboken up the Hudson and through the New York state barge canal and the Great Lakes to Chicago.

In the other case, the large pipes for Boulder dam, owing to their 30-foot diameter, had to be fabricated at the site in a plant erected for the purpose.

ORLEMANSKI-LANGE TALKS WITH STALIN

Two of the most important diplomatic reports of the war have been received at the White House recently, not from any trained diplomats, but from two private American citizens—Father Orlemanski of Springfield, Mass., and Prof. Oscar Lange, Polish-American leader and a teacher at the University of Chicago, both of whom had interviews with Stalin.

Although less widely publicized than Father Orlemanski's interview, Professor Lange had a long separate talk with Marshal Stalin and, perhaps because he was not circumscribed by church superiors, his report, on the whole, has been the more penetrating and helpful.

New conclusion drawn from the Lange-Orlemanski reports is that Polish-Russian relations, one of the most troublesome problems of the war, are on the eve of a wholesome rapprochement, probably beginning about now.

It was shortly after the receipt of the Lange-Orlemanski reports that President Roosevelt began a series of three conferences with Polish Premier Mikolajczyk in Washington, the results of which exceeded expectations.

If Polish-Russian relations can be settled amicably, one of the worst obstacles to postwar peace will be removed. Poland, for a hundred years partially governed by Russia, has a deep-rooted suspicion of the Soviet, while the Russians, having borne the main brunt of the European war on land, naturally feel they are entitled to areas forcibly wrested away from them after the last war.

STALIN DISCUSSES POLISH BOUNDARIES

In their separate interviews with Stalin, the two Polish-Americans, Father Orlemanski and Professor Lange, heard the reassuring words from the strong man of Russia that his government wants a "strong, independent Poland after the war—a Poland which will be strong both internally and externally, but which will be favorably disposed to the Soviet Union."

Stalin went even further and said that he was ready to help create a new Polish army.

"I am ready to build an army for Poland, equip it fully and arm it with the best guns the Soviet Union can make," he told Professor Lange. "I will do this for at least 1,000,000 men."

Stalin also discussed the question of Poland's future boundaries and revealed that they had already been discussed in some detail at Teheran. In doing so, he let drop a very important point — that, at Teheran, Roosevelt and he had agreed to the breakup of Germany after the war.

"Poland should claim East Prussia," Stalin said, "and should also claim Upper Silesia and all the German territory, up to the Oder river, including Stettin."

NOTE—This would give Poland practically all of Pomerania, a great stronghold of Prussian militarism. Shortly after Teheran, this columnist reported that the Big Three had proposed giving Pomerania, East Prussia and Silesia to Poland, in order to separate the Prussian junkers from the rest of Germany and stamp out German militarism for keeps.

Stalin told his visitors that he was not sure whether Poland should get Breslau (in Silesia) or not.

When these plans for Poland had come up at Teheran, Stalin disclosed, President Roosevelt had been in complete agreement, but Prime Minister Churchill had hesitated.

"He asked me: 'Who is to guarantee the security of this new Polish state?' I answered him simply: 'The armed might of the Soviet Union.'"

POLES IN RUSSIA

Professor Lange had been permitted to visit with the Polish army inside Russia which is fighting side by side with the Red army. He also had talked with various Polish leaders inside Russia, and he told Stalin that he was deeply moved by the splendid treatment given the Polish army by the Red army.

Several Days after Professor Lange had arranged with Wanda Wasilievska, head of the pro-Soviet Union of Polish Patriots, to better the living conditions of Polish refugees in Russia, Stalin informed Mme. Wasilievska that better war conditions now permitted better living conditions and that Polish refugees should share in the improvement.

SCORES POLISH INTELLIGENCE SERVICE

Stalin was quite cynical about the Polish intelligence service inside Poland and the reports of alleged conditions it had made to Premier Mikolacjzyk. All it did, he said, was deceive the Polish government-in-exile in London.

Foreign Commissar Molotoff, who was present during the interview, interrupted at this point to say that, in a recent speech, Premier Mikolajczyk had claimed he had the support of 90 per cent of the Polish people.

When Your Back Hurts -
And Your Strength and Energy Is Below Par
It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.
You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.
There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won countrywide approval than on something less favorably known. Doan's have been tried and tested many years. Are at all drug stores. Get Doan's today.

First Air Fight

In 1808 two Frenchmen decided to fight a duel in the air. Each ascended in a balloon, and at a convenient height the fight began, each man taking pot shots at his opponent's balloon with a musket.

The shooting was wild, but at last one man succeeded in scoring a direct hit. The gas leaked out through the puncture and his opponent fell several hundred feet to his death. The victor's balloon landed some miles away and out stepped the first air ace.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER
Add new rubber-producing plants: the ficus pumila linn and the Chronemorpha macrophylla. Both widely grown in China, if anyone is interested in these tongue twisters!
The peoples of the world should be the ultimate beneficiaries of the war-born, large-scale competition between natural rubber and synthetic rubber, in the opinion of John L. Collyer, president of B. F. Goodrich. He anticipates that this benefit may be in the form of lower-cost materials to the public and the wider use of rubber made possible by its low cost in many new applications.

ATHLETE'S FOOT NEWS
"80.6% of sufferers showed CLINICAL IMPROVEMENT after only 10-day treatment with SORETONE
Foster D. Snell, Inc., well-known consulting chemists, have just completed a test with a group of men and women suffering from Athlete's Foot. These people were told to use Soretone. At the end of only a ten-day test period, their feet were examined in two ways: 1. Scrapings were taken from the feet and examined by the bacteriologist. 2. Each subject was examined by a physician. We quote from the report:
"After the use of Soretone according to the directions on the label for a period of only ten days, 80.6% of the cases showed clinical improvement of an infection which is most stubborn to control."
Improvements were shown in the symptoms of Athlete's Foot—the itching, burning, redness, etc. The report says:
"In our opinion Soretone is of very definite benefit in the treatment of this disease, which is commonly known as 'Athlete's Foot'."
So if Athlete's Foot troubles you, don't temporize with this nasty, devilish, stubborn infection. Get SORETONE! McKesson & Robbins, Inc., Bridgeport, Connecticut.

Allies Move Ahead in Normandy; DeGaulle Visit to White House Poses New Diplomatic Problem

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

EUROPE:

Yanks Gain

Developing their offensive on the western end of the French battlefront, U. S. troops drove through marshy land to envelop the communications hubs of La Haye and St. Lo against the bitter opposition of an enemy taking every advantage of the soggy ground and hedgerowed landscape.

On the eastern end of the front, British and Canadian troops battled large concentrations of German forces on the approaches of the defensive pivot of Caen, from which Field Marshal Rommel was sending out strong detachments in counterattacks to impede the Allies' thrust inland toward the important Paris region.

As the Allies nudged forward in Normandy, Berlin announced the replacement of Anti-Invasion Chief von Rundstedt by Field Marshal von Kluge, who led the Nazi sweep through France in 1940, and was at the helm during the drive on Moscow during the first year of the Russian war.

Other Fronts

Calling massed artillery into play from dominating heights, the Germans poured fire on Allied troop movements in Italy to slow their steady drive up the long peninsula to the rich agricultural and industrial regions of the north.

In Russia, German forces continued to give ground before strong Red armies massed along a 350-mile front in the north to escape encirclement and destruction. Near Wilno, the Reds milled on the threshold of the Baltic states, while farther to the south, their pressure forced evacuation of Kowel, bending the enemy line farther back toward Warsaw.

Focal point of German resistance in Italy was below the famed port of Livorno (Leghorn), whose capture promised to give the Allies another good Mediterranean harbor for the easier transport of troops and supplies for the crucial fighting in the north.

DIPLOMACY:

French Problem

U. S. support of the De Gaulle administration of liberated French territory without formal recognition of it as a legal government was the latest diplomatic problem up for settlement in Washington, D.C. with De Gaulle's arrival in the nation's capital for discussions with President Roosevelt.

General De Gaulle

De Gaulle winged his way over from North Africa to seek approval of his negotiations with Britain, under which his administration would take control of liberated territory, arrange for supply and equipment of underground forces through lend-lease, and settle disputed property rights caused by transfers of ownership under Nazi occupation and Allied requisitioning for military purposes.

Although long complimentary to De Gaulle's Free French movement, the U. S. has been cautious in recognizing it as the legal representative of the people, declaring that only an election could determine their choice when circumstances permitted.

TRAGEDIES:

Circus Fire

Overhead the famed Wallandas prepared for their celebrated tight-wire act on bicycles as 6,000 happy spectators awaited the performance under the big canvas tent of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey circus in Hartford, Conn.

Near a sidewall of the tent, a small flame was noticed. Suddenly, it flared and leaped upward, with great patches of burning canvas falling when fire had seared them off. The cry of "Fire! Fire! Fire!" spread through the panic-stricken spectators, and their frantic shouts mingled with the din of roaring animals in the corral outside.

As the great sheets of burning canvas fell on top of the milling crowd below, adults and children struggled to make their way to safety, but scores were trapped, with some running into the steel ramps through which animals were led into the arena.

As rescue workers dug into the debris, they extricated the bodies of 135 victims, mostly children, and more seriously injured.

Miners Trapped

As scores of relatives of 64 miners trapped in the Powhatan pit near Bellaire, Ohio, waited hopefully at the mine entrance, officials grimly announced that the shaft would have to be sealed off to prevent the flow of oxygen feeding the raging flames underground.

In one last desperate effort to free the men entombed in a dead-end tunnel when a rock fall broke a high-voltage trolley wire along the main passageway and sizzling sparks ignited coal, skilled crews prepared to drill down 350 feet to open a shaft for lowering food and water.

In a previous effort to free the entombed men, rescue workers were cutting a new 500-foot tunnel through coal and rock to bypass the flames and reach the victims, when new fires halted their work.

Train Wreck

Climaxing the string of major tragedies was the derailment of a Louisville and Nashville train in Clear Fork River gorge near Jellico, Tenn., with early reports listing 25 dead and many injured.

Casualties on the troop-carrying train resulted when the locomotive and two coaches left the track and plunged 50 feet into the gorge, and two other cars overturned on the edge of the decline and caught fire.

Although hindered by darkness, rescue workers used acetylene torches to probe the wreckage and remove victims, while mountaineers hoisted the stricken up from the gorge with block and tackle.

CHINA:

Bloody Fighting

Fighting with their backs to the wall, Chinese troops stiffly resisted strong Japanese efforts to seal off the embattled country's whole eastern seacoast and strengthen their grip on the Asiatic mainland.

Chinese forces far to the southwest sought to join up with Allied troops driving through Burma to open up a new supply route to China from India. Only 26 miles of mountainous terrain stood between the two armies.

The 14th American air force joined in the savage battle in China, bombing and strafing the enemy and dropping tons of ammunition to the valiant defenders.

FARM HANDS WANTED: The War Food administration estimates that 700,000 extra workers will be needed during the harvest season. Many of these will have to come from cities. A WFA official said "We will need approximately 12 million workers on farms to meet peak October requirements in harvesting. That means about 700,000 city workers must be recruited."

UNREST: Uprisings in Honduras and Nicaragua are reported as unrest appears to be spreading throughout the small nations of Central America. A dispatch from San Salvador stated that the president of Honduras had already resigned, and that a passive resistance movement was developing against the president of Nicaragua. Guatamala too, was the scene of rioting.

Household Hints

For softening and removing old paint and varnish, use a rag to cover the surfaces with a mixture of two parts spirits of ammonia and one of turpentine. In difficult spots, apply with a handbrush.

When men buy their work pants have them get the longest length leg. Cut off at the desired length and save pieces for patches. In this way you have material of same color when needed.

To wash small pieces of fragile lace, put in a fruit jar filled with suds, shake vigorously for a few minutes, then rinse in the same way.

When you purchase brown sugar place it in a glass jar and put in a small piece of bread, which will dry out and the sugar will stay soft.

Blackened kettles may be cleaned by dampening newspapers in kerosene and rubbing over the pot. Complete by rubbing soap over pot, followed with a sprinkle of scouring powder.

To remove paint from your hands, try fingernail polish remover. It works like magic and does not leave an odor like turpentine does when you use it. I also find polish remover just the thing for taking off the gum left on your skin after removing an adhesive bandage.

To prevent cake from sticking to the plate, sprinkle powdered sugar generously over plate first, then proceed as usual.

The window sills will be easier to keep clean if you wax them each time after washing.

* * *

Those rubber rollers on your washing machine are precious. If they have begun to lose their grip, rub them lightly with coarse sandpaper to remove the glaze. Then wipe off with a damp cloth.

Dewey Family Group

Gov. and Mrs. Dewey, Tom Jr. and John.

New GOP Chairman

Herbert Brownell's career is in many ways a parallel to that of Thomas E. Dewey. Both were born in the Middle West—Dewey in Michigan, Brownell in Nebraska. Both are graduates of their native state's university, where both edited the college newspaper. Both went east to study law and practice in New York City. Both went into public office in their twenties to fight against political corruption. Both are typical of the young, vigorous and constructive Republican leadership that means good government and hope for the future.

Mr. Brownell has been active in politics for some time. In 1941 he was prevailed upon by Governor Dewey to become campaign manager for a candidate in a local New York election. Brownell put his candidate over, and the next year he managed Dewey's successful campaign for governor and later conducted the fight for the election of Lieut. Gov. Joe R. Hanley, of New York.

Mr. Brownell was elected to the New York Assembly five times, retiring in 1937. He was born in Peru, Nebraska, on February 20, 1904, and shortly thereafter his family moved to Lincoln where he graduated from high school at the age of 16. He attended the University of Nebraska from which he graduated in 1924. Going East he entered Yale Law School where he edited the Yale Law Journal in his senior year. After graduation in 1927 Brownell became a law clerk in the New York firm of Root, Clark, Buckner and Ballantine. He is now a partner of Lord, Day & Lord, one of New York's oldest law firms.

Brownell was a delegate to the Republican national conventions of 1936 and 1944. He is president of the 10th Assembly District Republican Club of New York, a trustee of the Nebraska University Foundation and a member of the American Bar Association and the Bar Association of the City of New York.

Attention! All Home Canners!

Before you begin your 1944 canning, Good Housekeeping Magazine advises you: use the boiling-water bath method for tomatoes and fruits, only. Can all vegetables except tomatoes by the correct use of a presure cooker to be sure of killing botulinus germs. In the last few years, cases of botulinus food poisoning have cropped up in widely different parts of the country. Buy, borrow, share a pressure cooker—but don't can low-acid vegetables any other way. If you want further information, write, Good Housekeeping Magazine, 959 Eight Avenue, New York 19, N. Y.

Rail oddities

A distinguished ex-railroader is Admiral Ernest J. King, Commander-in-Chief of the United States Navy. One of his first jobs was that of "rivet heater" in a railroad boiler shop in Ohio.

Enemy subs can't sink railroad tank cars. The volume of oil they now bring into the Atlantic seaboard area over railroad tracks is equivalent to providing Uncle Sam with 150 unsinkable ocean-going tank ships without using up any of the steel supply.

A railroad locomotive, quickly parked outside a war plant's fence and connected to the factory's steam lines, supplied power and saved precious time recently when split boiler tubes threatened to stop production.

Sixth War Loan Nov. 11

WASHINTON—The sixth war loan will begin Armistice day, Nov. 11, and will run through Pearl Harbor day, Dec. 7. it was announced Tuesday.

If the war in Europe is over by Nov. 11. the sixth drive will be held just the same but under the name of "victory loan."

The goal of the sixth war loan, if the war continues, may be higher than the $16,000,000,000 goal of the fifth war loan, which was topped by several billion dollars.

When final figures are in, sales are expected to exceed $20,000,000,000.

Swollen by fifth war loan sales the treasury's working balance, from which war costs and other government expenditure are paid, is now at $22,506,000,000.

Big Crop In R. R. Valley

Harvesting of what gives promise of being one of the biggest crops ever produced in the Red River Valley, is now under way with the first machines going into the fields Saturday and Monday to cut oats and barley, states the Warren Sheaf for last week. However, harvesting has become general throughout the territory this week.

The grain crop throughout the entire area is considered excellent and very few poor fields have been noticed. Ideal growin weather has prevailed and although some sections have reported a surplus of moisture, for the main the moisture received has been just about ideal. Weather has been cool for the most part and especially so after rains. All grain is filling out well while and the corn is showing excellent growth.—Warren Sheaf.

Senator Harry Truman from Missouri was nominated for vice-president over Henry Wallace.

The following gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Becklund on Tuesday to help Mrs. Becklund celebrate her birthday: Mrs. Hulda Jacobson of Minneapolis, Mr. and Mrs. Algot Skoglund and Vivian, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Knutson and girls, Mrs. Eddie Davidson Carol and Glenn, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Extend Call To New Pastor

At a joint meeting of the Holt Parish consisting of Nazareth, Silver Creek and Silverton congregations a resolution was passed to extend a Letter of Call to the Rev. L. C. Jensen of Wheaton, Minnesota, to succeed Rev. T. C. Hanson. Rev. Jenson comes recommended as a fine young pastor and it is the hopes and and prayers of these congregations that he will find it possible to accept this call. A decision to accept or decline this call is forthcoming within the next three weeks. A new and better arrangement in this call has been realized in that the Landstad congregation at Gatzke is no more a part of this parish and in its place the Silverton congregation will be a part of the parish.

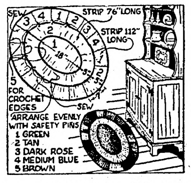
IF YOU like to knit here is a quick way to turn garments into attractive rugs. Cut or tear the rags into strips three-quarter inch wide. Turn in raw edges and use needles three-eighths inch in diameter. Knit the oval center first. Cast on four stitches and increase one at the end of each row until the depth of the work is four inches, then knit evenly for ten inches. Bind off one stitch at the end of each row until you have four stitches left. Bind these off.



The diagram gives the dimensions and colors for the bands that are sewn to this center oval. Cast on seven stitches to start each band. For the outside band, start with color three. Knit seven inches, then cut the fabric strip and sew color four to it. Continue. Use a large crochet hook and fabric strips to crochet around the oval and the outside edges.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

About 153 million tons of agricultural products were moved from farm to market by motor vehicles in 1942, and even a greater amount is expected to be transported by highway this year. Shipments of this volume call for the use of a tremendous number of tires.

Only a small amount of rubber may reach us from the Amazon Valley, but herculean efforts are being made to get it out of the jungles, as is indicated by the report that Brazilian agencies have moved 20,000 workers into the rubber-producing country.

Supplies and Troops Continue to Roll In Striking panorama of the French invasion beach was made by a coast guard combat cameraman from a hillside cut with trenches, in foreground, by ousted Nazi defenders. The channel is black with ships as reinforcements and supplies pour ashore to reinforce the troops to continue their advance southward. Barrage balloons float overhead to protect the landings. Until captured harbors have been repaired, and perhaps even later, the beachheads are being utilized to land men, supplies, munitions and food as well as hospital and canteen supplies now being furnished the invaders.

Nazi Collaborationist Loses 'Crowning Glory'

The French patriots made the punishment fit the crime (as any female who has had her "crowning glory" sheared will attest). Grande Guillotte, 23-year-old French girl was taken from her home by force and sheared of her long hair for collaborating with the Nazis. Many French patriots have joined together and have designated a large number of collaborationist suspects. While they have not announced the punishment to be given to all the men on the list, it looks as if the women will soon be missing their hair.

First Marines to Land in U. S.

The First marine division, with 2,743 happy members, arrived in San Diego after 26 months in the South Pacific. This unit struck America's first land blow at Japan at Guadalcanal. Their most recent action was on New Britain island where they drove out the Japs.

German Nurse Talks

Press interview is given by this German nurse, taken during fighting around Cherbourg. With other nurses she was later transported back to her lines while hostilities ceased.

Marines Flush Out Japs

Saipan marines attacking a Jap position flush the enemy out with demolition charges, and pick them off with rifle fire as they try to escape. The moment the photo was made marines had just killed a Nip who had tried to escape from his foxhole. Seven-eighths of the Saipan American losses were marines.

Sportlight

by GRANTLAND RICE

WHEN golf contributed $42,600 to the Red Cross from its Wykagyl, N. Y., show which Byron Nelson won in a gallop, the ancient game kicked in with its full share. Tennis did the same thing at Forest Hills, when ghosts of the past haunted the famous turf of the tennis capital.

Bill Tilden

By ghosts of the past I am referring in the main to Big Bill Tilden, the greatest tennis player of all time — and don't let people tell you anything different. Bill Tilden must take his place as one of the most remarkable stars of them all, no matter what the game.

When Big Bill first came along Babe Ruth was a pitcher — not a home-run hitter. Jack Dempsey was at least two years away from his Willard knockout. Ty Cobb was still in his prime. Rogers Hornsby hadn't started his star career. No one had ever heard of Man o' War. Red Grange was still years away. Bobby Jones was only 15 years old.

At that time lean and lanky Bill Tilden was just getting under full steam. He wasn't quite at the top, but he was heading in that general direction.

The Top of Them All

At various times in the last 10 or 15 years, I've asked any number of famous tennis players to pick the all-time top. In this list I can give you such names as Vinnie Richards, Frank Hunter, George Church—on and on.

The vote was solid for Big Bill, the lean, lanky, galloping, hard-hitting star with the best of all tennis brains.

Tilden combined power and speed with the finest type of court generalship. There were times, even through a championship final, when he was still practicing strokes. No one ever knew in his prime just how good he was.

Here's an example. Years ago against one of the Kinsey brothers, Tilden had won the first set of a championship match at 6-2. He had lost the second set at 6-4. An old timer took all the bets he could get on Tilden for the third set.

The bettor was Eddie Conlin. He told Big Bill about his 12 bets.

"What's the bet?" Tilden asked.

"I'm betting you to win the third set 6-0," Eddie said.

Tilden won 6-0. He could have won most of his sets at 6-0 except for his desire to practice and try out various strokes against opponents who were completely outclassed.

I'll never forget the final match he had with Little Bill Johnston at Forest Hills for the title. Little Bill, as usual, had given Big Bill a hard and hot afternoon.

In the final set dark clouds swept across the sultry scene accompanied by thunder and lightning. There were only a few minutes or perhaps seconds left before the storm was due. Tilden's answer was quite simple. He delivered four service aces that practically blasted Little Bill off the court.

He might as well have used a rifle.

Another Tilden Story

Years ago Ellsworth Vines was touring the country with Tilden and at that time winning most of the matches. Youth against age. "There'll never be anyone like Tilden," Vines told me later.

"A short while back we played in upper New York. I finally won after five tough sets and I was many, many years younger than Tilden. I was completely exhausted after the match. Later that night I happened to glance up and saw Tilden hurrying out of the hotel lobby.

"'What's the idea?' I asked.

"'I've got a golf date at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning with a pro in Cincinnati,' Bill said. 'I'll have to drive all night, but I can still make it.'

"Tilden made it," Vines continued, "and then carried me to five sets late that afternoon. Tilden had more stamina and vitality than any two athletes I ever saw."

It was Tilden who introduced the phrase "tournament tough."

"Tournament tough" applies to every game played, from war to any sport you know.

Big Bill has proved this for well over 20 years. His return to Forest Hills for the Red Cross was something no tennis lover should have missed.

The Old and the New

Our army and navy is composed largely of younger fighters. But we also have many older men. These two sections seem to get into many arguments as to whether or not the past was better than the present.

The older ones take you back to what has been known as sport's Golden Age, the twenties.

All we can say is that everything in sports that can be measured or timed has shown a steady advance.

Mrs. Jones Found That She Spoke Out of Turn

Mrs. Jones went shopping. When she returned, she saw that men from the telegraph company had arrived with their van outside her house. There they were, to her disgust, with a pole and a hole in the ground. She proceeded to tell them all about it.

How dared they put up a pole right in front of her house. The property would lessen in value. She was going to complain.

The foreman let her have her head for about five minutes. Then: "I'm very sorry, madam," he said, politely, "but we're not putting the pole up. We are taking it away. It's been standing in front of your house for two years!"

Household Hints

In hot weather store the bread, well wrapped, in the refrigerator.

When an iron sticks, sprinkle some salt on a newspaper and rub the iron over it.

In washing a sweater, sew the buttonholes together before putting it into the water.

A drop or two of sweet oil on the cogs of the food chopper or egg beater once in a while will keep them in good condition.

To keep greens from packing in jars, cut through two or three times with a sharp knife.

When filling salt and pepper shakers and you haven't a small funnel, put the salt and pepper into envelopes, tear off a corner of the envelope and let the salt and pepper sift through. Then none will be wasted.

A newspaper used in place of a damp cloth for pressing pants will remove the danger of scorching. The iron slides much easier. Use a sheet of plain paper when doing light trousers.

Use a card table beside your ironing board to hold the freshly ironed clothes until ready to put them away.

For something delicious, try a generous layer of applesauce between two slices of hot French toast. Sprinkle with cinnamon and serve hot.

Directing Beavers

Busy little beavers can be destructive, but if their energies are channeled in the right direction they can be most valuable workers for man.

In Idaho, the animals are caught and moved to small canyon streams where they build dams, thus aiding in the conservation of water, the raising of the water table, and the development, thereby, of many small mountain pasture lands covered with lush grasses.

JUST JESTING

Frankly Stated

"Do have some more wine," said the host, who didn't believe in spending a lot of money on entertainment. "This is what I call an honest wine."

"Ah, yes," murmured one guest. "Poor—but honest."

Did you hear about the henpecked husband who finally rebelled? He didn't mind being fed bird seed, but when his wife entered him in the poultry show, he flew the coop!

The End

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Germany Admits 'Grave Situation' As Allies Continue to Advance; Study World Oil Marketing

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

France— Surprised by sniper while on patrol, U. S. Doughboys make for ditch and prepare to return enemy's fire.

SECOND FRONT:
Hedgerow Battle

Beautiful in peace, treacherous in war, the hedgerowed fields checkering Normandy's picturesque countryside were the scene of some of the bitterest fighting of World War II, with desperate Nazis using them to conceal their rifles, machine guns and artillery to impede the relentless advance of the American doughboys.

Farther to the east, Gen. Bernard L. Montgomery's British and Canadian forces girded for a large-scale assault against strong concentrations of German armor in the plains below Caen, while enemy units continued to jab into their flanks to unsettle their positions.

Shortly after he had told his son, Capt. Quentin Roosevelt, that "the old machine is pretty well worn out," 56-year-old Brig. Gen. Theodore Roosevelt Jr., son of the immortal "Teddy," quietly succumbed to a heart attack in an army tent on the Normandy battlefront, where he had been assistant commanding general of the 4th infantry division.

As the Allies edged forward in northern France and received a continuing stream of reenforcements, some allegedly direct from the U. S., American and British aviators were swooping down on German communications lines in efforts to disrupt the flow of enemy reserves and supplies to the flaming front.

German Soil

No longer able to maneuver freely on the vast spaces of Russia, and with its back to its own homeland, the German army on the northern sector of the eastern front found itself confronted with the problem of being forced to stand up and fight or allow the Reds to carry the war into their own country.

As the Russian army became the first Allied force to approach the threshold of Germany, bitter fighting continued to rage before the enemy's "Gothic line" in northern Italy, where the Nazis again took advantage of the high mountain country to slow up the Fifth and Eighth armies advance to the rich agricultural and industrial regions beyond.

As the Germans fell back toward their East Prussian border in the north, German propagandists made no bones about the critical situation, declaring that the time had come for the complete industrial and military mobilization of every man in the Reich capable of working or bearing arms.

PACIFIC:
Spotlight Shifts

The spotlight in the ever widening Pacific warfare shifted back to northern New Guinea, where 45,000 desperate Japanese sandwiched between U. S. beachheads all along the coast, repeatedly attempted to break through the iron ring being forged around them.

In the islands farther to the north, U. S. warships and planes continued to pepper the important stepping stones to the Japanese mainland, with Guam below captured Saipan the major target.

Despite the ferocity of their attacks in New Guinea, the position of the Japanese forces was hopeless, with Yanks occupying large patches all along the 600 miles of coastline to their west, and other Allied forces firmly entrenched to their east.

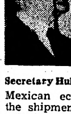
FOURTH TERM:
F.D.R. Willing

One week before the Democratic national convention met in Chicago, Franklin D. Roosevelt, looking cool in his seersucker pants and white shirt, but wriggling nervously, told a gathering of 200 quiet newspapermen that if the people of the U. S. decreed, he would be willing to serve a fourth term as president.

With the country's objective being a speedy end to the war, a durable peace and the creation of a prosperous economy, F. D. R. said that he would have to accept a fourth term as a "good soldier" if the people again called upon him to remain at the helm of state.

F. D. R.'s announcement was front page news the world over, with both British and Russian papers playing it up without comment. The German radio disclaimed interest, saying: ". . . One is convinced here (in Berlin) that military and political issues which are now at stake are not to be influenced by this or that President of the United States."

DIPLOMACY:
Good Neighbors



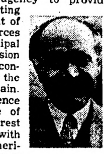
Secretary Hull

Provision of American transportation facilities for movement of goods to Mexico, and close economic cooperation between the two countries in peace as well as war, dominated the formal discussions of U. S. Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Mexican Foreign Minister Ezequiel Padilla.

Not only did the U. S. promise to help hold up the Mexican economy by maintaining the shipment of goods to the good neighbor, but it also agreed to furnish technicians and equipment for bolstering the country's own sagging railway system.

Basing their discussions on a program drawn up by a U. S.-Mexican commission created as an outgrowth of President Roosevelt's visit with President Camacho in 1943, Hull and Padilla announced that the two governments agreed to "discourage trade barriers which may unduly interfere with the economic development of Mexico and trade between the two countries."

Oil Parley



Lord Beaverbrook

Organization of an international administrative agency to provide orderly marketing and development of world oil resources will be the principal topic of discussion of a formal oil conference between the U. S. and Britain.

The conference promises to be of particular interest in the U. S. with depletion of American reserves as a result of record war time production for the supply of the major bulk of Allied needs, and with the projected construction of a private pipe-line across Arabia to the Mediterranean with U. S. government funds.

The conference will follow technical discussions between petroleum experts of the two countries, with Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Lord Beaverbrook being in charge of the U. S. and British delegations.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

BUSTLES: Something faintly resembling the old-fashioned bustle has made its appearance in the New York fashion shows. It's only a little bulge, it's true, sometimes in the form of a stiff bow, sometimes a series of fishtail ruffles in the center of the back, but it's a legitimate descendant of grandmother's day. So far it has only appeared on afternoon gowns and cocktail suits.

COCOA: The tight situation will soon be relieved by the arrival of 667,000 bags of cocoa beans from Africa. The new Brazilian crop will soon be coming in, dealers say. Recently manufacturers of cocoa products have had to reduce their grind to 70 per cent of the 1941 base quantity for civilian use, but they can now go on a full schedule again because of the new receipts.

Shanghai Kelly

Few persons ever shanghaied more sailors than Shanghai Kelly, who kept a notorious saloon on the San Francisco water front in the 1870s, says Collier's. Yet no one ever saw a drugged seaman carried out of the place.

All Kelly's victims were thrown down chutes that landed them in waiting boats beneath the building.

Due to an unusually large demand and current war conditions, slightly more time is required in filling orders for a few of the most popular pattern numbers.

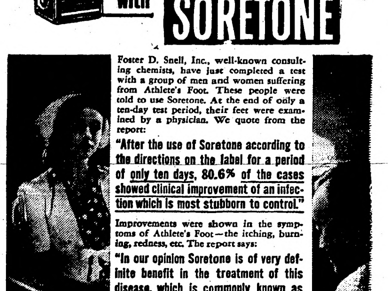
"80.6% of sufferers showed CLINICAL IMPROVEMENT after only 10-day treatment with SORETONE



Foster D. Snell, Inc., well-known consulting chemists, have just completed a test with a group of men and women suffering from Athlete's Foot. These people were told to use Soretone. At the end of only a ten-day test period, their feet were examined by a physician. We quote from the report:

"After the use of Soretone according to the directions on the label for a period of only ten days, 80.6% of the cases showed clinical improvement of an infection which is most stubborn to control."

Improvements were shown in the symptoms of Athlete's Foot—the itching, burning, redness, etc. The report says:

"In our opinion Soretone is of very definite benefit in the treatment of this disease, which is commonly known as 'Athlete's Foot'."

So if Athlete's Foot troubles you, don't temporize! Get SORETONE! McKesson & Robbins, Inc., Bridgeport, Connecticut.

HOME CANNED PEACHES DELICIOUS WHETHER CLING OR FREE-STONE

Clingstone peaches are excellent, but a great many persons prefer the flavor of freestone fruit and also find it somewhat less troublesome to prepare for canning. Whether cling or freestone, good raw peaches make good canned ones, provided they are canned right, but right canning can do nothing for greenish, bitterish, poorly flavored fruit.

Gladys Kimbrough, Home Service Director for Ball Brothers Company, advises those who can peaches for the first time, and those whose canned peaches are below par, to select tree-ripened fruit, when possible, and sort it for size, color, and condition before washing and peeling it.

Skins may be stripped from some well-ripened peaches after they have been scalded in boiling water about a minute and then dipped in cold water, but the general run of them require other methods of peeling. The lye method, while practical when a large quantity is to be canned, requires skill. To lye peel, put four tablespoons concentrated lye in an enamel or granite kettle. Add two gallons water and heat to boiling. Put peaches in a basket and hold in the boiling lye from thirty to sixty seconds; then wash immediately in cold water. Rinse through several waters to remove all skins and all traces of lye. The fruit will darken if left in lye too long or if not well rinsed.

Usually, paring with a knife is the most practical way of peeling. The peaches should be washed clean and drained before peeling. After peeling, the fruit should be cut in half, and the stones discarded. Freestone fruit has better flavor and nicer, cleaner appearance if the red fibers are cut or scraped from the cavities.

Dropping the peeled peaches into weak salt-vinegar water (one tablespoon each to one gallon of water) helps prevent discoloring. They should not be left in the water longer than thirty or forty minutes and must be well rinsed before canning.

Clingstone peaches are prepared for canning by removing the skins by one of the methods described above. Clings may be halved (before peeling) by cutting around the peach with a sharp knife, beginning at the stem end and following the crease. After cutting, hold the peach with both hands and twist in opposite directions. This pulls one side away from the stone. Use a regular peach pitting spoon, a teaspoon, or a knife to remove the stone from the other half of the peach. Peel the halves by scalding, by the lye method, or by paring with knife. If preferred, the peach may be peeled and then halved by cutting around the stone with knife. The easiest way to remove the flesh from the stone is to cut it in wedge-shaped slices.

Miss Kimbrough recommends hot packing and processing in a hot-water bath canner. Here are her two favorite recipes: (Use the longer cooking and processing time for clings and other very fine peaches.) Method I. Make a sirup of 1 or 2 parts sugar to 1 of water, depending upon the amount liked and the amount available. Add peaches, a few at a time, and simmer until hot through (4 to 10 minutes). Pack into hot jars, layers overlapping, cavity side down. Cover with sirup in which peaches were cooked. Process (cook in jar) 10 to 20 minutes in hot-water bath. Can left-over sirup for pudding or ice cream sauce. Method II. Add from 1 to 1½ cup sugar and one cup boiling water to one gallon prepared peaches. Cook gently until peaches are hot through and sugar dissolved (10 to 20 minutes). Pack and process as instructed above. If there isn't enough liquid to cover peaches in jar, add boiling water after they are packed.

If one is short of sugar, a sirup may be made by boiling two cups white corn sirup, two cups sugar, one cup water, and one-eighth teaspoon salt together five minutes. Honey may be used instead of sugar but it changes the flavor, and sometimes the color, of the fruit. From three-quarters to one cup sirup is usually needed for one quart of peaches. The fruit should be well covered with liquid. (If one runs out of sugar, peaches may be canned with plain boiling water. They keep just as well that way but do not have as good flavor.)

Once fine fruit is selected, carefully prepared and processed right, canning success is assured if jars and caps are used according to the manufacturers' instructions. These instructions will be found on printed leaflets packed in every carton.

DRIED MILK

What Are Its Post-War Possibilities For Dairy Farmers?

ALL NORTHWEST DAIRY MEN should know—(1) Despite increased war needs, total U. S. dry milk production was less in 1943 than in 1942. (2) However, partly because Land O'Lakes has quadrupled production in the last two years, this trend is now reversed. (3) Land O'Lakes is, in fact, now one of the largest dry milk producers in the nation.

GROUPS OF CREAMERIES have planned, built dry milk plants like the one pictured above, have manufactured and are now marketing dry milk—aided in each step by Land O'Lakes experts. In some areas, these dry milk projects have added as much as 30% to the average milk check of dairy farmers!

SEVENTEEN such projects are now in operation. This new dairying development promises to be one of the most lucrative, sound, long range advances made by dairying since the quality improvement of butter.

Good Hens Don't Start Their Vacations This Early..

Records of a flock of hens trapnested into the second year at the Minnesota Agricultural Experiment Station showed that hens quitting this early are likely to take a long expensive vacation. Here's the record:

JUNE quitters were idle for 193 days.
JULY quitters were idle 155 days.
AUGUST quitters were idle 108 days.
SEPTEMBER vacationers took 90 days off.
OCTOBER vacationers only 75 days off.
NOVEMBER and DECEMBER vacationers were back in production in only 45 days.

Pioneer Game Warden Died

William F. Munch, 70 years old, who retired in June after 38 years of service as a state game warden, died at a Crookston hospital on Sunday, July 23 from injuries sustained in an automobile accident on Wedesday, July 19.

Mr. Munch was thrown thru the windshield of his car after apparently having lost control of the machine, which jumped a curb and plunged into a house.

Born May 27, 1874, at Lakeland, Minn., he moved with his parents to northern Minnesota when he was 7 years old, and resided at Red Lake Falls for three years before moving to Crookston, which city had since been his home. After graduating from Crookston high school he was employed in various capacities until he received his appointment as state game warden.

For the past nine years he had devoted most of his time to conservation work and lecturing.

Surviving is a brother, Graham of Chicago, and two sisters, Mrs. Martha Webster and Mrs. Emma Kelsey, both of Crookston. Mrs. Munch passed away only a month prior to her husband's death.

Funeral was held at Crookston on Tuesday last week.

Word has been received here by Mrs. Iver Larsen that her brother Lester Hansen has been wounded in action in France.

A large crowd was present at the Ladies Aid meeting on Tuesday at the Nazareth Lutheran Church. Plans were made for the annual Harvest Festival.

Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Johnson and family arrived here Monday from Oakland, Calif., where they have been employed for some time.

Carl Ellestad Killed By Train

The people of this community were shocked on Monday to hear of the sudden death of Carl Ellestad, brother of Mrs. O. H. Nohre. For the past few years Carl has been working at the State Hospital at Fergus Falls. He was walking into the city there on Sunday evening when a fast train hit him killing him instantly. Carl was deaf so he could not hear train approaching. He spent several years farming his place now rented by Glenn Peterson.

Funeral services will be held at Spring Grove, Minn., this week where he will be buried in the old family plot near his old home. He was 60 years old.

He leaves to mourn his sudden passing, one brother and three sisters, T. E. Ellestad and Clara of Spring Grove, Mrs. Visness of Keen, N. D. and Mrs. O. H. Nohre of Holt.

The Weather

The weather the past week has been hot and dry. The grain is ripening fast and the harvest is on in full swing. Several farmers report that they are thru harvesting and will start next week to thresh feed grains.

Late Wednesday evening we had a dandy rain here that cooled things off a little and also was badly needed for the potatoes and pastures.

Shedding Needles

It is quite natural for deodar to shed its needles. Evergreens shed their needles or leaves like other plants, but they do not shed them all at one time each year. However, if tree is shedding too profusely, it would indicate that something is wrong. It may be too little water or lack of an acid fertilizer. One pound of commercial fertilizer to the inch of diameter of trunk of tree. Also add a good fistful of aluminum sulphate to each pound of fertilizer.

Why Farmers Should Buy and Keep War Bonds

by R. R. Renne
President
Montana State College

BUILDING financial reserves, paying off debts, helping to fight dangerous inflation, and patriotism, are all good reasons why farmers should buy and hold War Bonds.

A good financial reserve is an important part of sound farm management. War Bonds are safe investments and are almost as liquid as cash. Thus, they comprise an excellent financial reserve for unexpected needs and emergencies. After the last war prices fell rapidly, as they have after every major war, and thousands of American farmers lost their farms because they could not weather the economic storm. No other factor is more essential for continued satisfactory farm operations, through good years and bad, than adequate financial reserves.

In addition to unexpected needs for emergencies, farmers need adequate reserves to finance repairs, replacements and improvements around the farm. Difficulties in obtaining needed materials and labor for these expenditures cause farm buildings and equipment to wear out faster during the war period than in peacetime. If farmers can wait until sometime after the war ends to make these repairs and improvements, their dollars should go farther than they will immediately following the war, and better quality materials will probably be available. Moreover, too rapid or forced cashing of War Bonds immediately after the war could create a serious situation and contribute to post-war inflation. Also, holding Bonds to maturity makes it possible for the farmer to increase his investment by one-fourth through accumulated interest. Still another reason for having a good reserve in the form of War Bonds is that funds will be available for the boys when they return, to assist them in getting established in peacetime pursuits.

Many farmers still have long-term mortgage debt outstanding against their property. Investment in War Bonds now makes it possible for the farmer to help finance the war and at the same time accumulate the funds which will enable him to liquidate his debt in a lump sum after the war. Systematic purchase of War Bonds furnishes a very orderly and sure way of accumulating the necessary funds for liquidation of debt that requires large lump sums for settlement.

The extremely heavy expenditures required to carry on modern total war creates high purchasing power, which combined with shortages of materials and labor, cause serious inflationary threats. Most farmers can remember the very high prices which occurred during the last war and the very low prices and depression which followed. With the present scale of operations much greater than during the first war, it is imperative that widespread inflation in general prices and in land be prevented. Using surplus funds to purchase War Bonds helps reduce inflationary pressure in commodity markets and, at the same time, helps finance the war.

Building financial reserves, paying off debts and fighting inflation, comprise adequate reasons for buying War Bonds. However, there is still another major reason why farmers should invest in War Bonds until it hurts and this is the patriotic reason. We are engaged in a very serious struggle to preserve democracy and our way of life. The sooner we can win this war the fewer lives of our sons and daughters will be lost. Our youth are making great sacrifices on the battlefronts all over the world, and it is up to each one of us on the homefront to give all we have. Large sums of money are needed for winning the war and if we will all buy War Bonds to the limit of our resources voluntarily, we can help finish the war at an early date.

Hitler And His Two Friends

Since the attempt on Hitler's life, his headquarters, as described in a Swiss dispatch, have taken on the atmosphere of a Chicago ganster hideout in the lushest days of racketeering era. Army officers are searched thoroughly before being admitted to confer with their leader; inside they are kept at a distance from his desk and their every movement is watched by a roomful of bodyguards. A fierce Alsatian wolf dog is constantly at his master's side.

Mussolini is taking up permanent residence in the headquarters building, Hitler having expressed the desire that they "should be together in this critical hour". In addition to the hired thugs who surround him, the Fuehrer therefore has his two dumb friends, Benito and the Alsatian, always with him.

One of them he can trust; of the other, he has no fear.

Conservation Clubs Had Meet

V. M. Healy of Red Lake Falls was elected president of the Northwestern Minnesota Association of Conservation clubs at the annual meeting held in Thief River Falls on Monday evening last week.

Other officers elected include Oscar Schenkey of Middle River, vice president, and Loyd Smith of Red Lake Falls, secretary-treasurer. F. A. Brown, Grygla, retiring president of the association, was elected as the Marshall county director.

Attendance at the session was considered very good with about 15 clubs represented. Chester S. Wilson, Minnesota commissioner of conservation, was the main speaker, and discussed the various divisions of the state conservation set-up which includes land, minerals, drainage, forestry, game and fish.

Alfred Larson left Tuesday for Minneapolis where he will receive medical aid.

Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Nohre left Monday for Spring Grove to attend the funeral of Carl Ellestad.

Midland Coop. Bought Village

The unincorperated village of Burkhart, Wis., on the Willow river about 35 miles east of Minneapolis, has been purchased by Midland Cooperative Wholesale, Minneapolis, for development into a model cooperative community, it was announced last week. The purchase was made from the Burkhart Milling & Electric Power Co. for $29,500.

The Burkhart family retained the Electric Power plant which serves Burkhat village and six other communities in Wisconsin.

The Midland Coop. Wholesale had bought the mill and 16 bin elevator properties for production of mixed feeds, a year ago.

Included in the transaction are nine residences, one of them a massive 18-room mansion used as the family home by the Burkhard family, two good two-story business buildings, nearly 140 acres of farm land and the shore rights along about three-fourths of a mile of the Willow river and lake.

The village, which has a population now of about 60, was founded in 1868, along with the mill, by Christian Burckart, one of the most famous of St. Croix county's pioneers. Because of its scenic beauty the place came to be known as "Burkart's Paradise." Burkhart died in 1931 at the age of 96 and the mill had lain idle since 1933 until Midland took it over last year.

Most of the residents of the village will be employees of the feed mill. It is planned to start other business services needed by the community on a cooperative basis, to use the farmland as a trial and proving grounds for fertilizer, seed, and farm machinery, and to hold various cooperative councils, training schools, picnics and outings.

Old timers here say that we have one of the finest crops in the history of this section of the state. There are many prize winning fields in the vicinity of our little village.

Mrs. Johnny Reed and daughters Jacqueline, Joan and Dianna Rae visited at the home of her mother, Mrs. Bertha Hagglund a few days this week.

Somehow the Bus Driver Guessed Passenger's Need

For the 10th time that day the meek little man boarded the bus that passed his house, laboriously dumped a large bundle near the entrance, paid his fare and took a seat.

"Look here," said the conductor, with a scowl, "how many more times are you going to litter this bus with your bundles? This bus is for passengers, not freight!"

"I know, I know," pleaded the little man, "but only one more time; then I'm finished."

"I don't suppose that on the next trip you'll have a piano to put aboard, will you?" asked the conductor sarcastically.

"Well, I hadn't thought you'd take that, but if you'll give me a lift with it, that'll just about finish our moving. There's only the piano and the mangle left."

For You To Feel Well
24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.
If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.
Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at nights, swelling.
Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.

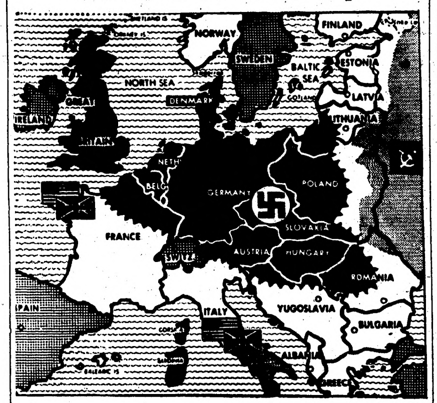
Rest and Treatment Given to War Veterans

Pharmacist's Mate FC Frank E. Newkirk of Camp Bellsburg, Ind., is operating the machine in order to determine the extent of injuries to the marine.

Wallace and Truman Led Early Convention Lists

Vice President Henry Wallace rushed to the convention to carry on his fight as well as serve as delegate from Iowa to the Democratic national convention. Letter from President Roosevelt preceded him to Chicago. He entered the convention with more pledged delegates than any other candidate. (Right) Sen. Harry S. Truman of Missouri, who did not "choose" to run, was early boomed for the vice presidential nomination as a compromise candidate.

German 'Withdrawal' in Europe



Germany's supreme war council, according to dispatch from Madrid, has decided to withdraw its forces from occupied countries. On three fronts, East, West, and South, Nazi manpower is spreading thin, after almost five years of war, because of mounting losses.

ELECTORAL COLLEGE SQUABBLE

Those who have carefully dug into the history of the electoral college admit privately that Jim Farley's legal counsellors, who hatched the idea of electors disregarding the popular vote, did some smart thinking, not from the viewpoint of a fair election but in regard to historic precedent.

Most famous case in which the electors flouted the majority of voters was in the election of 1876 between Hayes and Tilden. But there have been other interesting and more recent cases, though they didn't upset a national election or attract much attention. For instance:

In the Teddy Roosevelt-Alton B. Parker election of 1904, Maryland cast seven electoral votes for Parker and only one for Roosevelt, though Roosevelt had the majority of the popular vote by the very slight margin of 109,497 to 109,446. . . . In the Taft-Bryan contest of 1908, Maryland electors again ignored the will of the people by voting 6 to 2 for Bryan, though Taft got a slight edge of the popular vote by 116,513 to 115,908. . . . California electors split their vote in the 1912 Wilson-Taft-Roosevelt fight by a 2 to 11 vote in the electoral college for no particular reason. Wilson ran second in the popular vote, with Roosevelt first, but two electors disregarded this and voted for Wilson anyway.

History is dotted with isolated cases where a few electors bolted the wishes of the people of their state and voted as they pleased. This, it must be admitted, was what the Constitution specified, though general custom has ruled otherwise.

In the McKinley-Bryan contest of 1896, one California elector plumped for Bryan, though the people of the state voted for McKinley. One Kentuckian did the same thing in the same election. . . . Michigan in 1892 saw only 9 of its electors vote for Benjamin Harrison and 5 for Grover Cleveland, though Harrison got the popular vote. . . . Ohio cast one electoral vote for Cleveland in the same election, though Harrison carried the state by a slender margin.

All of this background indicates why FDR's politicoes, though not admitting it publicly, are scrutinizing credentials carefully and are not at all happy about the electoral college threat in the South.

RED 'TIRE-TAPE'

Strange as it seems, American motorists soon will have a chance to buy German and Japanese tires. Behind this is a story of inexcusable government red tape and procrastination.

Inside fact is that, immediately after Pearl Harbor, U. S. officials began buying up all sorts of tires in South America, accumulating tires imported to Latin America from every part of the world, some of them five to twenty years old. Several hundred old Japanese and German tires were found among Brazilian stocks.

When these tires were originally imported into the United States, they were allocated largely for military use, some for lend-lease, some for government agencies.

Last November, however, synthetic tire manufacture was increasing and it was decided to sell a large number of these imported tires to civilians. Here came the first red-tape hitch. The tires had been purchased by the Rubber Development corporation, an FEA agency. But Rubber Development did not want to sell the tires to Defense Supplies corporation, a Jesse Jones agency, except at the price which it had originally paid in Brazil. This price, in order to get the tires away from Brazilians, had been high.

But Jesse Jones and his Defense Supplies corporation, being shrewd bargainers, didn't want to buy at that high price.

More Red Tape.

Finally, Rubber Director Col. Bradley Dewey stepped in to help cut the red tape. Rubber Development's high price was met. But then, more delays developed.

Finally, on February 28, 1944, Colonel Dewey signed a strongly worded directive demanding once again that the tires be turned over to civilian use. However, it was not until June, four months later, that the transfer to Defense Supplies corporation was finally completed.

Thus, seven whole months were wasted while the tires gathered dust.

¶ It wasn't what the governor of North Carolina said to the governor of South Carolina, but rather what several governors of North Carolina said to each other en route to Chicago. All came to the convention together, in addition to North Carolina's Lieut. Gov. R. L. Harris, ex-Speaker Will Smith, and ex-Congressman Frank Hancock.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Reports of Revolt in Germany Follow Bomb Attack on Hitler; Yank Forces Push Guam Drive

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

DEMOCRATS:
1944 Platform

Declaring that their platform really was Franklin D. Roosevelt himself, the Democrats meeting in Chicago for their national convention renominated the President for a fourth term, and called for the continuance of New Deal domestic policies and the creation of a world organization to preserve peace through use of force if necessary.

For agriculture, the Democrats pledged price guarantees and crop insurance, and declared their objective to be to keep it on a parity with industry and labor; extend rural electrification and develop broader domestic and foreign markets for farm products.

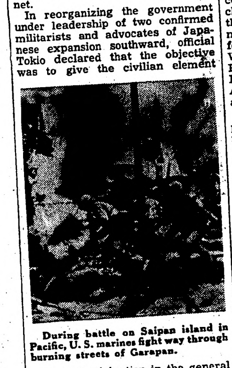
For the postwar period, the Democratic platform asked compensation for workers during demobilization, reduction or repeal of wartime taxes and simplification of the tax structure, and encouragement of risk capital and new enterprise.

Besides U. S. participation in an organization to keep world peace, the party's foreign relations platform called for extension of the administration's trade policies, and reaffirmation in the principles of the Atlantic Charter.

PACIFIC:
Jap Shakeup

With the invasion of Guam, U. S. forces took one step closer to the Japanese and Asiatic mainland, even as the enemy reorganized his government at home with the fall of Premier Hediki Tojo and his cabinet.

In reorganizing the government under leadership of two confirmed militarists and advocates of Japanese expansion southward, official Tokio declared that the objective was to give the civilian element greater participation in the general war effort, heretofore controlled by Tojo and the army clique.



During battle on Saipan island in Pacific, U. S. marines fight way through burning streets of Garapan.

Despite their belief in Jap expansion, the new leaders have been noted for their disposition to accomplish it without interference with Allied interests, and some quarters suspected that their appointment might be an intimation of a friendly enemy approach to the U. S.

U. S. forces streamed into rocky, desolate Guam to retake one of the first American possessions seized by the Japs after Pearl Harbor, following 17 days of heavy naval and aerial bombardment, which came on the heels of occupation of Saipan island in the Marianas.

FARM VALUES:
No Spree

Although good returns on heavy volume have stimulated agriculture during World War II and led to a brisk turnover in farm lands at increasing values, no runaway credit extension has marked the realty dealings.

With operators purchasing two-thirds of the record number of farms sold in 1943, 51 per cent of the transactions were for cash, and most of the remainder involved large cash down payments.

Because farm land values were about 75 per cent of the 1912-'14 level when the war broke out, they are still about 50 to 60 per cent below the inflated prices of 1920 despite their steady rise. although the average rise in value has been about 37 per cent, increases have totaled as much as 53 per cent.

Inflated values above real earning possibilities in some localities has hindered the Farm Security administration's tenant purchasing program.

British forces clean out Nazi snipers on outskirts of Caen.

EUROPE:
Stubborn Foe

Allied forces continued to slug forward in Normandy, gaining ground by the yard in the face of stubborn German do-or-die resistance all along the curving front.

Fighting was intense both on the western end of the front where U. S. forces pressed forward against the enemy holding out behind the cover of the tall, thick hedgerows checkering the countryside, and on the eastern end where British armored columns broke through the foe's formations in the open plains. With about 75,000 men facing the British in this sector, Nazi Marshall Rommel attempted to curtail the Allied drive by sharp counter-attacks.

British forces exerted the heaviest pressure in recent fighting because the open country allowed use of their armored equipment behind terrific artillery barrages. Bad weather continued to hamper full scale operations of the Allied air force, both in support tactics and bombardment of enemy communications behind the lines.

Internal Revolt

With the Allies pressing in on all sides, Hitler is faced with internal revolt within Germany, with the Nazis reporting that a clique of army officers sought to establish a new government and prepare the groundwork for surrender.

Climax of the sensational plot was the attempted assassination of Hitler with a bomb, which exploded within 6 feet of him, causing him slight injury and more seriously hurting 13 of his aides.

Moving swiftly to quell the revolt, which reportedly had the support of high ranking army officers, the Nazis executed several of the ringleaders and designated Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler as commander within Germany to suppress the uprising. Rebels' plans reportedly called for seizure of control of the country through military units.

Addressing the German people over the radio after the attempt on his life, Hitler roared: " . . . I am convinced that by stamping out this very small clique of traitors . . . we will now at last create that atmosphere in the rear at home which the fighting front needs. . . ."

Russ Advance

Russian armies continued to exert the strongest pressure on the eastern front, continuing their drive on East Prussia in the north and rolling deeper into Poland farther to the south.

As the Russians pressed the Germans on the east, Allied troops moved against the Nazis' vaunted "Gothic line" in northern Italy, with an easing of their problems of supply promised with the capture and hasty repair of the western seaport of Livorno, through which 17,500 tons of shipping can be cleared daily.

With German resistance stiffening around East Prussia, the Russians swung the brunt of their attack further southward in Poland, outflanking the big industrial city of Lwow and fanning out on the open plains below Warsaw. The Russian breakthroughs continued to force the Germans to pull back to prevent encirclement from the rear.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

AMERICAN DREYFUSS: Oberlin M. Carter, former U. S. army engineer who has been called the "American Dreyfuss" because of his long fight to clear himself of a court martial conviction, died in Chicago at 88. He was charged and convicted of defrauding the government of two million dollars in connection with a project in Savannah, Ga.

NO MORE POLYGAMY: The Navajo tribal council, elders of the Indian tribe of 50,000 living in New Mexico, Arizona and Utah, has formally banned plural marriages.

CHOLERA: An outbreak of cholera in India has resulted in 34,850 deaths in three months. Fatalities are largest in the districts of Muzzafarpur and Champaran, in north Bihar, official sources say.

ARE you using one room for living and bedroom these days? Or perhaps you have had to put an extra cot in some corner of your house or apartment. In either case it is worth while to give a little extra care to the daytime appearance of the bed. A flat box on casters holds all the bedding for the simple cot shown here and slides underneath out of sight.

This arrangement makes it possible to cover the cot and pad with neatly fitted slip covers which give it all the dignity of a real sofa. The contrasting side section of plain material around the pad with end and center back cushions to match it is a nice touch. The improvised table from odds and ends also helps to make the couch do day as well as night duty.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER
A recent report of the War Department showed that Army requirements of crude or synthetic rubber for combat material included 810 pounds for a medium tank; 105 pounds for a fighter plane; 404 pounds for a 77 mm. gun carriage, down to 1½ pounds for a gas mask, and 19 pounds for a mile of field wire.
Government officials estimate that an average of one million gallons of alcohol a day will be used this year in the production of synthetic rubber. This is a big contributing factor in the shortage of certain types of beverages.

ATHLETE'S FOOT NEWS
"80.6% of sufferers showed CLINICAL IMPROVEMENT after only 10-day treatment with SORETONE
Foster D. Snell, Inc., well-known consulting chemists, have just completed a test with a group of men and women suffering from Athlete's Foot. These people were told to use Soretone. At the end of only a ten-day test period, their feet were examined in two ways: 1. Scrapings were taken from the feet and examined by the bacteriologist. 2. Each subject was examined by a physician. We quote from the report:
"After the use of Soretone according to the directions on the label for a period of only ten days, 80.6% of the cases showed clinical improvement of an infection which is most stubborn to control."
Improvements were shown in the symptoms of Athlete's Foot—the itching, burning, redness, etc. The report says:
"In our opinion Soretone is of very definite benefit in the treatment of this disease, which is commonly known as 'Athlete's Foot'."
So if Athlete's Foot troubles you, don't temporize with this nasty, devilish, stubborn infection. Get SORETONE! McKesson & Robbins, Inc., Bridgeport, Connecticut.

The proudest title in the Army

IT CONSISTS of two simple words.

Yet every soldier who's worth his salt covets it.

This title is simply:

"Good Soldier."

It isn't just happenstance that so many women in the WAC have earned this title—the proudest in the Army.

For wherever Wacs are working, both here and overseas, there you find a job well done. And done with a spirit so gallant and fine that high Army officers everywhere say of the WAC . . .

"They're soldiers. Good soldiers!"

Issued Weekly From The Home Of The Biggest Co-operative Creamery In Marshall County

Take Iron Ore From Lake Bed

The first state-owned iron ore mined from a lake bed lease in Minnesota's history is being taken from the Embarrass Mine near Aurora, Minn., reports Ray D. Nolan, director of the state Division of Lands and Minerals.

The Embarrass mine includes the Syracuse Lake Bed which is under lease to the Lake Mining Company of St. Paul and is being operated for this company by Pickands-Mather and Company of Cleveland. Nolan states that about 25,000 tons of iron ore were shipped from the Syracuse Lake Bed in June of this year, when the first shipments were made. Nolan points out that the first lake bed lease in Minnesota was granted in 1918 but that until June, 1944, no iron ore has ever been produced from such a lease.

The largest water diversion project in the state's history was necessary to make the Syracuse Lake Bed ore available to miners. A two-mile channel approximately 50 feed wide and 70 feet deep was constructed to divert the Embarrass River fram Wine Lake to Embarrass Lake, thereby by-passing Syracuse Lake and making it possible to drain it. The drainage project was completed in May of this year. Nolan says that the state will eventually receive royalties on several million tons of iron ore from the Syracuse Lake Bed.

Nolan reports that production from the 16 active state-owned mines for the quarter ending June 30, 1944 totaled 4,315,579 toes. He adds that iron ore royalty payments for the second quarter of 1944 totaled over one and one-half million dollars and that over one-third of this royalty payment covered iron ore produced from the Missabe Mt. Mine at Virginia, which is operated by the Charleson Iron Mining Company of Hibbing.

E. Erickson Got Bad Burns

Mrs. Helga Leiran, proprietor of Ma's Eat Shop had a fire in her place of business on Friday evening at supper time. She was fixing the fire in the kitchen stove when a kerosene can she was using caught fire. She put the flaming can in a pan of water and threw a coat over it to smother the flame. Elvin Erickson, Ringbo farmer, who had gone there for supper saw the can still flaming and was going to help throw it outside. He picked it up and was going out with it when he bumped into the back screen door which was hooked and the contents of the can spilled over him. His clothing caught on fire and was quite badly burned before Mrs. Leiran was able to get him covered with a blanket and smothered the flames.

Mr. Erickson was rushed to St. Lukes hospital at Thief River Falls where he has since been in a critical condition from the body burns. He has had to have several blood plasma transfusions. At this writing he is feeling better.

The Smith Paper Company at Red Lake Falls, who makes paper from the flax straw crop from this part or the state, had a bad fire on Friday which swept the warehouse of the corporation, doing an $80,000 damage. The origin of the fire was unknown.

Marilyn Wegge recently underwent an operaeion for appendicitis at Mercy hospital at Thief River Falls.

The corn crop in east Otter Tail and Becker counties, cut to ribbons by tornadic winds and hail on Thursday evening of last week, is a complete loss according to reports from the State Department of Agriculture. The small grain not yet harvested in three townships where the storm hit is a complete loss. Thousands of turkeys also were killed by the heavy hail.

DFL Candidates To Speak

The first salutes of the Democratic-Farmer-Labor general election campaign will be heard in the ninth congressional district next week when a series of five meetings is held featuring the nominees for governor and ninth district congress.

Byron G Allen, nominee for governor, and Halvor Langslet, nominee for Congress, both of Detroit Lakes, will team up with Hubert H. Humphrey, Minneapolis, state DFL campaign director, for the swing through the district.

Their speaking schedule will open in Fergus Falls Thursday evening, August 17, and the speaking trio will then move to Moorhead for Friday evening, to Thief River Falls on Saturday evening, Crookston on Sunday afternoon, and to Bemidji on Monday evening.

The Crookston meeting is the main event of the itinerary with the district DFL convention scheduled there for 2 p. m. Sunday.

The district convention will form the party district organization and will elect three members from the district to the state executive committee, thus completing the organization of the state party.

To Start Drafting Men Over 25

State draft directors have been ordered from Washington to resume drafting of men over 25 who are making no contribution to the war effort. The order, selective service officials said last week, took the form of a letter from Draft Director Lewis Hershey directing them to conform to the national policy.

This policy permits deferment of men 26 through 29 only if they are "necessary men" in essential industry and men 30 and over only if they are making a substantial contribution to the war.

Some state directors simplified this policy by ordering a "holiday" for all men over 25, regardless of jobs. Hershey's letter said that enough time now has elapsed since the policy was announced in May to make it clear to all local boards.

Hershey also asked for a review of all 1-A's—those subject to induction—in order to remove from that class the older registrants whose job entitle them to deferments. Some local boards have been slow in placing men in occupationally defered classes, it was said in Washington.

Mrs. L. Wegge returned home Sunday after staying several weeks at the Dennis Wegge home at Thief River Falls. She has been ill and Mrs. C. Davis will stay with her.

Howard Horien and Wendell Inman left yesterday for Fort Snelling where they will be inducted into he Armed Forces. Marvin Larson will leave on Sunday for his physical examination. The young people of the community gave them a farewell party on Tuesday evening.

Place This Attractive Sofa on Your Budget

YOU can buy a bond and have this sofa too, and that is about as near to having your cake and eating it as anything I know of. Here, the cake even has icing on it for this sofa is no Plain Jane of a couch with a make-shift cover. It is built around an old cot but it is smart and substantial and has a back and ends and soft reversible cushions.

The frame is the trick. The rest is the simplest sort of slipcovering job with loose cushions made to fit. The sketch shows exactly how the frame is made though you may have to substitute other materials according to what is available. Any sort of wallboard or composition board or even a damaged piece of plywood will do to nail over the framework of lumber; and it is not essential that the back be made double as shown here.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

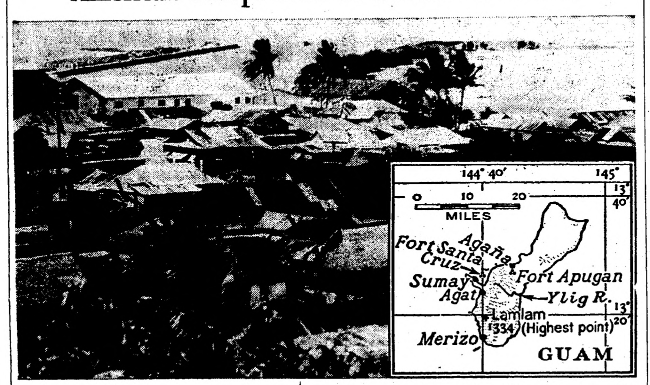
American Troops Land at Harbors on Guam



Guam, first American possession to fall to the Japs, is back under control of the military authorities. After the U. S. naval task forces subjected Jap installations to intermittent bombardment, the marines and army troops established beachheads. The Yanks drove northward and southward on the west coast, captured airports destroyed during the bombardment, killed hundreds of Japanese, destroyed tanks and installations and took possession of all major objectives.

Sportlight
by GRANTLAND RICE

AS IS usual, in an army camp, an argument over sports was under way. This one on baseball came in the wake of the recent all-star game in Pittsburgh.

Grantland Rice

The general idea was this—if you picked two all-star teams from both leagues, dating back to 1900, and they played a series of seven games, which league would win?

Naturally the first move in such a situation is the selection of the two teams. Which incidentally, will only drag in another argument. I'm sticking my neck out, but here we go—

NAT'L LEAGUE		AMER. LEAGUE
	Catchers
Bresnahan, Hartnett		Dickey, Cochrane
	Pitchers
Alexander, Matty, Hubbell, Dean		Johnson, Grove, Walsh, Waddell
	First Base
Terry, Chance		Sisler, Gehrig
	Second Base
Frisch, Hornsby		Eddie Collins, Lajoie
	Third Base
Traynor, Jimmy Collins		Bradley, Baker
	Shortstop
Wagner		Joe Cronin
	Outfield
F. Clarke, Moore, Ott, Sheckard		Cobb, Speaker, Ruth

Cy Young isn't included in the list of pitchers since the Gilmore, Ohio, phenom pitched for both leagues. His winning record of 511 games leaves the others far behind.

Having taken the first hurdle in naming the two teams the next barrier is picking the winner.

You would find on both sides, brilliant pitching skill thrown against terrific hitting. When this combination collides, the star pitcher usually has the call. Only great pitching could suppress these hitters, but the great pitching is there.

Rating the Two Squads

1. The catchers—Here the American league has at least a shade. As good as Bresnahan and Hartnett were, Dickey and Cochrane are at least close to being the two all-time tops, especially on the power side.

2. The pitching—Anyone who can say that either league has the winning margin here is a better guesser than I am, taking all eight in their best years. Walter Johnson would be the hardest to beat, but the two sets average arm and arm. We'll give the pitching a draw.

3. The infields—With Sisler and Gehrig the American league has a decided advantage around first base. Bill Terry was about the best all-around first baseman the National league had to show, but there may be a stronger choice in Frank Chance. The consistent batting power of Sisler and Gehrig is well above the N. L. pair.

I'd say the A. L. also has the edge at second base with Eddie Collins and Nap Lajoie on the job. These two were among the harder and better hitters, although neither outranked Hornsby in this respect. They were also among the greatest defensive infielders in baseball history.

The Summing Up

The A. L. takes a healthy lead in the outfield. Cobb, Speaker and Ruth form an incomparable trio. Just back of these would come Jackson, DiMaggio and Ted Williams.

Fred Clarke of Pittsburgh, Terry Moore of St. Louis, Mel Ott of the Giants, Jimmy Sheck[illegible] of Chicago's Cubs (also Bro[illegible]n) might form a stronger defensive combination. I think they would. But they would be outclassed on the attacking side in the run-making department.

For that matter Cobb, Speaker and Ruth were never listed with the lame and blind defensively. They could also roam quite a bit.

To help out the army-camp argument, it would be my guess that the American league outfield would supply the winning balance on the side of power. They wouldn't be murdering such pitchers as Hubbell, Alexander, Matty and Dean but when you add up the combined assaulting ingredients the A. L. can offer, you get a trifle too much for the N. L. to match.

The National league's best chance would be in the box with four of the smartest pitchers and four of the greatest competitors that ever baffled a batting eye.

In this ledger the A. L. wins in a driving finish.

College Football Outlook

One odd fact is that 1944 will have many more colleges playing football than 1943 could show. Army colleges will still be up against the same handicap that wrecked so many teams last fall.

From present indications, after the start of midsummer practice, a far greater number of squads will be more evenly matched than they were a year ago where too many teams were badly outclassed. Few experienced players are left now.

Household Hints

When having difficulty in opening a fruit jar with a metal top, place it upside down in hot water and leave for a minute or two and try again. The metal top will usually expand and loosen readily.

A little paraffin on a sticky window cord will be found helpful.

One should keep a small bag of fine sand in the kitchen if coal oil or gasoline stoves are used. In case of an explosion or fire, the sand can be thrown over the flames which will probably extinguish them and save the destruction of the home.

Elephant, Even When Mad, Doesn't Forget Gratitude

Even when mad, elephants sometimes remember those who have shown favor to them. "An elephant never forgets."

At Goa, India, a child was saved by a mad elephant, which ran about the market place killing every man he came across. He saw lying on the ground the child of a woman who had given him frequent presents of fruit and vegetables. He stopped, picked up the child tenderly with his trunk, and set it upon the counter of a shop.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

The reason for the great demand for tires and other rubber products for military motor equipment is evident when it is realized that today's infantry divisions require 3,500 ordnance vehicles of 160 different varieties. The same size outfit in World War I was equipped with 4,400 horses and 153 ordnance motor vehicles.

Because of the poor condition of tires and other parts, 43 per cent more cars had breakdowns and had to be towed from the tunnels beneath New York's Hudson River in 1943 than in any peacetime year, although traffic was 28 per cent lower than in 1941.

EUROPE:
Yank Break-Through

With the harassed Germans holding down British gains on the eastern end of the Normandy beachhead, U. S. troops unloosed a powerful assault on the western sector to break through the Nazis' first-line defenses and force an enemy withdrawal along a 40-mile front.

With heavy bombers preparing the ground for the big offensive with an earth-shaking attack that buried many of the German soldiers and showered dirt over their guns, U. S. armored forces then rode into battle to exploit the breach in the defenses. As the enemy pulled out, U. S. fighters and fighter-bombers swooped low to shoot up the retreating columns.

On the eastern end of the front, Nazi Marshal Rommel threw in a succession of counter-attacks to curtail the British advance south of Caen, with fighting see-sawing as one side would go into action when the force of the other's initial assault had been worn off.

As Lt. Gen. Lesley J. McNair, 61, watched the ground forces he had built up in action in Normandy, he was killed by enemy fire.

Renowned for having reorganized the old "square" division of 20,000 men into the modern "triangular" unit of 15,000, and one of the leaders in the development of powerful, mobile anti-tank guns to combat the armored battlewagons, General McNair had received Gen. George Marshall's praise as the "brains of the army."

A soldier for 41 years and veteran of the Mexican campaign and World War I, General McNair was commander of U. S. ground forces before being sent abroad recently on a secret assignment. While observing the North African fighting in 1943, he was wounded by shell fragments.

Near Warsaw

Capital of old Poland and deep inside the Germans' defense lines, the ancient city of Warsaw reverberated to Russian guns as the Reds pressed their offensive on the central sector of the 800-mile eastern front.

While the Russian spearheads pointed almost halfway across old Poland, Allied troops drew up in Italy for a grand assault upon the enemy's "Gothic Line," first of his defenses guarding the northern plains. Taking advantage of the mountainous terrain on the approaches to their new fortification system, the Germans resisted stubbornly in heavy delaying action.

As German lines stiffened on the northern end of the eastern front, and Hungarian troops slowed up the Russ drive in the Carpathian foothills in the south, the full weight of the Reds' advance was thrown into the central sector, where the open plains gave the Nazis no natural cover.

DROUTH:
Partly Broken

Although varying rainfall broke an extended drouth in the Ohio and middle Mississippi river valleys to help bumper plantings along, the eastern coastal sector from New England to Maryland suffered from continuing dry weather.

With corn tasseling and new ears appearing; soybeans starting to fill, and pastures drying, the wet weather arrived in the Midwest at a critical time.

Although the rainfall pushed the corn along in Kansas, an important part of the estimated 207,918,000 bushel wheat crop was threatened with ruin by moisture as it lay in the field because of a lateness in harvesting and shortage of facilities for moving the grain to market.

PACIFIC:
Japs Wilt

Bringing all of their superior firepower into play, U. S. forces in the far Pacific continued to tighten their foothold on Japan's inner ring of defenses around the Marianas islands, while farther to the south in New Guinea desperate enemy detachments tried futilely to crack the iron ring General MacArthur has been fastening about them.

As big U. S. naval guns tore into enemy emplacements inland to supplement heavy artillery fire, U. S. troops bore down on Tinian island in the Marianas, while other American units broke up frantic Jap counter-attacks to consolidate their hold on Guam, one of the first U. S. possessions to fall to the enemy after Pearl Harbor.

By establishing beachheads all along the northern New Guinea coast, General MacArthur succeeded in trapping thousands of Japanese troops in between, and many of these were attempting to upset the American lines before the steel noose could be drawn around them tighter.

U. S. LAND:
Disposal Program

Government decision to auction off 8,000,000 acres of surplus farm land originally required for war purposes, has created a mild tempest in Washington, D. C., with the Farmers' Union insisting on the Farm Security administration's handling of the disposal as part of its tenant-purchasing program.

Under plans of Surplus Property Administrator William L. Clayton, the Reconstruction Finance corporation is to supervise the program, with appraisals submitted by local experts; sales made as promptly as possible without disrupting the market; former owners given opportunity to repurchase sites, and tracts broken up into individual units.

Spearheading the Farmers' Union opposition, President James G. Patton declared that Clayton's plan would lead to dominance of the program by the National Association of Real Estate Boards, with control over permanent resources by big interests.

Of the $59,004,006 worth of surplus property disposed of up to mid-July, no real estate was included. Aircraft and aircraft equipment made up the bulk of the sales, the RFC reported.

CIO:
Political Power

Prepared to raise up to $3,000,000 for the forthcoming elections, and planning to organize neighborhood political groups with the assistance of union members, the CIO's Political Action committee looms as a powerful, influencing factor in the 1944 campaigns.

Sidney Hillman

Headed by Russian-born Sidney Hillman, chieftain of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union, the CIO's Political Action committee calls for: All-out aid to returned servicemen; full employment after the war at fair wages; good housing; medical care and schooling for all; equality of opportunity, and an adequate social security system.

First objective of the committee is to register every eligible voter for the fall elections, and it reportedly has spent a substantial part of $300,000 in this work, with another $400,000 available for immediate use.

"Love thy neighbor—and organize him!" says the committee.

HOTELS: Service in hotels, already below minimum peacetime standards, will be still further reduced by order of the War Manpower commission. Hereafter hotels must be classified as "locally needed," to obtain the WMC's help in finding employees. Furthermore hotels may not employ men under 45, except in special cases, the WMC ruled.

MARRIAGE BY MAIL: As far as the army finance department is concerned, marriages by mail are valid if the state in which the contract is made recognizes them as such. The comptroller-general gave this opinion in a case involving a wife's allowance payments. He cited many legal opinions on the subject, dating back to the time of the first World war.

Real Diamonds Are Cold to Touch; Electrify If Rubbed

The war has created a greater demand than ever for diamonds. With a little care, a genuine stone can be distinguished from an imitation by its touch. A real stone will always feel cold, whereas an imitation one feels warm. If a diamond is rubbed with a cloth until it has been warmed by friction it becomes charged with positive electricity. An imitation stone will not.

A tourmaline or a topaz, if treated in the same way, also becomes charged with positive electricity, while amber becomes negatively charged.

Diamonds are of four distinct colors. The most valuable, absolutely colorless, are "gem" stones, and are known as "white" diamonds. The second grade has a distinct bluish tinge, the third yellow and the fourth brown.

Foster D. Snell, Inc., well-known consulting chemists, have just completed a test with a group of men and women suffering from Athlete's Foot. These people were told to use Soretone. At the end of only a ten-day test period, their feet were examined by a physician. We quote from the report:

Improvements were shown in the symptoms of Athlete's Foot—the itching, burning, redness, etc. The report says:

"In our opinion Soretone is of very definite benefit in the treatment of this disease, which is commonly known as 'Athlete's Foot'."

PRESS COMMENT

"Never has there been such unanimity behind a candidate. Last night most of them had their first chance to see him (Dewey) and observe this new leader at first hand.

"The answer came in a strong and telling speech. It would be difficult to find a parallel for its hard-hitting eloquence in Convention oratory. It found its unity in an insistent realization of where the immediate task lies . . . in a sense, what he said was less important than what he was. It was above all else a task of leadership—of those intangibles which make a man stand out from his fellows, that render him unique, that make men turn instinctively to him for direction."—New York Herald Tribune.

MOVING Your 1944 GRAIN CROP

This year's bounty from the fruitful lands of the northern Great Plains states will be a richly-earned tribute to the indomitable farmers and ranchers who responded to embattled America's plea for more and more basic foodstuffs with what may be an all-time record production of grain.

It is a fight which is being won the hard way; for although Providence has been a beneficent ally, providing generously of sun and rain, agriculture's manpower problem was and still is a discouraging factor.

And, those who soon will have new grain to market should know now that manpower will be one of two important factors in the transportation of the 1944 crop. The other is the freight car supply.

Normally, Great Northern Railway mobilizes cars at strategic points in the system's territory many weeks in advance of harvesting, thus making equipment immediately available once the grain begins rolling to country elevators.

But, of course, this is not a normal year. Establishment of car reservoirs has been impossible because of the tremendous demand on the nation's railways for freight equipment necessary for transportation of war supplies and materials.

Unloading grain at markets is a manpower problem. Today, with a new harvest in progress, the Northwest's terminal markets are alarmingly undermanned. Another war-made labor shortage, this situation affects transportation of the 1944 crop, for unless your grain can be unloaded promptly at terminal markets and cars returned to the railway, the movement of your neighbors' crops will be delayed. It's a matter of keeping the cars moving!

Great Northern is constantly mindful of its obligation to agriculture in its territory, and has joined with government agencies, shippers' groups and terminal market operators in solving this new wartime emergency.

Meanwhile, the railway will do its best to keep on the green light for the speediest possible movement of this year's crop.

Flower Show At Middle River

Two distinct Garden Society Shows have been planned for the Red River Valley counties for the week of August 20 by the Ninth District Minnesota Horticultural Society. C. M. Pesek of Crookston, president of the Ninth District Society states: "The Garden Clubs of the north end of the district have accepted the invitation of the Middle River Garden Club to stage their show on Sunday, August 20. The garden clubs of the south part of the district have selected Halstad for their flower show on August 22.

Mr. L. H. Oftedahl, secretary of the Ninth District Society states that a premium list of 79 lots has been arranged for each of the two shows and that premiums will be furnished by the Red River Valley Development Association,

Show classes and lots listed include Annuals, 37 lots; Perennials, 18 lots; Gladiolus, 16 lots; Potted plants, 8 lots; Artistic section, 4 lots; and Victory Garden exhibits of ten varieties each. The C. M. Pesek trophy will be awarded to the exhibitor with the largest number of points won in the entire show. The L. H. Oftedahl trophy will be awarded to the high point winner in the Gladiolus show.

Meetings of the garden clubs of the two districts will be held in connection with each of the two shows. The Minnesota State Horticultural Society and the Northwest School of Agriculture will furnish speakers for the meetings. Entries for the flower shows close at 12:00 noon on the show date, the speaking program will be held at 2:00 p. m. on the day of the show.

Information regarding these shows may be secred from Mrs. E. M. Evans of Middle River.

We have received a letter from Mrs. Kenneth Baker that they are now living in Yakima, Wash. where she and Joel went recently to join Mr. Baker who is employed at Pasco, Wash., about a hundred miles from their home. We are also sending them the News to their new address.

Relatives and friends gathered at the Clarence Ness home on Sunday afternoon and gave Mrs. Ness a parcel shower. She received many nice gifts and a delicious lunch was served.

Rural Schools Need Teachers

Some Marshall county rural schools are going to have a difficult time to operate this year unless more qualified teachers volunteer their services to teach during the term, Miss Hattie Anderson, assistant county superintendent of schools reported last week.

Last week there were approximately 30 rural schools listed without teachers employed for the approaching term, which is almost one-third of the operating rural schools of the county. Several of these schools have prospective teachers on their lists, but they have not signed on the dotted line as yet. There are approximately 100 rural schools scheduled to operate in the county during the year.

Salaries for teachers in county rural schools will average about $135 a month for the coming term, which is considered very good.—Warren Sheaf.

To Enroll Confirmation Classes

The Confirmation classes of the Nazareth Lutheran Church will be enrolled on Saturday Morning at 10:30. The members of last year's Junior Class will be enrolled as the Senior Class and are expected to be present. The Junior Class will be enrolled as in prior years. They should be 12 years of age on or before July 1, 1944. If the person is not of this age and still desires to enroll, the parents should consult the pastor prior to or following this day of enrollment. Classes will be meeting until the pastor leaves and then it is hoped that some one else will meet with the confirmants until the successor arrives.

Word has been recieved here that Mr. and Mrs. Pete Hanson, former Holt residents and for the past several years residents of Badger where Mr. Hanson has been section foreman, have now moved to Pelican Rapids, Minn. where Mr. Hanson will fill the same job.

Mr. A. E. Nelson, Superintendent of the Holt High School, reports that school here will open on September 18. The late date will be used in order to give the students a chance to go out and help in the potato picking. We will have a complete story on the school opening next week.

Did You Know This?

Passengers traveling on American railroads are now three times as safe as they were during World War 1.

Poison Ivy has three shiny leaves in a group. Two unusual instances of persons being affected by poison ivy, without knowing of contact, might well be cited. One was that of a man who caught up his dog in the water on a lake shore. The dog had been in contact with poison ivy and the man got the poison too. Another instance was the poisoning of several women who had been gathering bittersweet late in the season last year. They did not touch poison ivy they said, but the two vines were growing close together.

1000 Threshers Needed Now

With harvest nearing completion in the Red River Valley, tue Agricultural Extension Service has called for 1,000 threshers, bundle pitchers, bundle wagon drivers, and other workers needed to man threshing rigs.

"The Valley's harvest is one of the area's best", says Paul E. Miller state director for the Agricultural Extension Service. "It will go far in helping to feed our armed forces in France, Italy, in the South Pacific, and elsewhere, and in liberated countries as well as ourselves here at home—if we can get enough workers to help finish the job; that of manning the threshing machines.

Christian O. Saastad Died

Christian O. Saastad, 79 year old pioneer of this community passed away at his home here on Wednesday morning after having suffered a stroke about a week ago that left him paralyzed.

Mr. and Mrs. Ing Sjurseth of Sarles, N. D. were week end visitors at the home of their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. G. I. Sjurseth. They have now moved to Badger where Mr. Sjurseth will take over the position as section foreman. He has spent about thirty years with the Great Northern Ry. at Brocket and Sarles, N. Dak.

Constitution Amendments

Besides two articles in the original Bill of Rights, only two other proposed amendments to the U. S. Constitution failed because they were not ratified by the necessary number of states.

The first, proposed in 1810, was to bar titles of nobility, while the second, proposed in 1861, was to prohibit interference with slavery.

The pending Child Labor amendment has been ratified by only 28 of the required 36 states since it was proposed 20 years ago.

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

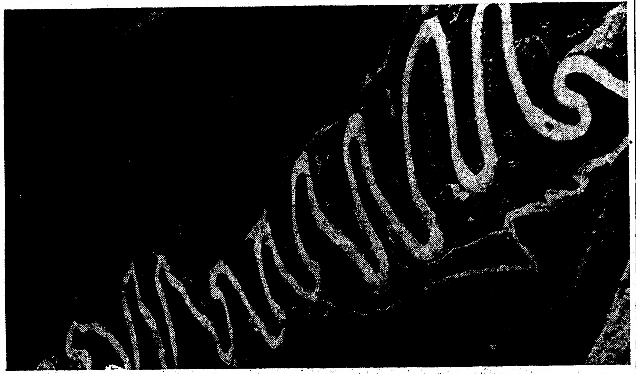
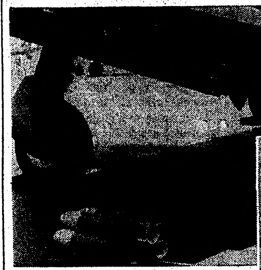
Burma Road Remains Important Military Object



This section of the Burma road in China was taken by a signal corps photographer. The China-Burma-India theater of war contains 24 switchbacks as shown in this photograph. Even before America entered the war, engineers from American military and civil life were cooperating with the Chinese in the improvement and development of this highway system. The road is essential to China. It serves as the only line of communication, outside of air, that serves a vast portion of the country. The road has been under air bombardment almost continually since the start of the Chinese-Japanese war.

America's Answer to Nazi—Rocket Projectiles



Loading Projectile

Yank shown loading a projectile into the rocket armament of the far wing of the P-47 Thunderbolt. Arrows indicate the rocket projectiles, one on each side of the Thunderbolt. Nazis complain that the new rocket is "unfair" and does not give them sufficient opportunity to get under cover. U. S. army officials report that its effect will be increased.

Rocket Armament of P-47

P-47 Thunderbolt has eight deadly .50-caliber machine guns in addition to the new rocket gun armament. Special training has been given the ground crew as well as members who operate the rocket guns.

America's answer to the Nazi flying bomb has been the further development of the new rocket gun armament on the huge P-47, which not only can do as much damage as the flying bomb, but actually does many times as much, for the bombs can be accurately placed.

Clothing Survives Flying Bombs

English families are pictured salvaging some of the clothing and hosiery still intact, after a Nazi flying bomb had wrecked a big outfitter's store in southern England. The goods were said to have been scattered far and wide by the force of the blast. Some 5,000 of these bombs have fallen in England.

By GRANTLAND RICE

Grantland Rice

IT WAS the belief of Rudyard Kipling that "the female of the species is more deadly than the male." In support of this angle he introduced the she-bear, the lioness, the female cobra and several other entries from wild life, where nature is in its raw, or primary state.

Trainer Ben Jones who has a filly named Twilight Tear under his direction, backs up Kipling. For Twilight Tear is easily the top three-year old of 1944, a thoroughbred who could have won the Derby, the Preakness and the Belmont going away. As it is she has only won 11 straight races, including the $80,000 Arlington Classic.

All of this, however, doesn't prove that the "female of the species" is even close to dominating sport. I still believe Babe Didrikson, who is at least first class in 14 major sports—including basketball, golf, tennis, swimming, diving, football, baseball, boxing, running, high jumping, javelin throwing, etc., might be too strong a combination for any male. At least she was 10 or 12 years ago.

But it is sad news to report that the ladies are still behind the best of the males when it comes to ranking them, game by game. For one example we might take up golf, a game that lacks any form of body contact.

I don't believe the best woman golfer that ever lived could come within 10 or 15 strokes of Byron Nelson, Jug McSpaden or Ben Hogan in a 72-hole medal test over a championship course. Joyce Wethered has been the best. But I doubt that even Joyce Wethered could break 300 under such conditions, where the best pros are anywhere from 275 to 280.

Certainly such stars as Babe Didrikson, Patty Berg, Helen Hicks, etc., could never meet this pro pace.

Women Tennis Stars

In the game of tennis, we might move in Bill Tilden against Helen Wills and Suzanne Lenglen. I know that Bill Tilden has always felt that he could beat either 6-0, 6-0, 6-0. He has played against both often enough to feel that his judgment in this respect was sound. I doubt that either Helen Wills or Suzanne Lenglen could ever have gotten a game from Tilden when all were at the main peak.

Certainly no woman sprinter has ever been within 10 yards of Paddock, Wykoff, Jesse Owen or the faster males, in a hundred yard or 100 meter dash. They would all be still farther back from the 220 to the mile.

They would be outclassed in the high jump, the hurdles, the broad jump, in baseball, football or basketball. The women have continued to break swimming records, month by month and year by year. But they are still well back of every masculine mark from the 100 yards to longer races, no matter what the swimming style may be.

The facts are that so far the women can't yet play games on a par with the best of the men. In their ranks they have nothing to compare with the she-bear, the tigress, the lioness, the female cobra, or Twilight Tear.

But here is a peculiar slant. In the jungle the female of the species is even tougher than the male. But it is different along the highway of civilization, if there is any such highway left.

Looking to the Future

For all of this, it is amazing how far women have advanced in every form of the sport in the last 20 years. Their improvement has been a brilliant epic. This includes golf, swimming, tennis and other games where they at least have a chance in physical ways.

Only give them a little more time. For example, taking each at the top, Babe Didrikson would have been outclassed by Dempsey, Tunney, Bronko Nagurski, Ty Cobb, etc., in their major sports. But she would have outclassed them at golf, tennis, swimming, diving, jumping, basketball, and several other major enterprises.

Just how long it will take the women to produce a Twilight Tear, a female better than all the males, is another argument. But if it can happen to a horse, why not to a human? It might be. The "female of the species" is at least upon her way.

Football Odds and Ends

Five football scouts, early starters, write me that Walker of Chicago and Yale, is the best college football player in the country, not even barring the pick of the many stars at Annapolis and West Point. It seems that Walker is only 6 feet 2 or 3, that he only weighs 220 pounds, that he is fast and rugged and happens to like the game. For the sake of Howie Odell, the Yale coach, I hope he is even better than the scouts think he is. Howie deserves it.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Motorized Columns Spearhead U. S. Advance Across Brittany; Current Budget Tops 98 Billion

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

France—With comrades covering their advance with gunfire, U. S. infantrymen sprint down village street in Normandy to new positions.

EUROPE:
Drive On

Smashing through weak, disorganized German resistance, U. S. forces bursting out of Normandy plowed into Brittany, with powerful motorized columns driving on the big seaport of Brest and the Nazi submarine base of St. Nazaire.

While Lieut. Gen. Omar Bradley's U. S. forces put the foe to rout in the west, British troops smashed forward in the central and eastern sector of the front against stronger German resistance, with the enemy seeking to retard the advance with continual armored counterattacks. With prisoners streaming to the Allied rear, the bag was over 100,000 since D-day.

Disembarkation point for doughboys during World War I and second largest port in France, Brest, along with Cherbourg, would give the Allies important terminals for the convenient supply of their armies after repair of the Nazis' extensive demolitions to facilities.

The once proud Polish capital of Warsaw became a flaming battleground for the second time during the war as Russian forces battered through its eastern environs on the central sector of the eastern front.

On the northern end of the front, the Reds strove to seal an estimated 300,000 German troops cut off in the Baltic states from other Nazi units sorely pressed around East Prussia by Russian forces under command of 36-year-old Gen. Ivan Cherniakhovsky.

Gen. Cherniakhovsky

With the Russians only about 125 miles from central Germany on the southern end of the front, the Nazis were putting up a stand behind the Vistula river, while Hungarian and Rumanian troops guarded the mountainous gateways to the Balkans.

In northern Italy, Allied forces girded for a full scale assault upon the enemy's vaunted "Gothic Line," with their advance on the new fortification system hewn in the mountainous terrain slowed by the foe's stubborn stand before the art center of Florence.

DIPLOMACY:
Swing to Allies

With the Allies battering in German defenses throughout Europe, neutral Turkey, with one eye closely cocked on the impending peace table, took another step toward the United Nations ranks by breaking off political and economic relations with the Nazis.

Meanwhile, little Finland moved to reassert her independence with Marshal Baron von Mannerheim assuming the presidency from Risto Ryti, who had bound the country to a finish fight against Russia by Germany's side. With the Nazis reported to be pulling troops out of Finland, there was talk of peace negotiations with Moscow, with the Reds demanding restoration of the 1940 border.

With Allied victories in Europe consolidating their position in the Near East, Turkey sought to gain their favor by breaking with Germany, but not before it had obtained promises of military assistance in the event that the Nazis should attack the country.

PRODUCTION:
Boost Needed

Because of an upward revision in the requirements of heavy artillery and ammunition, transport equipment, aerial bombs and communications equipment, U. S. armament production must be speeded up by 24 per cent by October, Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervell of the army service forces declared.

Revealing that manpower shortages were the principal deterrents to increased production, General Somervell said that contributing factors to the tight situation were absenteeism, a search for peacetime jobs and the unpleasantness and lower pay for work in such critical heavy industries as forgings and castings.

As Allied lines lengthened and the pace of battle stepped up requiring longer columns of transport and more and more munitions, the need for trucks, shells, bullets, etc., will continue to rise, General Somervell said, demanding stepped-up output.

U. S. BUDGET:
Near 100 Billion

Figuring on Germany's defeat before next summer but a longer war against Japan, Budget Director Harold D. Smith estimated U. S. expenditures of 98½ billion dollars during the fiscal year endng next June 30.

Of the total of 98½ billion dollars, about 89 billion will be for the war, Smith said, with possible increases in the event that the European conflict is prolonged, requiring a greater output of munitions.

With receipts estimated at 45½ billion dollars, there will be a deficit of over 52½ billion, Smith predicted, with the national debt rising to over 250 billion dollars.

PACIFIC:
Deadly Enemy

Pocketed by closing American pincers on all of the South Pacific fronts, Japanese soldiers were desperately fighting to the last, with U. S. troops literally advancing over their dead bodies.

Following the heavy enemy loss on Saipan, no less than 7,893 enemy dead were counted in the fighting on Guam, with Japanese units still resisting, while 5,000 fell on Tinian, with scattered bands directing sniper fire from caves and dugouts.

To the south along the northern New Guinea coast where a succession of U. S. landings between enemy forces cut them off from one another, fierce Japanese efforts to hack their way out of the steel trap were countered by heavy American resistance.

DRAFT:
Tighten Inductions

Although selective service reaffirmed its present policy of concentrating on the induction of men under 26, Draft Director Lewis B. Hershey prodded local boards into calling all men over that age not engaged in an essential occupation.

At the same time, Director Hershey instructed authorities to clean up the reclassification of all men over 26 in essential industry from 1-A, only leaving non-deferables in that group.

Originally, selective service's policy of concentrating on induction of men under 26 permitted postponement of the drafting of all men over 26 regardless of the status of their occupation.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

GIVE 'EM AIR: Firemen are credited with saving the lives of thousands of fish—pickerel, black bass, catfish and other varieties—that were slowly suffocating in the North Farms reservoir near Wallingford, Conn. The firemen pumped part of the water from the pond and then sprayed it back, thereby aerating it. This job took two days. Only 10 per cent of the fish have died.

EGGS: Production of eggs will be considerably lower in the second half of the year than in the first, the department of agriculture estimates. Civilian supplies will not be affected, it was added, because of the record stocks in storage. Chickens will become less plentiful in the months ahead, the department went on, and turkeys will be scarce because of military demands.

Vanity Table Can Be Made From Old Mirror and Odds and Ends

1"x3"
MIRROR FROM AN OLD DRESSER
1"x3"
HINGE
1"x2"
SHELF ON BOXES
SKIRT THUMBTACKED TO SIDES OF BOXES AND HINGED ARMS —

HAVE you a mirror from an old dresser? It doesn't make any difference about the size or shape or how "queer" the frame may be, because you may hang the mirror any old way you want to and cover three sides with curtains to make the adorable frilly vanity shown here.

Two orange crates or a pair of boxes; some odds and ends of lumber; a curtain rod; hooks and a little wire for hanging the mirror; a pair of cup hooks to hold the curtain tie-backs; a pair of hinges for the arms to which the swing-back skirt is fastened; screws and nails—that is all you need. You probably have it all around the house right now. The sketch gives all the details, and it won't make any difference how crude your carpentry may be. The curtains and skirt will cover a multitude of uneven edges and hammer dents.

NOTE: This dressing table idea is from BOOK 5 of the series of homemaking booklets offered with these articles. This book also shows how the dresser to match the mirror was combined with a fish bowl, an old portiere and a chromo from the attic to make an important piece of furniture for the living room. SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER
Millions of dollars will be saved by American purchasers of rubber items in post-war days because of the availability of synthetic and the influence its cost will have on the price of natural rubber. Rubber authorities anticipate that hereafter synthetic rubber prices will serve as a ceiling over charges for the plantation product.
Special rubber pipe lines have been developed which troops can string across rivers, ravines or gullies in battle areas to deliver fuel to motor equipment. The "pipes" yield to the force of concussion, but never break.

ATHLETE'S FOOT NEWS
"80.6% of sufferers showed CLINICAL IMPROVEMENT after only 10-day treatment with SORETONE
Foster D. Snell, Inc., well-known consulting chemists, have just completed a test with a group of men and women suffering from Athlete's Foot. These people were told to use Soretone. At the end of only a ten-day test period, their feet were examined in two ways: 1. Scrapings were taken from the feet and examined by the bacteriologist. 2. Each subject was examined by a physician. We quote from the report:
"After the use of Soretone according to the directions on the label for a period of only ten days, 80.6% of the cases showed clinical improvement of an infection which is most stubborn to control."
Improvements were shown in the symptoms of Athlete's Foot—the itching, burning, redness, etc. The report says:
"In our opinion Soretone is of very definite benefit in the treatment of this disease, which is commonly known as 'Athlete's Foot'."
So if Athlete's Foot troubles you, don't temporize with this nasty, devilish, stubborn infection. Get SORETONE! McKesson & Robbins, Inc., Bridgeport, Connecticut.

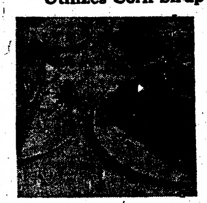
Thrifty Sugar Saver Utilizes Corn Sirup



White sirup cake is the answer to many a home-maker's prayer for a sugar-saving dessert these wartime rationing days.

The recipe, selected by Marjorie Griffin, home editor of Capper's Farmer, was among hundreds submitted by readers of the nationally circulated magazine's Home Cooking department.

½ c. shortening
¼ c. sugar
1 c. corn sirup
2 eggs, beaten
2 c. cake flour
½ tsp. salt
2 tsp. baking powder
½ tsp. soda
¼ c. sour milk
¼ c. sour cream
2 tsp. vanilla

Cream shortening and sugar. Add sirup and blend thoroly. Stir in eggs. Sift dry ingredients together and add alternately with milk and sour cream. Add vanilla. Turn into 2 greased, waxed paper-lined 6 by 11-inch pans. Bake in moderate oven (350°) for 20-25 minutes. When slightly cooled, fill and frost with Quick Strawberry Frosting:

1 egg
⅛ tsp. salt
1 c. strawberry preserves

Combine ingredients. Beat with rotary egg beater until frosting will stand in peaks. Any tart jam or jelly may be used in place of strawberry preserves. Spread.

Victory Material

The United States is winning a war for humanity in 1944 as a direct result of what our pioneer ancestors did in 1776. This nation has had 168 years of freedom. Its citizens (its fighters abroad and its workers at home) have to their distinct advantage 168 years of experience at minding their own business and taking care of themselves under a system of free competitive enterprise. It's a great asset.

I wish every child in America, at about the sixth grade, where serious study of synonyms and antonyms begins, could be impressed that liberty is the direct opposite of slavery—impressed so clearly they couldn't forget. I am afraid words that mean freedom have grown poetical and abstract to all of us. To our colonial forebears, don't forget, liberty meant escape from something decidedly awful.

Pardonable Pride

Bragging about ancestors never was a habit of mine but this year, along with millions of other citizens of the United States, I am glad my grandfather's great-grandfather was a free man. Do you wonder what he ever did for me that did me any good? Just this: He taught my grandfather's grandfather to love liberty and to understand the responsibilities of freedom. These ideas seemed to gain strength until I picked them up from my dad.

Of course this freedom would have very little value if it were exclusive to the Bensons, but it's not. There were 16 young men, back in 1776, who could qualify as my grandfather's great-grandfather and they have a lot of posterity by now. Besides, they all had liberty-loving friends that year, comrades in arms perhaps, who laid the foundation of the world's greatest nation.

Our Way Is Best

Getting accustomed to civil liberty takes time, perhaps as much time as getting used to slavery. Usually it takes a liberated nation longer than one man's life-span to become adjusted to freedom. But our freedom came six generations ago and it's being unmistakably useful now. The U. S., currently making half the world's war material, has won its war of production, has done more in three years than our enemies managed to do in 23 years.

Raising, training and equipping a huge army for a fast-moving war has been Germany's everyday task since World War I officially ended. The Japs have been prowling around civilized countries marking the soft spots even longer than that. Meanwhile America all but forgot the other war and went ahead learning and building, buying and selling with malice toward none.

On Being Prepared

Hitler figured the Germans, a sturdy and warlike people, could conquer the world if they all had his objective. As a ruler he disciplined them to obey him, but he is making them fail. Obedience is important but Hitler knows now that it's no substitute for wits. This is a war of iron-rod discipline against personal liberty and the personal ability that grows out of liberty. Who's winning?

Free enterprise is military preparedness. In the "dictator countries" people forget how to think because their centralized governments think for them. Thinkers get scarce while the masses grow torpid from being bullied. In America, keen minds whetted daily in free competition get brighter and more competent. The American system qualifies people to live in peace and plenty; in safety too, because alert people can meet emergencies.

The MAIN STREETS OF AMERICA are helping to win this war!

From the small towns in America come Aces with records of 20 and 30 planes downed. From the small towns and farms come officers who plan the battles and most important, the G.I.'s who carry out these plans through mud and mines. The "Main Street" towns are the backbone of America! They are among the first to go over the "top" on Bond, Salvage and Red Cross Drives. They are among the first in filling quotas for volunteers in the Army, Navy, Marine and Coast Guard.

After your day's work is done, you'll find a bottle of cold beer refreshing and economical. Patronize only Taverns that obey all local laws.

Good Table Manners as They Were Back in 1884

These excerpts are from the "Manual of Good Manners" published in 1844—quoted by Arthur Train in "Puritan's Progress":

"Never be squinting and scowling and examining the victuals, to see if you can discover a coal or a speck or a hair; if you find one, take it out decently, and not make a great ado about it."

"Eat what you need before you rise from the table; and not be picking and eating afterwards. Never pocket victuals at the table, it denotes a thievish disposition."

"When you have done eating, clean your plate, knife and fork, lay the bones you have picked in a snug heap by the side of your plate, scrape up your crumbs, and cross your knife and fork on your plate."

"The mouth and teeth should be scoured out once each day with cole dust, which is not only good to cleanse the teeth, but is also an excellent preservative to them."

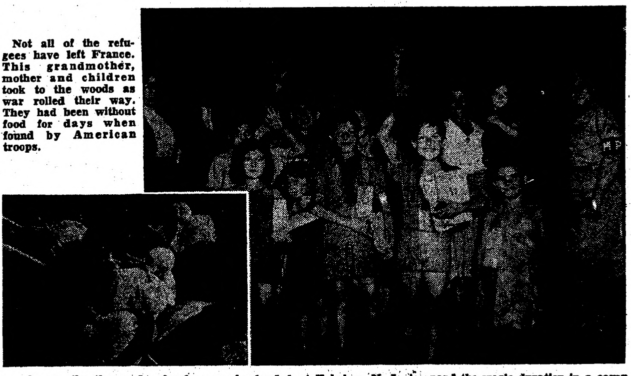
First American Ambulance Train in France

Transferring patients from ambulances to the first hospital trains to be operated in France by the American army. The train runs from Lison to Cherbourg and is made up of box cars left behind by the Germans. Insert shows closeup of wounded being loaded on train. Photo by telephoto. The box cars were completely overhauled to provide all equipment necessary to handle the wounded while they were being transferred to base hospital at Cherbourg. During the last war the U. S. army operated several base hospitals in France.

Three Generations and a Family

Not all of the refugees have left France. This grandmother, mother and children took to the woods as war rolled their way. They had been without food for days when found by American troops.



Among the thousands of refugees who landed at Hoboken, N. J., to spend the war's duration in a camp in the U. S. was the family of Jacob Dresdner, shown after coming ashore. The family is composed of Jacob and his wife and their nine children, from Hungary. With the rest of the lucky thousand permitted entry under the President's plan, they will be kept in Fort Ontario, near Oswego, N. Y., until the end of the war at which time they will be returned to their own countries. Insert shows how many of the refugees when forced to flee their homes tried to carry a few valuables with them.

by GRANTLAND RICE

MUCH to the surprise and shock of several American league managers, plus their supporters, the long time lowly Browns have refused to crack.

They have kept coyly away from the soapy chute under the smart direction of my old Titus, Ala., friend, James Luther Sewell. Luke's main instructions have been to "keep them rolling."

Grantland Rice

And the Browns have kept rolling for about the second time in over forty years, dating back to the days of George Sisler.

No one will stand up and say that the Browns have any shining set of stars. They haven't. But they have a set of steady going ballplayers, including Vernon Stephens, George McQuinn, Chester Laabs, and Al Zarilla, plus at least a good mid-war pitching staff.

They claim no outstanding stars, but their average certainly matches anything else in the American league. In Luke Sewell they have a smart and well-balanced manager who has earned their liking and their respect.

Luke ought to know his share of baseball. He began catching for Cleveland back in 1921, a matter of 23 years ago. Luke stuck with Cleveland for 12 years before he moved on to Washington—and later to Chicago. He was only a .259 hitter, but he always knew how to handle that big glove, and direct his pitching staff.

When he drew the job of managing the Browns it was something like being sentenced to Siberia. What difference did it make—who might be managing the Browns?

I talked with Luke early this spring and his only comment was: "We have just as good a chance as any team in the league. Just at this spot there are at least five teams that are evenly matched. It's the sort of race where it might be important to get the jump. That's what we are shooting for. The team that gets the jump will have a big advantage with so many other clubs killing off any single challenger."

How It Worked Out

It has worked out just as Sewell predicted. The Browns got the jump. Just back of them were the Red Sox, Yankees, Indians, etc. There was little difference.

Luke Sewell had called the turn as far back as April showers. "Get the jump."

The Yankees and Red Sox, Indians, Tigers and White Sox, all began clawing each other or one another. Once in a while some Brown challenger would win four or five in a row, then drop the next four.

The Red Sox and the Yankees both kept making threatening moves. Then the Indians cut in. But when the dust had settled on various fields and the smoke had blown away, there were the Browns still out in front, piking along and still winning their share and protecting that early jump that Luke Sewell worked for.

It is a much tougher proposition for a leading club to have only one fast-moving pursuer on his heels. When you have three or four they keep taking care of the chasers and dragging them back.

The charge has been made that St. Louis hasn't supported either club—Cardinals or Browns—that St. Louis is not a two club major entry. This is all true.

St. Louis, for one reason or another, is only a one club entry in the major leagues, and not any too hot as a one-club spot. There are any number of cities, including Los Angeles, that would be a big league gold mine in comparison.

But this has nothing to do with the ballplayers composing the double line-ups of Cardinals and Browns. But the facts are that the ballplayers working for St. Louis fans have dominated both leagues so far.

The Cardinals were a romp before the first ball was thrown back in April. The Cardinals would be an even bet against a team picked from the other 15 clubs in both leagues. But one might have thought that the uprising of the Browns would have churned up the old town in Missouri. In place of that the Dodgers in last place in the National league have been outdrawing the leading Browns.

This has soured the baseball crowd in general, taken from the map at large, against the Browns. It has been my belief that the two best baseball cities in the country are Brooklyn and Detroit, when you consider their population.

The main point in early August is that the Browns were supposed to crack some time back—and they haven't cracked yet.

And these Brown ballplayers can still use the coming world series money as well as any other club, even if their home town isn't any too keen about baseball.

Household Hints

Rain water and soap will remove machine grease from washable fabrics.

Braising, browning and cooking in a small amount of moisture with the lid on, is used for less tender meat cuts.

A tablespoonful of turpentine boiled with your white clothes will greatly aid the whitening process.

When window shades wear and become soiled at the bottom they can be taken off the roller, turned end-for-end, tacked back on the roller and hemmed at the new bottom edge.

Jellied vegetable and fruit dishes which may be prepared before the sun goes into high noon are a boon to the housewife on hot summer days.

Waffles are grand for dessert when topped with cream cheese mixed with cherry or blueberry jam. Be generous with both the cheese and jam. No need for butter as the cheese is rich enough.

To repair a break in an extension cord, strip the insulation from the wires for a few inches on either side of the break, twist the ends of broken wires together, solder, tape with rubber splicing compound and wind with friction tape. Don't put two splices side by side when repairing broken wires. Offset them a little.

410 Below Zero

Liquid nitrogen is used today in one plant in this country to produce the temperature of 410 degrees Fahrenheit below zero that is required to shrink steel parts so they may be fitted into their corresponding pieces.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Using a combination of natural and synthetic rubber in the post-war period may result in automobile tires that will establish new high marks for longevity, according to a B. F. Goodrich chemical technician. He cites the big mileage returned from Goodrich synthetic tires, made in 1940 and composed of both types of rubber, as the basis for his predictions about post-war tires.

Another reason for tires for essential transportation: At the beginning of last year, 85,168 school buses were in service transporting 4,258,788 children over 1,383,091 miles of one-way route.

Yanks Set Pace in Paris Drive; New Pacific Blows Loom as U. S. Bombers Strike at Philippines

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Pacific—Top picture shows U. S. 5th air force bomber at right struck by Jap anti-aircraft fire above Kokas, Dutch New Guinea, while bottom photo depicts its crash into the sea while accompanying plane flies back home alone.

EUROPE:
Fronts Afire

The whole French battlefront quivered to the clap and clatter of gunfire as U. S. and British forces pressed their twin offensives against the German lines, with American troops reported approximately 50 miles from Paris.

While mechanized columns speeded the U. S. advance upon the former French capital from the west, British and Canadian forces were making slower progress to the north below Caen, where strong enemy armored formations hacked away to contain the onslaught while still other large concentrations defended their exposed flank.

As the Allied drive on Paris rolled on through good tank country, U. S. forces in Brittany threw in all the weight of their superior gun and tank fire to reduce the coastal ports of Brest, Lorient and St. Nazaire, which would open up important supply lines from the Atlantic ocean.

With every man, woman and child in East Prussia mustered for civilian war service, and Russian forces lurching on the threshold of their "holy soil," Nazi armies fought bitterly to hold off the Red forces advancing on that Baltic province of Germany.

Tough German paratroopers, who faced the American onslaught at St. Lo, developed a deep respect for U. S. fighting qualities.

According to one of their reports, which fell into American hands, they declared: "Enemy artillery is distinguished by the accuracy of its fire and maneuverability. Employment in depth, changes of positions, self-propelled guns—during infantry attacks close to the front lines—is the doctrine followed. A great number of observation planes makes it possible . . . to fire effectively even on small targets."

Speaking of U. S. fire and phosphorus bombs and high explosive ammunition, the report revealed: "They cause stomach trouble and headaches. . . ."

Farther to the south, the Nazis countered Russian advances upon the former Polish capital of Warsaw with equal stubbornness, with the Reds seeking to relieve the stalemate by switching their attack from the front of the city to the northeast in an encirclement attempt.

On the southern end of the long eastern battlefront, the Russians pushed within 75 miles of the German industrial province of Silesia, while other Red forces moved within 27 miles of the Czecho-Slovak border in the towering Carpathian mountains, where the rugged terrain was suitable to Nazi defense.

As U. S. and British troops poised for their assault on the enemy's "Gothic Line" in the hills north of the Arno river in Italy, Polish and Italian units harassed the Germans on the eastern or Adriatic end of the battlefront.

With the Allies girding for an all-out drive on the latest enemy mountain fortifications, their problems of supply over earthy, choky roads in the rugged country were relieved by the restoration of the seaports of Livorno, Civitavecchia and Piombino.

PACIFIC:
Battle Plans

"It's good to see you, Doug," said the President upon greeting General MacArthur at Pearl Harbor, and on that note did the nation's chief executive open a three-day war conference with Pacific military and naval leaders on the development of new offensives for the unconditional surrender of the Japanese.

Heralding things to come in the Pacific theater, American Liberators raided the Philippines for the first time in 27 months, striking at airfields on Mindanao island, while giant B-29s flew over Japan itself to rain fire-bombs on the shipbuilding center of Nagasaki, and attacked oil refineries at Palembang in the East Indies.

Completely restored after the attack of December 7, 1941, Pearl Harbor was bristling with acres of planes, tanks and other battle equipment as Mr. Roosevelt inspected installations during the conferences. As a result of these developments, the President said, Hawaii was no longer an outpost of U. S. defense, but "one of our rear areas."

WEATHER:
Rain Needed

As another heat wave struck parts of the Middle West, drought conditions were intensified east of the Mississippi river, with crop growth faltering in many sections.

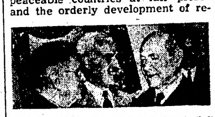
According to the weather bureau, Kentucky may harvest only 50 per cent of a corn crop, while condition of the grain was spotty in Illinois, Michigan, Indiana and Ohio, due to heat and moisture deficiency. In southern Illinois, soybean growth was poor to good, while extensive failures of potatoes, pastures and gardens were reported in Ohio.

West of the Mississippi, however, corn prospects were excellent, with promise of a banner crop in Iowa where the drought was broken in the south, and a record harvest in Nebraska, with one more good rain.

OIL:
Allied Accord

The withholding of raw materials from prospective aggressor countries to contribute to postwar peace loomed as a result of an oil pact signed between the U. S. and Great Britain, which conditioned future distribution of the product on supervision of an international organization to maintain world security.

Calling for availability of oil to all peaceable countries at fair prices and the orderly development of resources without competitive wastes, the pact envisions the future organization of an international oil commission to advise governments on how they should produce and sell the product.



U. S.-British oil conferees included (left to right) Interior Secretary Ickes, Undersecretary of State Stettinius, and Lord Beaverbrook.

Other provisions of the pact seek to assure the recognition of the principle of equal opportunity in obtaining concessions.

CANNED FRUIT PRICES: Government support prices on canned peaches, pears, apricots, fruit cocktail and fruit mix packed in 1944 will be set at 86.4 per cent of the area average ceiling prices for the industry, or 86.4 per cent of the canners' gross civilian ceiling prices, whichever is lower, according to an announcement of the War Food administration.

APPLES: An average crop of apples is predicted for the year by members of the International Apple association. About 123 million bushels will be harvested, according to the association. Of these, 10 million bushels will go to the armed forces, and 36 million will be sent out as lend-lease food. Maximum prices have been set for the 1944 crop.

VIGOR OF GROWING CROPS DEPENDS ON FERTILITY OF SOIL

CHICAGO.—The health and vigor of growing farm crops depends directly on the health and vigor of the soil that produces them, according to a bulletin made public here by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee.

"Farmers everywhere in the Middle West," says the bulletin, "are finding that they cannot continually draw against the fertility account of their land without making some substantial deposits in the form of necessary plant foods.

"Only by a steady program of fertility replacement and soil building practices can the continuous productivity of a farm be assured.

"The alert Middle Western farmer spends an average of several hundred dollars each year on the repair of his buildings, machinery, fences and in the purchase of new equipment. However, he spends, on an average, less than thirty dollars for the purchase of fertilizer to replace vital plant food elements removed every year by growing crops. Yet even this small investment means a greater return on his crops and improvements in the form of soil repair.

ANSWERS for Victory Gardeners

What Is the Greatest Enemy to the Nation's Food Supply?

It has been estimated that in this country alone insects use up and destroy every year the equivalent of the labor of one million men. Only by constantly fighting the battle against insects with insecticide sprays and dusts are we able to come off even partially victorious against our small enemies.

What About Dusts to Control Insects?

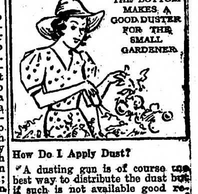
When lead arsenate is put into water and then sprayed on vegetables, the water is the carrier which permits the lead arsenate to be sprayed over the leaves evenly. The water then evaporates, leaving the poison behind it so that the insect will get a mouthful no matter where he settles to eat a meal off the plant. Water is a good carrier while spraying an upright growing plant like a potato or a tomato vine, or even such plants as beans, especially if they are the climbing variety which have been carefully put up on poles, so that you can get at them; but real difficulties develop when an insect attack comes on low growing plants. An attack of melon aphid can be a real problem for the gardener, especially if he has a large patch. He will be only too happy to turn to a dusting program.

How Do I Make Dust For My Garden?

Nicotine dust can be made easily, even by an inexperienced "hand" if the underlying principle is understood. Most insects found in the Victory Garden can be controlled with such a dust if lead or calcium arsenate in dry form is mixed with it. All that is required for an effective dust is to incorporate into dry hydrated lime dust a small amount of Black Leaf 40, being careful to mix it in an airtight container so that no nicotine fumes are lost. Needless to say, the mixing job must be thorough.

How Strong Should the Dust Be?

For a good all around dust the amount of Black Leaf 40 should be 5% of the weight of the lime. If only a little dust is needed, 10 pounds of lime may be put in a tin can with a tight cover and 8 ounces of Black Leaf 40 added. A dozen small stones the size of golf balls should also be thrown in and the whole turned end over end for fifteen minutes.



A BAKING POWDER CAN WITH HOLES PUNCHED IN THE BOTTOM MAKES A GOOD DUSTER FOR THE SMALL GARDENER.

How Do I Apply Dust?

A dusting gun is of course the best way to distribute the dust but if such is not available good results can be obtained by means of a baking powder can with holes punched in the bottom. The dust is shaken out on the plants with care taken to cover the under side as well as top of the leaves. Nicotine dust should be applied on warm days when the fumes are most effectively released. The air should be still—if the wind is blowing the fumes are blown away. Dust should be applied promptly when insects are first seen, and before infestation becomes heavy.

Can I Buy Dust Ready-Made?

In many localities packages of dust are put up commercially by local concerns which mix the lime and Black Leaf 40 and offer it fresh to the trade.

The MAIN STREETS OF AMERICA are helping to win this war!

From the small towns in America come Aces with records of 20 and 30 planes downed. From the small towns and farms come officers who plan the battles and most important, the G.I.'s who carry out these plans through mud and mines. The "Main Street" towns are the backbone of America! They are among the first to go over the "top" on Bond, Salvage and Red Cross Drives. They are among the first in filling quotas for volunteers in the Army, Navy, Marine and Coast Guard.

After your day's work is done, you'll find a bottle of cold beer refreshing and economical. Patronize only Taverns that obey all local laws.

County Wage Hearing Held

A County Farm Labor Wage hearing was held at Warren, on August 28th the purpose of which was to establish wage rates for Mexicans who might be hired by the farmers of Marshall County during Potato and Sugar Beet Harvest.

The rates set are as follows:

Potato picking, .08c plus .02c bonus; potato loading $1.00 per hour.

Sugar beet topping was set at $1.35 per ton by a hearing held at Denver, Colorado earlier in the year.

The above rates do not apply to domestic labor but will serve in most cases as a guide to what the wages will be in the potato areas. The rates correspond with other areas of the Valley and should be of value to both the workers and the growers.

Mr. Gust Hamnes of Stephen, member of O. D. T. Potato Emergency trucking committee also reported briefly on trucking rates which were established at a meeting in Grand Forks are as follows: One man and truck

.04c per bag up to 6 miles
.05c per bag up to 10 miles
.06c per bag over 10 miles.

The general feeling of the growers are that the potato harvest would start approximately September 10th and that there would be good demand for pickers and loaders to help take care of nearly 12,000 acres of potatoes in the county.

~~Most of the High Schools of the~~ County are cooperating and plan on a vacation during potato harvest thereby allowing a maximum number of students to help with the picking. A good supply of labor is expected to move into the area from the eastern counties.

The Weather

The weather the past week has run on the bad order for the farmers. Over the week end we had rain on Saturday with clearing weather on Sunday. Monday and Tuesday were nice and dry. Another deluge of rain set in on Tuesday evening and kept up all thru Wednesday and Thursday and was still drizzling early this morning. There is a lot of threshing left and this wet spell is making it hard for the farmers to take care of their nice crop this year.

Grand Forks had a five inch rain on Tuesday evening which practically flooded the area.

Dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. Sanoden on Saturday evening were; Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Nelson, Rev. and Mrs Hanson and sons and Mrs. Inga Backlund.

Rev. and Mrs. Bennie Heinze and family of Fergus Falls, visited at the Glennen and Fluke homes Tuesday evening.

● Land O' Lakes advertises its own brand of butter in the metropolitan markets of America that contain 65% of the nation's people!

● Efforts of the oleomargarine interests to get Congress to eliminate the taxes on colored oleomargarine have so far been unsuccessful.

● Land O' Lakes has been known for more than two decades as the pioneer in and protector of quality dairy products. As long as consumers know the quality of butter, they will not demand oleo.

● Before the next 12 months have passed, there will be 28,000,000 dairy cows on American dairy farms.

● It takes that many cows to supply military and Land-Lease needs, on top of civilian requirements. But come the end of the war, dairy farmers will find protection and added benefits in the "cooperative-cooperative" marketing system developed in the past 23 years by Land O' Lakes.

Christmas Mailing Overseas

Save strong string and box material and start to plan shopping, Postmaster General Frank C. Walker advices Americans in announcing the rules for mailing of Christmas gifts for Army and Navy personnel overseas.

This year the Christmas mailing for both Army and Navy overseas forces is the same - - September 15 to October 15. After October 15 no gift parcel may be mailed to a soldier without the presentation of a written request from him.

The great demands upon shipping and the need for giving preference to arms, munitions, medicine and food is the prime reason for the early mailing date. Moreover, gift parcels must travel great distances to reach Army and Navy personnel who are located at remote points, and frequently the transfer of large numbers to new stations necessitates forwarding of packages and additional time is required.

The response that our people made last year during the overseas mailing period demonstrated that they will cooperate in any measure designed for the welfare of our armed forces personnel,' Mr. Walker said. 'It is not easy to concentrate on Christmas gifts in the midst of warm weather here at home but our people recognized the need, and because they want the men and women who are absent from their homes to know that they are not forgotten at Christmas they took pains to assure prompt delivery of Christmas gifts.

Sunday afternoon visitors at the Leo Horien home were: Mr. and Mrs. John Reed and family of Thief River Falls, Mr. and Mrs. J. Borchert and Bonnie of Mentor, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Horien and family and Mrs. Al Fredrickson and daughters.

Frank Erickson and daughter returned last week from Harmony where he had attended the funeral for his brother and also visited his aged mother.

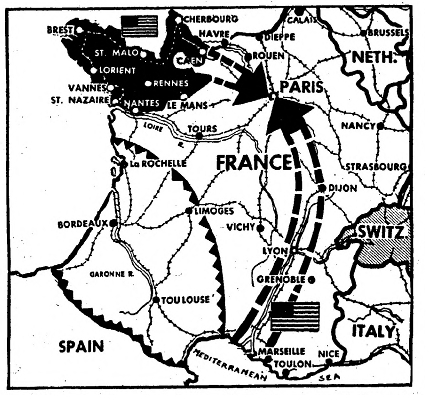
—WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS—

Allies Jolt Nazi Grip in France; Reds Carry War to German Soil; Summer Drouth Hits Ohio Valley

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)



With landings in southern France and sweeping advances in the north, the Allies are forming a huge pincers to squeeze German forces in that country, as arrows in picture show.

FRANCE:
Form Pincer

With Allied forces everywhere on the move, the Nazi hold on France loosened, and German troops fell back to escape the death traps that lightning U. S. armored thrusts were forging.

In the north, U. S. columns that drove on Paris threw out a long arm around the left flank of the German army that wriggled out of the Falaise-Argentan pocket in Normandy, threatening the retreating enemy with still another entrapment.

While these U. S. columns under leadership of Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton pressed the Germans around Paris, British and Canadian forces hammered at the enemy in the region extending to th English channel to the north, pushing him back on a continuous front.

Maj.-Gen. A. M. Patch

Swift Allied advances in the north were matched by equally successful gains in the new invasion area of southern France, where liberation troops spearheaded by Maj.-Gen. Alexander M. Patch's American Seventh army thrust far inland before encountering stiffening enemy opposition in the mountainous country.

As the regular army formations drove inland, they joined hands with scores of paratroopers, who had been dropped far back of the beachhead areas to sever enemy communication lines and hamper his forward movements to the fighting zones.

As was the case in Normandy, many Czechs, Poles and Russians were included in the German units which manned the coastal defenses, and as the fighting raged further inland from Toulon to Nice, the Allies bucked up against a better caliber of enemy troops.

Encouraged by the Allied successes the French underground intensified their sabotage of Nazi communications and installations.

EASTERN FRONT:
Enter Prussia

In the face of heavy Nazi resistance and repeated counter-attacks supported by rocket fire, Russian troops under 36-year-old Gen. Ivan Cherniakhovsky crossed the East Prussian border to carry a war to German soil for the first time in 30 years.

As the Germans savagely countered the Russian invasion of East Prussia with continuing counter-attacks, the Nazis were reportedly throwing fresh reserves into the battle from Himmler's home guard.

On other sectors of the 1,000-mile front, German resistance was equally bitter, with the Nazis yielding ground grudgingly in the Baltic states and employing tank and infantry forces to slow the Red drive on Warsaw.

To the south, the enemy also brought his mechanized units into counterattack to impede the Russian advance on the central German border, 75 miles away from the front.

CIVILIAN GOODS:
Reconversion Step

Although the War Production board has allowed the use of surplus labor and factory facilities in the manufacture of civilian goods, no appreciable increase in the output of such material can be looked forward to until Germany is defeated, when it should jump 39 per cent to prewar levels, WPB Czar Donald Nelson declared.

WPB's order permitting limited manufacture of civilian goods constituted the fourth and final step in its program for gradual reconversion, previous provisions allowing use of aluminum and magnesium; construction of postwar working models of products, and immediate ordering of machine tools.

Under the WPB's latest ruling, manufacturers able to employ surplus labor will receive priority assistance for producing such items as electric ranges, heating stoves, pails and buckets, electric flat irons, farm machinery except tractors, and water storage tanks for agricultural use.

PACIFIC:
Step Up Bombing

With U. S. bombers operating west of New Guinea and pounding the enemy's shipping plying beyond the Philippines and Celebes islands, the position of 150,000 Japanese troops trapped within American lines in the South Pacific continued to deteriorate.

As U. S. bombers continued to range to the west of New Guinea, other U. S. aircraft hammered at Japanese bastions in the Bonin islands, guarding the southern approaches to the Nipponese homeland, 600 miles away.

While U. S. bombers continued their softening up campaign of the enemy's strategic island defense system, American ground forces dug into newly won positions in the Marianas, Adm. Chester Nimitz declared that it might not be necessary to invade Japan to win a lasting peace.

DROUTH:
Crops Periled

With only half a month of the June-August summer season remaining, the Ohio valley anxiously hoped that showers east of the Mississippi would develop into substantial rainfalls and break a two and a half month drouth, during which Tennessee had only about 45 per cent normal precipitation, Illinois 50 per cent, Indiana 52 per cent, Kentucky 44 per cent and Ohio 61 per cent.

Besides inflicting damage ranging from 10 to 70 per cent on corn crops in some areas, and threatening soybeans and gardens, the heat and drouth seared pasturage, compelling farmers to dip into dwindling feed supplies, and inducing many to hold back on purchases of stockers for future fattening.

Although the Ohio valley remained hardest hit by the drouth, continued dry weather threatened crops and pasturage in a wide region, including the North Atlantic coast area, the Northwest and Texas and Oklahoma.

RADIO PICTURES: A British radio and television expert recently disclosed plans to set up wireless photo-telegraphy stations that can flash complete typewritten or printed pages at the rate of 25 pages per second. At present the rate of transmission is six minutes for one page or picture. It is possible to speed up photo-telegraphy as much as 15,000 times, the inventor states.

WANTED CHEWING GUM: A burglar who broke into a filling station in New Haven, Conn., took gasoline coupons for 300 gallons, and then set to work to get what he really wanted—chewing gum. He smashed a vending machine, grabbed 100 sticks of gum and hastened away. He ignored the pennies in the machine and the money in the cash register.

SOLDIER READING:
Ease Restrictions

Irked by the army's interpretation of the political propaganda ban in the soldier's voting law, which resulted in exclusion of much popular reading matter in military camps, the senate moved to ease the tight administration of this provision of the act.

Originally, the law stipulated that no newspapers, magazines, motion pictures or literature paid for or sponsored by the government, and containing political propaganda, could be distributed to the armed forces.

Much of the trouble lay in the army's rigid interpretation of the word "sponsored," which it took to mean permitting the sale of popular reading matter containing political material at service posts, or use of company funds to subscribe to newspapers.

WHEAT:
Perennial Brand

Agricultural pioneers even back to the days of the Czars, when they developed artificial insemination at royal stables, the Russians claim to have developed an edible perennial wheat with a gluten content of 60 per cent.

According to the Soviet's ace agronomist, Prof. N. V. Tsitsin, the perennial evolved from cross pollination of wild grasses of the agropyrum family with wheat, produced satisfactory initial harvests, with real tests to come next season.

Although plant breeders in the U. S. have long worked on development of a perennial wheat, they have met little practical success thus far, with one hybrid composed of wild grasses and the grain lacking regular qualities.

No Fun

No different than a million other young men — but not as lucky — George Danhires, 2, of Pittsburgh, Pa., crawled halfway through the opening of an eight inch areaway between the walls of his home before he got stuck. Firemen were compelled to chop part of the living room wall to free him. If the picture's any indication, it was no fun, fellas!

COTTON:
Seek Parity

In an effort to raise cotton prices to parity, which is from $6 to $8 per bale above 1944 loan rates, Sen. John H. Bankhead (Ala.) urged growers to keep the commodity off the market.

Senator Bankhead's action came in the midst of his conferences with government officials and cotton manufacturers over elevation of the price level in conformance with his congressional act calling for attainment of parity of agricultural crops.

During the conferences, Senator Bankhead said, it was agreed that early OPA revision of textile prices to reflect parity would help boost the market. As a last resort, he said, 97½ to 100 per cent parity loans were considered.

DEMOBILIZATION:
Study Discharges

The all-important but complicated problem of how to release servicemen and women from the armed forces after the war is receiving the consideration of both President Roosevelt and the high command, it was reported.

Under a reported proposal, personnel would be discharged under a point system, with so many points granted for service abroad, length of service and number of campaigns, and marital status and dependency. Personnel with the largest number of points would be the first released.

At the same time, the President was said to be considering use of some camps and training facilities in this country for vocational study and rehabilitation of vets, and modernization of others for future defense forces.

EGGS

The War Food administration holds a huge stock of eggs, purchased at a cost of between 100 and 150 million dollars to maintain prices at 90 per cent of parity. Col. Ralph Olmstead of WFA testified before a senate committee that some five million cases have been bought.

Colonel Olmstead stated that he was uncertain what disposition would be made of the eggs, although he said that probably a large part can be sent to Britain and liberated countries in a dried state.

Sportlight
by GRANTLAND RICE

Grantland Rice

I SAT at the recent East-West All-kid game with my friend Joe McCarthy, manager of the Yankees. Here we watched the picked teams from the East and West, representing 28 cities and states, at 17 years or younger. And it was here that I saw the soft spot of this sport.

Baseball is rated our national game. There are more kids who would rather play baseball than any other sport.

Baseball is our greatest game. Certainly for our kids. And yet baseball has drawn less support from all concerned than any other game.

The big leagues, both presidents and all owners, including my good friend Judge Landis, have almost completely ignored the young ball players from 13 to 17. The high schools and colleges have been even worse.

Our young football players have the best of coaching in high school. They move to the best coaching in college play. They are finished products when they reach the pros.

Our young golfers have the finest coaching and instruction that anyone could demand. All their faults are corrected on the way up.

The same is true of our basketball players and our track men. The same is true of our swimmers. They have the best of the coaching—and the best of breaks.

Why? They bring money into the box offices. Baseball doesn't.

Any sport that brings in money gets prompt attention. Those that don't are ignored.

Football gets first recognition, from high schools on up through college, on into pro ranks.

Why? Many college football teams play to financial clean-ups that run from $500,000 to $1,000,000.

Baseball can't even touch these figures. So why bother with baseball?

Back to the Kids' Game

Here is the pick of the country's kids playing baseball at the Polo Grounds. They were young, strong, fast and packed with spirit. But anyone could see the instruction they had missed, which young football players, young golfers, young tennis players or young basketball players would have received.

On more than one occasion Joe McCarthy, one of the smartest managers baseball has ever known, one of the game's closest students—would point out various faults.

It might be a catcher—it might be an infielder—it might be a hitter—

"I'd like to have that kid around just a while," Joe would say. "I'd like to tell him just a few things before his fault becomes a habit."

Bobby Jones, Walter Hagen, Gene Sarazen, Francis Ouimet, Chick Evans, these and many others, were great golfers before they were 21. Golf gave them their chance.

Football has been piled up with stars who were 19 or 20.

Baseball has known only a few who were big leaguers at this age.

The answer is that only a few connected with baseball have made any effort to see that young ball players, from 14 to 16, ever get the right instruction.

Wish Egan of Detroit is one of the few who has done a fine job along these lines. Egan has developed more than a few young stars. George Weiss of the Yankees is another. There are just a few more.

But in the main baseball doesn't look after its own—and its own are the kids who should be the stars of the future, who never get the chance or who drift into other games.

Minor league managers tell me they get these kids, full of faults, and haven't the time to bother about it.

The "naturals" can take care of themselves. So they come from the minors to the majors and are either sent back or hang around for two or three years, to be taught all over.

If baseball drew the same type of instruction or coaching that football, basketball, golf and tennis get—from the best in the business—there would be a jump of at least 30 per cent in baseball efficiency between the ages of 19 and 21. But unfortunately in this country too often the dollar comes first.

The answer I get is this—"Let baseball start to pay its way and you'll see a big difference." It will get the same "overemphasis" from coaches and others that football does now.

Pitching Prodigy

One of the most outstanding possibilities at the Kids Game was Frank Azzarello of New Orleans. He is just 17—a great prospect—a left hander who fought 12 innings with $15,000 Dick Callahan last spring and fanned 18 batters. Frank lost his game 1 to 0 in the 12th.

In addition to his brilliant pitching Azzarello is also a star outfielder with a Legion batting average of .431. Azzarello is just one of the great kids who played in this game. There were at least a dozen others

The Once Over
by H.I. Phillips

VISIT BY A REFORMED GOLFER

John Kieran, the well-known Quiz Kid, dropped in on us at our woodland nook, Lassitude Marshes, the other day. He left us feeling more ignorant than usual.

Events that were just about shaking the world were occurring, but the Wizard of Infoplease tossed them aside for native flora and fauna. Considerations of sensational episodes in Germany gave way to a study of the yellow thorn apple; the Far East crisis made way for a study of the night heron (working on the day shift), and nothing that Roosevelt and Dewey might do took precedence over the operations of robin, wren and meadowlark.

Mr. Kieran carries a microscope as he walks along country lanes, and he peers at every weed in the manner of a man locating the mainspring of a Swiss watch.

"It begins to look as if Hitler is about through," we observed as the hike began.

"Wild onion," was the answer. "Bet you didn't know any grew like this. Pretty flower under the scope, too."

"Once things of this nature begin in Germany anything can happen," we persisted.

"Look! The flight is bumpy. Always tell it's a goldfinch."

"I remember the last war . . ."

"Tansy. Otherwise known as Bitter Buttons," John was saying, with a glass in his eye again, as he inspected a yellow flower which we had spent a lifetime ignoring. He asked us to examine it under the microscope. We did. Darned if it wasn't an exquisite thing when magnified.

"Now you take those Russians," we suggested.

"Sassafras!" announced Mr. Kieran.

"Think so?" we replied. (He was referring to a green leaf he had picked.) "Taste it." We tasted it. He was right again!

"What do you think of Truman as against Wallace?" we asked a moment later.

"Cowbirds!"

"Oh, I wouldn't say that."

He was pointing to a couple of birds we had always thought were overfed sparrows.

"Lay their eggs in other birds' nests. Let the other birds hatch and raise the young. And here's a question: How comes it that the young cowbirds, never having seen or known a cowbird, will at once leave the nest and join cowbirds?"

"It must be political," we ventured, not needing the twenty-five dollars anyhow. "There's a bunch of cranes over there by that maple."

"Night heron. Flies with its feet out straight behind and its neck folded like a snake. And that's a black walnut, not a maple."

He now picked up a small yellow flower which we had never thought worthy of passing attention.

"You know the snapdragon. This is the uncultivated type. Butter and Eggs, it's called." Under the glass it was quite beautiful.

"What's this?" we asked, picking a small yellow flower that seemed the only one of its type around. We thought we had him.

"Moth mullein."

We felt pretty thick about things until a rabbit ran across the road. Here was our chance.

"Rabbit," we announced brightly.

"Could be," said John.

"Dogorun trackibus Miamibeachus," we added, to give him the Latin.

He had intended leaving on the noon train, but took the 11:05.

The prices at summer hotels and for cottages at vacation resorts have soared this summer, and an awful howl is going up. Whatcher kickin' about? Don't you know that cool breezes are harder to get these days on account of the war? Don't you understand that high tides aren't what they used to be, and that in some places they have to use substitutes?

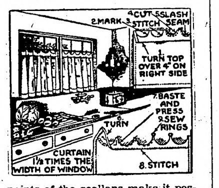
Scalloped Tops for Your Sash Curtains

HERE is a new idea for your kitchen curtains—or for sash curtains for any room. Crisp, sheer material such as lawn or organdie may be used and white or a plain light color will be most effective. The curtains are hung above eye level on a single rod fastened to the window sash. The four-inch-deep scalloped hem at the top shows through the sheer material giving a very decorative effect and the rings sewn to the points of the scallops make it possible to slide the curtains back and forth on the rods.



The trick in making the scalloped hem is in being sure that the curved edges follow a sharp, clean-cut line. All the steps are shown here in the diagrams. Use a small saucer or a large cup for marking the scallops; and when you turn them right side out, pull the material out smoothly at the points with a pin.

Arab, $200; Mule, $250

While no country is required by international law to pay claims to foreign civilians for death or damage resulting from combatant or noncombatant action of its armed forces, the U. S. government does compensate for accidents not occurring during battle and has paid over $2,100,000 to some 18,000 claimants, says Collier's. As these payments are based on local values, the accidental death of a North African Arab, for example, costs us only $200, while that of his mule costs $250.

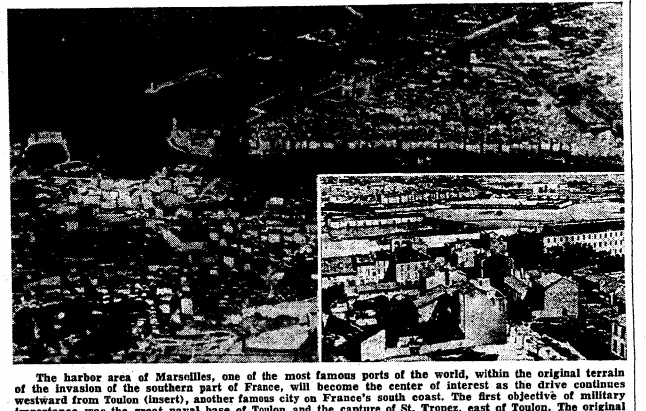
South of France Invaded by Allied Armies



The harbor area of Marseilles, one of the most famous ports of the world, within the original terrain of the invasion of the southern part of France, will become the center of interest as the drive continues westward from Toulon (insert), another famous city on France's south coast. The first objective of military importance was the great naval base of Toulon and the capture of St. Tropez, east of Toulon. The original landings and drives extended as far east as Cannes and immediately headed toward Nice as well as inland.

Amusement Park Fires Greatest in History

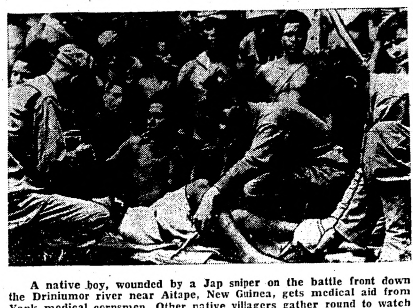
Red Cross Men Cooperate

When Avranches in Normandy fell to fast-moving American forces, this Nazi Red Cross post in a cafe was taken over by American Red Cross workers, who permitted some of the German medical corpsmen to remain and cooperate with the Americans in taking care of the many injured German soldiers who were left behind when the Nazi retreated.

Yanks Treat Wounded Native



A native boy, wounded by a Jap sniper on the battle front down the Driniumor river near Aitape, New Guinea, gets medical aid from Yank medical corpsmen. Other native villagers gather round to watch the proceedings. A good per cent of medical supplies furnished American troops is being used on the sick and injured natives.

Hay Fever Sneeze

The sniffling season is here again, and Ginnie Powell shows how the weed affects Americans who suffer from hayfever. The Pacific Northwest is the only section of the country free of the malady.

Household Hints

When clothes must be ironed soon after dampening, always use hot water as it penetrates the material more quickly.

Garden tools free from rust are easier to work with and, if a small can of tractor il and an old shaving brush are kept handy, it takes little time to clean and oil the tools after using.

Knitted woolens and wool dresses and skirts washed by hand are less likely to shrink or become matted than if cleaned in a washing machine.

If ice cubes are held under warm water for a few seconds, they will have no sharp edges to jab or cut the precious rubber icebag.

When the metal tip comes off a shoe lace, it is not necessary to discard the lace. A satisfactory tip can be put on quickly and easily by dipping the end of the lace in melted paraffin or beeswax and shaved to a point before the wax hardens.

Oftentimes a pretty flower arrangement cannot be achieved because the frog is not the right size or shape. In this case, make one by melting paraffin, molding it in the desired shape and punching holes with a heated ice pick.

Breathing at Seashore

Breathing is deeper and slower at the seashore than in the city because dust-free air permits relaxation of the respiratory mechanism that constantly filters and propels such particles back and out through the nose.

One study of city children showed that the average vital capacity of their lungs had increased from 82 to 113 cubic inches during a two months' vacation at the seaside.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Before the end of the year, the U. S. should be producing enough man-made rubber to fill all military and essential civilian needs, in the opinion of John L. Collyer, President of B. F. Goodrich, who foresees the output of 800,000 tons of synthetic rubber in 1944.

Neglect of the rubber plantations now under Japanese control may be a benefit in disguise, according to authorities, since postponing the tapping of rubber trees tends to improve their subsequent yields.

Normally only one per cent of the rubber consumed in the U. S. went into the manufacture of medical, surgical, dental and drug sundries, while more than 72 per cent was used by the tire industry.

Vanishing Jobs

One day in the outskirts of Chicago I witnessed a traffic accident. A grocer's delivery car struck one of several children playing in the street and injured him painfully. Playmates scattered in excited disorder seeking the boy's parents, a doctor, a policeman. Each child tried to do what he thought needed most to be done. The father, a hairy specimen, was the first "help" to arrive.

No sooner had his dark eyes taken in the situation than he began to scold the injured boy. He didn't actually cuff his son but he said some really harsh things for any patient to bear along with an injury. (It turned out to be a broken arm.) The unhappy deliveryman took some oral abuse also. The father contributed nothing else. He vented his anger freely with profanity in thick dialect.

Doesn't Make Sense

Maybe some learned expert on human behavior could have explained that father's actions. A suffering child wept; unknown injuries waited treatment while duly constituted authority did a loud job of attaching blame without investigation. Understanding this might help explain why people, openly committed to the interests of labor, work so effectively making jobs scarce.

Destroying jobs does not help labor. Workers are never so well off as when there are plenty of jobs. An employee's right to quit his job and take a better one makes pay good, also working conditions. Employers who are liberal and considerate of their employees get the best men and head the best organizations. This is as much a part of America's Free Enterprise system as owning property.

Where the Jobs Are

Not many years ago competent workmen often quit their jobs with big corporations to go in business for themselves. They did it, not because they were sure to earn more. In fact they knew they might earn less. They did it for liberty to use their own ideas. They had self confidence and faith that their plans would prosper. The element of chance made it fun to operate businesses of their own.

Running your own business is no fun now; more like a headache, and this sad fact is closing the doors of many one-time thriving little enterprises. Seventy-five per cent of all American workers are engaged in small business. If, in the post-war periods, small employers are hopeless; if they find no reason to stay in business, see no chance to excel, get no fun from competition, jobs will be really scarce.

Thinking Time Now

Working people in this country, if they are wisely looking out for their own interests, have no bigger stake in anything than in small enterprises, be they farms or factories. What good is all the oratory about schooling discharged service men to fit them for certain jobs if most of the jobs are doomed to vanish, leaving two men waiting for every position that's left?

There is no certainty that there will be enough jobs after the war to employ service men and former war workers in pursuits of peace. There is no assurance in the words of the politician getting tough with crippled industry saying, "Big Business must put them all to work or support a gigantic WPA to employ them." It is like the voice of the benighted father cursing his maimed child. The right steps taken will assure plenty of jobs. Next week we will start to outline those steps.

Eighty Day Duck Season

Regulations Liberalized by U. S. Fish and Wild Life Service.

Hunters may shoot more waterfowl, and over a longer period this fall and winter under liberalized hunting regulations announced recently from Washington. D. C.

The open season will be 80 days, ten days longer than last year, continuing from September 20 to December 3.

The general daily bag limit for ducks remains at ten, but an additional bag of five mallards, widgions, and pintails, singly or in the aggregate is allowed. Thus, if a hunter kills five or more of those species in a day, his bag limit on all ducks is 15.

The fish and wildlife service, which drew up the regulations, refused to permit the taking of waterfowl by means of bait or with the help of live decoys, as urged by some hunters.

Dr. Ira N. Gabrielson, fish and wildlife director, said the more liberal regulations were due to the steady increase in the continental migratory game bird population. He said the increase in mallards, widgions, and pintails has been "notable" and since they are the species which do the most damage to crops, hunters will be allowed to shoot more of them.

This is "purely a temporay expedient" to help farmers, he said, and will not be continued beyond this season unless crop protection makes it necessary.

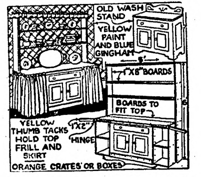
Expand Wash Stand To Fit Large Space

IT IS easy enough to make a small serving table out of an old wash stand but, when there is a large wall space crying for an imposing piece of furniture and nothing but a small wash stand on hand, the problem is something else again. Here you see the solution.



The lower sketch shows how the carpenter work was done. Note the piece across the bottom of the stand to cover the irregular line, also the hinged arms so that the skirt may open out, and the piece across the top of the stand to make it the same thickness as the arms.

Shaves and Shines Given to Invasion Yanks

Because few Chinese have any hair on their faces until they reach an advanced age, the shaving engaged in by American soldiers seems to be a most unusual operation. Here, Corp. Harvey H. Powell, a horseshoer with a veterinary company in China, but a barber on the side, exercises his tonsorial art on Pvt. Stanley C. Phillips of Dayton, Ohio, to the amusement of Chinese soldiers. Pfc. James P. Royle, Boston, Mass., wants to look neat during the invasion, so Italian youngster shines up his shoes. Italian youngsters soon found that they could earn good money with a shoe shining kit in almost any camp.

American Troops Continue Advances Into France

This railroad bridge, east of Toulon, was demolished by the retreating Huns as Allied forces continued to push steadily inland on the southern coast of France. The Nazis left little in the way of railroad tracks or bridges or highway for the advancing Allied armies. Engineer units were soon able, however, to repair or rebuild bridges and roads so that operations were not materially slowed down. The Yanks march past an eight-foot steel and concrete wall that runs the length of a beach in southern France.

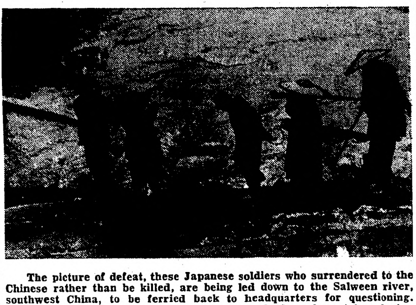
All They're Fit for Is Hanging

American soldiers examine pictures of high ranking Nazis discovered in a French hotel, formerly occupied by German officers. In nearly all former German officers' quarters captured by the Allies, large collections of photographs were found. In removing their personal effects they made no attempt to save photographs of Nazi leaders.

Hero of Children

French youngsters throng about Lieut. Gen. Omar Bradley, commander of U. S. forces in northern France, as he tours St. Brice. Any American soldier is a subject for hero worship with these children, a general is "something special."

Japanese Prisoners of Chinese



The picture of defeat, these Japanese soldiers who surrendered to the Chinese rather than be killed, are being led down to the Salween river, southwest China, to be ferried back to headquarters for questioning. They are only a small part of the prisoners who have been taken during the present Burma road campaign, which attests to its success.

Takes Small Army

Sergt. Alexander Balter of Pittsburgh, Pa., a mighty-talking fighting man. He smooth-talked 400 Nazis to surrender their three strong points on the outskirts of Brest.

Sportlight

By GRANTLAND RICE

ANY time you crawl out on the end of a limb, you've got to be ready for the limb to crack. We moved into that position recently when we attempted to name an all-time National league outfield.

Grantland Rice

In the wake of this nomination we "heard the shots fired around the world," including the South Pacific and the European front. Our nominations were Fred Clarke of the Pirates, Terry Moore of the Cardinals, Mel Ott of the Giants and Jimmy Sheckard of the Dodgers and the Cubs.

Then the fusillade opened — "What about Zach Wheat of the Dodgers?" "What about Ross Young of the Giants?" "What about Stan Musial of the Cardinals?" There were others—George Burns of the Giants, Mike Donlin of the Giants, Wildfire Schulte of the Cubs, Circus Solly Hofman of the same team, Roush of Cincinnati, Klein of Philadelphia, not forgetting Paul Waner of Pittsburgh and Brooklyn, Medwick of the Cardinals, Dodgers and Giants.

These were among the leading counter-attacks thrown at our top selections, covering only the last 40 years. That's as far back as we feel like walking, or looking.

In spite of the heavy barrage thrown in our direction, we still stick with our original pick, admitting that Mike Donlin, Zach Wheat, Paul Waner and Pep Young would be serious challengers.

Here is our testimony: Fred Clarke and Jimmy Sheckard, old-timers, are better than the modern crowd knows. Far better. Terry Moore is the best defensive outfielder the National league ever looked at, a ball player with a fiery spirit who was also a strong man on the offensive side, a normal .300 hitter.

I don't have to tell you any more about Mel Ott, the lone National leaguer who could match the best of the A. L. in power. Leave off Mel Ott and you slip in a machine gun for a howitzer or a navy 16-incher.

American League Better

I can name you two sets of American league outfielders who for total value outclass the pick of the National.

Here they are: No. 1—Cobb, Ruth, Speaker. No. 2—Joe Jackson, DiMaggio, Ted Williams.

This second American league outfield is much better than any top outfield we can pick from the National. There can't be any argument over Cobb, Speaker and Ruth, or Ruth, Cobb and Speaker. And they have only a brief nod over Jackson, DiMaggio and Williams, especially on the run-making side.

I don't believe my fervid assaulters can pick a National league outfield as good as the second American league trio I have named. Those who think they can would make poor scouts.

Bill Dickey will tell you that Ted Williams was the greatest hitter he ever saw and Bill played with Ruth, Gehrig and DiMaggio. DiMaggio was something more than a great hitter. Joe was a great ball player, about 50-50 with Tris Speaker on defense.

Into Deeper Trouble

Here is a race where we ran a poor last.

A marine sergeant sent us this problem from somewhere in the Pacific, a problem starting an uproar with several hundred dollars bet:

It seems that with two out the next man up took a swing at the third strike. He missed the strike but the ball struck his shoulder, bounded away, and he ran to first.

The marine sergeant claimed he was out. The infantry didn't think so.

I agreed with the infantry. Trusting foolishly to memory and intuition I figured he must be safe. I wrote the sergeant to this effect. Now, Ford Frick, president of the National league, writes me that I was wrong.

"The batter was out," he says. "If on a third strike the ball touches any part of the batter, he is out automatically."

I still can't understand why, as on a third strike the batter can run on a ball thrown into the dirt or on a wild pitch.

I only hope the marine sergeant doesn't sue me and I can only promise that on the next matter of rules I will consult Ford Frick before attempting to make any decision.

Golf for Cripples

The most remarkable golfer I recall was one who had both arms cut off just at the two shoulders. He swung the club head with the shaft of his club held between the chin and neck. I've forgotten his name but he used to play around 100.

There have also been cases of men totally blind playing at least fairly well with caddies to show them the right line and estimate the distance for the next shot. One blind Canadian soldier broke a hundred

—WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS—

Nazi Armies Fall Back in France; Hitler's Hold on Balkans Shaken; Lend-Lease Totals 28 Billion

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Carried on ox-carts, wounded Allied soldiers arrive at Myitkyina airstrip, Burma, for transfer to hospital plane.

EUROPE:
Nazis Pull Back

As fast-moving Allied forces pushed the Nazis back throughout all of France, German spokesmen hinted that Hitler's high command planned a withdrawal to the Reich frontier so as to concentrate the greatest number of men on a short line.

But even as the Nazis fell back, swift armored thrusts by the U. S., British and French continued to slash at the harassed enemy's flanks and threaten his encirclement from the rear, and clouds of Allied planes roared over the battle-lines to dip low and gun the retreating German columns.

With the bulk of their forces crowded in the area immediately north and south of Paris, the Germans put up their stiffest rearguard resistance in this region. In southern France, Lieut. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's Seventh army fanned out quickly in all directions, with only scattered bands of enemy troops standing up briefly to slow the Allied drive.

After capture of the great French Mediterranean port of Marseille, American engineers went to work quickly to restore facilities damaged by the Germans and enable the Allies to funnel supplies quickly to their armies in the south. Use of Marseille's installations would relieve the troublesome practice of landing supplies on the sandy beaches in shallow-draft craft.

Armistice arrangements for the German evacuation of Paris having fallen through, Free French armored columns were compelled to fight through a screen of Nazi defenders to liberate the city, with heavy U. S. howitzers backing up Gen. Charles de Gaulle's troops, and helping to break enemy resistance. Occupation of Paris with its 3,000,000 people in need of food and fuel for utilities, posed a supply problem for the Allies.

Turbulent Balkans

With formation of a peace government in Rumania, Adolf Hitler's unsteady grip on the turbulent Balkans grew unsteadier, with Rumania's defection threatening to topple Germany's whole southeastern front.

As young King Michael announced his country's willingness to accept Allied peace terms, Russia called for Rumania's expulsion of German troops from her homeland, or a war against Hungary to clear the latter from Transylvania, as the price of armistice terms.

Even as Rumania acted to quit Germany, Bulgarian peace proposals reportedly were forwarded to the Allies, who were said to have insisted upon the Bulgars' withdrawal from all occupied Grecian and Yugoslav territory as one of the armistice terms.

To prevent any peace factions from obtaining a grip in Hungary, the Nazi-inspired regime dissolved all political parties, including the conservative elements.

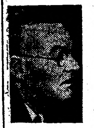
Russ Pressure

Figuring in the Balkan countries' swing toward the Allied camp was the Russians' power-house drive bearing down from northern Rumania.

As the Reds hurled their might at the enemy lines, they bored down on the Galati Gap between the Transylvanian Alps and Black sea, barring the way to the heart of Rumania and the Ploesti oil fields. From this region, there was short going before the Reds would reach the Bulgarian frontier.

POSTWAR PEACE:
Powers Confer

Meeting in the quaint, old Dumbarton Oaks estate in Washington, D. C., representatives of the U. S., Britain and Russia began momentous conferences on preserving post-war peace, with emphasis on the need of force as an ultimate resource. China was to join the conference after the Reds had finished their talks, since Russia is not at war with the Japanese and is unwilling to discuss repressive measures against them.



John F. Dulles

Accepting the invitation of Secretary of State Cordell Hull to discuss postwar peace plans, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey sent John Foster Dulles, his advisor on foreign affairs, to the capital to consult on the conferences. Hull issued his invitation after Dewey expressed concern that the major powers might overlook the interests of the smaller nations.

Although the conferees were said to agree on the principle of employing force to suppress future aggression, plans under discussion called for the use of force only after measures for peaceful settlement had failed.

ANTI-TRUST:
Railroads Named

Charging maintenance of non-competitive rates, prevention of improvements and facilities of western lines, and suppressing development of other forms of transportation, the government filed an anti-trust suit against the Association of American railroads; the Western Association of Railway Executives; 47 railroads; and the investment houses of J. P. Morgan and Company and Kuhn, Loeb and Company.

Focusing its attention on western rail operations, the government declared that establishment of higher rates in that territory than in the east placed it at a competitive disadvantage, retarding its economic growth. The government also claimed that movement of perishable commodities has been delayed by unwillingness to speed up schedules, and efforts have been made to stunt the development of truck and water transport.

In naming J. P. Morgan and Company and Kuhn, Loeb and Company in the suit, the government charged that they controlled major railroad financing and possessed substantial industrial interests in the East.

LEND-LEASE:
Aid Mounts

Declaring that continuation of lend-lease was essential for speedy victory until both Germany and Japan were brought to their knees, President Roosevelt revealed that the U. S. share of such assistance approximated 28 billion dollars up to July 1, while other countries contributed in excess of 3 billion.

Of the 28 billion dollars, Britain received over 9 billion; Australia and New Zealand, 1 billion; Africa, the Middle East and Mediterranean, 3 billion; Russia, almost 6 billion; China and India, 1½ billion, and Latin America, 172 million.

As an indication of the gigantic contribution U. S. industry has made to the war, figures showed that this country lend-leased 11,000 planes and 300,000 trucks and other vehicles to Russia; 6,000 planes and 9,900 tanks to Great Britain, and 4,800 planes, 51,100 tanks and 73,000 trucks and other vehicles to the Mediterranean area.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

USE OF AUTOS: A recent survey discloses that 74 per cent of car owners are driving their autos less than half the peacetime mileage. This reduction has come about through shorter and fewer trips rather than the laying up of cars for the duration. Gasoline and tire rationing have combined with patriotic motives to lessen car use, the survey continued.

TRAP SHOOTING: Capt. Joseph Hiestand of Hillsboro, Ohio, has once again won the North American clay target championship in the 45th Grand American Trapshooting tournament held at Vandalia, Ohio. This is the fourth time he has captured the award, the previous occasions being in 1935, '36, and '38. He broke 200 straight targets to lead the field of entrants.

Household Hints

Common sandpaper is good to use in cleaning suede purses, shoes or jackets. It removes the dirt and freshens the fabric.

Cut off just enough of the corner of the soap box to allow a thin stream of soap to pass through. The larger the opening, the more likely it is that more soap will pour out than is needed.

For crisp bacon that is juicy within, dust lightly on both sides with flour before frying slowly.

Two common causes of failure in pastry are too much working, and the addition of too much water. Flaky pie dough requires only enough water and handling to hold it together.

Next time the cream won't whip try this: add the white of an egg to the cream, chill and try again.

A half teaspoon of oil of peppermint added to the filling for chocolate pie gives a new and different flavor.

In grinding an ax on a motor-driven emery wheel or grindstone, keep the fingers on the ax-head to test its temperature. If the metal gets uncomfortably hot in the hand, stop grinding to keep the ax from losing its temper.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER
Normally there are 20 per cent more tire failures during the summer months than others. Tests have shown that at a temperature of 90 degrees tires wear out twice as fast as at 60 degrees and that at 100 degrees they wear out five times as fast as at 40 degrees.
Even with production being restored at Far East rubber plantations and our synthetic plants working at peak, authorities believe there will be a tight rubber situation for some time following the end of the war.

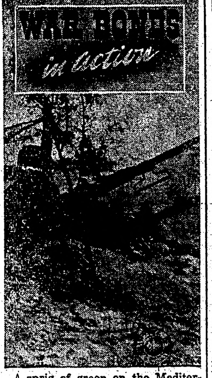
Chromium

Chromium is a steel-white metal, harder than iron. It is not found free in nature, but chiefly in chromite or chrome iron ore. It occurs in the United States, in Rhodesia and in India.



A sprig of green on the Mediterranean front; today it's camouflage for an American machine gun nest.

To win quicker our soldiers must have munitions and materiel, more and more. To provide them all of us must buy more and more War Bonds.

Stick-to-Your-Ribs Dish Is Appetizing

Frankfurter farina dumplings with sauerkraut, pictured above, is a good down-to-earth, stick-to-your-ribs main dish, says the Country Cooking editor of Capper's Farmer, a publication of national circulation.

This dish has lots of what it takes, including vitamins in the fortified margarine and enriched farina. When buying cereals, margarine and other foods which are available with vitamins added, be sure to check that those you get are the enriched ones, advises the Capper's Farmer expert.

Dumplings with Sauerkraut

1¼ cups self-rising cake flour	3 frankfurters
½ cup enriched farina	1 quart sauerkraut
2 tablespoons fortified margarine	1 cup water
¾ cup milk	1 large onion
	6 to 8 cloves

Sift and measure flour. Stir in farina. Cut in margarine and add milk. Mix lightly with a fork. Slice frankfurters in ½-inch slices. Add to dumplings, saving a few pieces to garnish top. Place sauerkraut in a large skillet with cover to fit. Add water and onion in which cloves have been stuck. Bring to a boil. Drop dumplings by tablespoonfuls on sauerkraut. Garnish with pieces of frankfurter. Cover closely. Steam without removing cover 20 to 25 minutes. Serves 6 to 8.

Good Tools

Men used to harvest wheat with a thing called a cradle. A cradle is a museum piece now, most able-bodied farmers never saw one. It is a scythe (blade like Father Time carries) with a wooden frame attached to catch the straws as they fall, so the workman can lay them straight for bundling. Even I can remember seeing farmers cradle patches too small for maneuvering a reaper.

Swinging a cradle is hard work. There is almost none of it done these days. But farmers didn't quit using the device for that reason. They still find plenty of hard work to do. The cradle was cast aside because it was inefficient, extravagant. It used to take the profit out of a wheat crop to pay enough men $1 a day to harvest it. But Mr. McCormick's reaper changed all that.

Mechanized Farming

Some people complained for a while about farm machinery putting men out of work but that's not what happened. No machine can do a man's work. Machines serve men, help them earn more by helping them do a bigger day's work. Today one farmer with good tools produces as much as 30 farmers did 100 years ago. In those days two-thirds of America's laborers worked on farms; now only 18%, and these can overproduce.

Machinery, American inventiveness, helps working people. There is no hocus-pocus about it. No straight-thinking person needs any high-brow economist to help him read these three sign-posts: (1) In the long run, people get paid for what they produce. (2) With good tools, which call for investment, they can produce more. (3) Investments in machinery raise the workers' wages.

Men vs. Machines

It's a fact that employers who work men on purely mechanical jobs are always faced with a three-cornered problem—men, money and machinery. They can hire a man's body for wages or buy a machine that will do the same work without getting tired. If interest and depreciation for the machine is less per year than the man's wages, the employer is likely to buy the machine.

Being replaced by a machine may sting some satisfied laborer's pride but he is soon benefited by learning to manage cold steel rather than compete with it. This is the very first lesson, the A-B-C of American prosperity built on intelligent workers, volume production, low in cost and good. Nowhere else on earth can the man who swings a sledge enjoy his own automobile and bathtub.

What Volume Does

Wages for men are figured by the hour; depreciation on machines by the year. The result is interesting. If two men work eight hours apiece and keep one machine running 16 hours a day, the owner thus [illegible] his cost. So the owner's margin on unit of sale is wider and he can lower his price without cutting the quality. Result: Wages up, prices down!

Workmen's wages go up with production but that same volume what lowers the cost of everything the workman needs to make home as comfortable (his life abundant) as that of his employer or anybody else. But volume production requires investment in good tools and training for men to use them. When investments are unsafe in America we may well start rehearsing with grandpa's cradle.

Given Farewell Party Sun. Eve.

A crowd that filled the Nazareth Lutheran Church to overflowing, gathered there on Sunday evening to give Rev. and Mrs. T. C. Hanson and sons Harold and Luther, a farewell party. A very fine program had been arranged for the occasion and the heads of the various departments of the church spoke on the achievements that had been accomplished since Rev. and Mrs. Hanson came here to Holt. Besides this there were several musical numbers and songs. Mr. A. E. Nelson, Supt. of the Holt School gave the main farewell address and presented the gift, consisting of a cash purse.

He also had full charge of the Thief River Falls Circuit in the Concordia College Appeal for funds. He is at present a member of the Finance Board of the Northern Minnesota District of the N. L. C. A.

Duane Swenson Was Shot

A tragic accident took place here on Wednesday evening when two young boys were out getting their cows. Duane Swenson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hilmer Swenson and, Virgil Erickson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eneas Erickson, had taken their shot guns and gone east of their farm homes to bring home the cattle when some birds flew over them and they got down in tall grass for a shot at them.

The two boys, about 14 years of age, were close together and, as the birds came in range they pulled up to shoot when the gun held by the Erickson boy discharged before he had it raised enough to miss his pal who was between him an the birds. The shots hit the Swenson boy in the head killing him instantly.

Sheriff O. C. Toftner and the County Coroner of Warren were called out to check on the accident.

The smypathy of the entire community goes out to the bereaved parents in the loss of their son and also to the parents of the boy who had the hard luck to shoot his boyhood pal.

Gigantic Refrigerator

The War Food administration is now storing 75,000 tons of food in a leased limestone mine near Atchison, Kan. Its 12,000,000 cubic feet of caverns are equivalent to nearly one tenth of all public refrigerated storage space in this country today. While the construction of a warehouse with this capacity would cost about $15,000,000, the chief expense of equipping this mine was $1,000,000 for machinery to reduce its temperature of 50 degrees F. to 30 degrees.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Sorting the contributions to the nation's scrap rubber drive has been a tremendous job. There are more than 75 types of rubber scrap, but most reclaimed rubber tonnage is derived from tires.

Rubber plantations covered over eight million acres at the outbreak of the war and had a potential production capacity of 1,600,000 long tons a year, according to rubber experts. Our synthetic rubber plants, some of which have already exceeded rated capacities, are expected to turn out over 1,000,000 long tons a year when operating at peak.

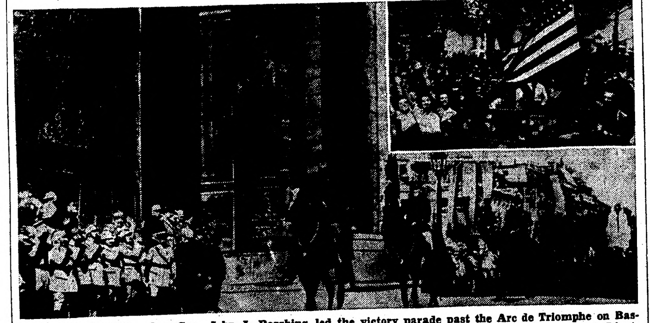
The Liberating Yanks Again Enter Paris



Just as in 1919, when Gen. John J. Pershing led the victory parade past the Arc de Triomphe on Bastille Day, a new generation of Yanks have entered the city of Paris. Behind General Pershing is 1st Lieut. W. J. Cunningham, bearing General's standard, followed by Maj. Gen. James G. Harbord, chief of staff, A. E. F., and on the grey horse, Gen. George C. Marshall, present chief of staff, who was then Colonel Marshall, aide to General Pershing. Insert shows the first U. S. flag brought into Paris by the liberating Yanks in World War II. The U. S. troopers carried the flag through the streets.

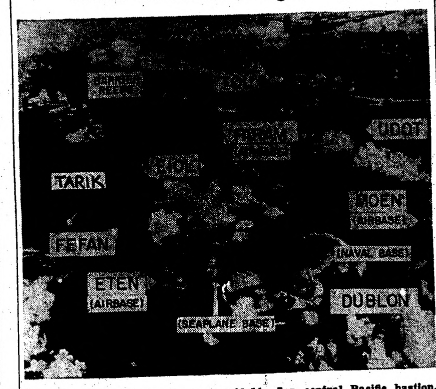
The arrows drive through the battlefields of World War I, where the fathers of present-day doughboys wrote a brilliant page of American military history. The column driving from Troyes (1) is believed to be headed for Luxembourg. The push that drove across the Marne from the Seine (2) might yet spring a surprise and flank the rocket coast (3) from which the Germans launch their robots. Except in case of complete collapse, the going is expected to become tougher as Allies enter German territory.

Truk Remains a Tough Target



Truk atoll still remains a formidable Jap central Pacific bastion. This photo was taken from one of the Seventh AAF Liberators attacking the air bases on Eten, Param and Moen, and the naval and seaplane bases on Dublon island. The 25 miles of bomb-run over Truk is one of the most hazardous of any in the Central Pacific.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

NEWSMEN AND FDR

Most important college of amateur physicians anywhere in the world, approximately 200 strong, now meets Tuesdays and Fridays at the White House. . . . These are newsmen assigned to cover the President. They assemble, make careful scrutiny, write lengthy analyses of the President's complexion, nervousness, every facial expression; try to interpret these in relation to his health. . . . Actually the President looks thinner, not too well tanned, but calm and fit, though he shows obvious sign of wearying at the scores of questions thrown at him during press tussles. . . . FDR still knows how to turn charm on and off, calls newsmen by their first names, teases them about "dope stories." . . . Since his return from the Alaska trip, Roosevelt is seeing more people than in the last six months, is growing more aware of domestic issues.

DUMBARTON OAKS

Secretary Hull's message to the opening Dumbarton Oaks peace parley had whole paragraphs paralleling Woodrow Wilson's statement of January 16, 1920, on the eve of the first League of Nations council meeting. . . . "It is our task here," Hull said, "to help lay the foundations upon which, after victory, peace, freedom and a growing prosperity may be built for generations to come." . . . Twenty-four years ago, Wilson said: "It will bring the League of Nations into being as a living force devoted to the task of assisting the peoples of all countries in their desire for peace, prosperity and happiness."

INDIAN TYPHOON

When Amb. William Phillips' famous letter advising Roosevelt that India was a U. S. problem leaked into print, the British government sent instructions to all British consuls in this country to inspire letters to editors, plus editorials in the local press. One man in New York alone wrote 76 letters to different newspapers. . . . Later, British consuls sent copies of editorials, etc., to the British Embassy, with accompanying notes, showing what a good job they had done. . . . In the Embassy, Jossleyn Hennessy, British public relations man for India, left off the accompanying notes, sent the editorials to Sir Olaf Caroe in New Delhi, so Sir Olaf could see what a good job Hennessy had been doing. Sir Olaf then sent them to London. . . . Sir Olaf also cabled London that he had been able to keep the Phillips letter out of India so far, but "under existing conditions" it was sure to be smuggled in, in which case it would be published by the Indian press and there was nothing he could do to stop it. . . . By "existing conditions," Caroe meant anti-British subversion on the part of Indian officials who smuggle news into India despite censorship. Once inside India, the British can't prevent publication in Indian newspapers.

WASHINGTON PERSONALITIES

Breath-taking Bob Gros, California lecturer, has the faculty of coming to the nation's capital every year and interviewing more big-wigs per hour than anyone else in the U.S.A. He has just finished one of his breathless trips and sizes up performers on the Washington merry-go-round as follows:

Wendell Willkie — "The thinkingest, guttiest guy on the merry-go-round; politically unastute."

British Ambassador Lord Halifax —"Worst dressed, but one of the most charming. His sleeves were patched with red thread, he had on almost threadbare gabardine pants."

Donald Nelson—"Determined that small industry shall have a chance to reconvert now, before the armistice."

Economic Stabilizer Fred Vinson —"The best balanced."

Secretary of the Navy Forrestal—"Quick, likable, expounds this philosophy: 'Administration consists 95 per cent of smoothing out human frictions. The secret of American success is driving, restless energy that makes you have ulcers.'"

Secretary of War Stimson—"The most arbitrary."

Small Business Administrator Maury Maverick—"The most two-fisted and dynamic."

Jim Farley—"The most realistic political analyst, the most bluntly and disarmingly frank."

In general, Gros found Washington taking the war in its stride; officialdom much more settled down than last year; less excitement, less hysteria, more efficiency.

Watch Your Kidneys!
Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

Elephants Are Not Afraid Of Mice; Can't See Them

How would you like to be an elephant and carry those big heavy teeth called tusks around all day?

You have heard a lot of things about an elephant that could scarcely be true. For instance, ever hear that elephants are afraid of mice? According to keepers of the zoo at Philadelphia, elephants pay no attention to mice. They probably don't even see them as their eyes are none too good.

But, you say, elephants pick up peanuts with their trunks. They do, but that's no sign they see them. You see, an elephant's trunk tells him what is going on better than eyes or ears.

WORLD MONOPOLY:
Peace Threat

Declaring that cartels — agreements among different international business firms for controlling world trade—formed the basis for Germany's military rejuvenation, Attorney General Francis Biddle told congress that such enterprises must be destroyed if the Allies are to control the enemies' capacity for future war.

As a result of cartel agreements, Biddle said, important companies were kept from South American markets; others could not manufacture such strategic products as synthetic rubber; development of the magnesium industry was retarded; an American company was prevented from selling a certain munition to the British, and restrictions were imposed on plastic production.

Even though certain giant German corporations were prevented from manufacturing military products after the war, Biddle said, they worked around these restrictions by organizing subsidiaries in other countries.

TELEVISION:
Here After War

Although television will come into general use after the war, it will be an addition to, and not a substitute for, radio, Chairman James L. Fly of the Federal Communications commission declared.

Said he: "You can't sit and look at a television screen for 18 hours a day. You can't turn on television and make the beds, or play bridge, or wash the dishes, as you can with oral broadcasting. Television . . . will be interspersed with other programs.

Fly also recounted the spectacular rise in revenue of standard stations and networks during the war years, time sales in 1943 amounting to 196 million dollars, with net income of 66 million dollars, as compared with time sales in 1942 of 164 million dollars and profits of 45 million dollars.

Young Wizard

An inventive genius at high school age, Stanley Hiller Jr., now 19, demonstrated a new type helicopter to the army, navy and national advisory committee for aeronautics at San Francisco, Calif., one day before his induction into service.

Using opposite rotating propellers, Hiller's helicopter is designed to overcome the conventional model's torque, or inclination to pull over with the turn of the single blade. Built to cruise at from 1½ to 90 miles an hour, with top speed of 100 miles an hour, the new helicopter's longest flight has been about 90 miles.

Son of a pioneer Pacific flier and steamship company president, Hiller founded a large miniature automobile manufacturing business, using a special die-casting process.

WORLD WHEAT:
Ample Surplus

With the four great wheat-producing nations of the U. S., Canada, Argentina and Australia expected to harvest 2,000,000,000 bushels in 1944, and with a carry-over of 1,100,000,000 bushels as of July 1, total supplies will approximate 3,000,000,000 bushels for the coming year.

Of the amount, the International Wheat council reported, the four nations will consume about 700,000,000 bushels and use another 700,000,000 for seed and other non-food uses, leaving a reserve of 1,600,000,000 bushels. Of this amount, about 600,000,000 bushels will be exported, the council said, and 200,000,000 will constitute a working stock, leaving a holdover supply of 800,000,000.

As the result of unusually favorable July weather for spring wheat in Minnesota and North Dakota, the U. S. department of agriculture estimated a total wheat crop of 1,132,000,000 bushels for this year, which would make the U. S. harvest about half of the big four's.

POLIO:
Incidence Increases

Abating in some sections, infantile paralysis has increased in others, with the result that the U. S. is experiencing its worst polio epidemic in 28 years, although the 6,258 cases reported up to August 19 were far below the 1916 high of 17,375.

Offsetting downward trends reported in North Carolina and Kentucky were increases in New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia and the District of Columbia. States reporting mild or normal incidences included California, Kansas, Utah, Florida, Arkansas, Arizona, Missouri, Wyoming and Oklahoma. New England and the mountain states reported few cases.

As a result of the high incidence in some areas, school openings have been delayed as much as a month. All children under 14 were banned from swimming pools and theaters in Kentucky, and those under 12 were placed under house quarantine in Milwaukee, Wis.

REDEEM BONDS

Holders of war bonds are cashing them in at a steadily increasing rate, treasury officials reveal. This is particularly true of the smaller denominations, series E, F and G. The percentage of cumulative redemptions compared with cumulative sales of these three series since May 1, 1941, has risen steadily from 9.27 per cent last February to 11.88 per cent in June. Sales since May 1, 1941, amounted to 36 billion, 252 million dollars on July 31, and redemptions above 3 billion.

That Old Chair Can Be Reclaimed With New Seat and Coat of Enamel

NEW cane seats are expensive because the work is done by hand. Endless time is required also for scraping off layers of paint to get down to the grain of the wood in doing over many pieces of furniture. The chair shown here did not seem to be worth this labor. It was reclaimed with a seat from a scrap of plywood, blue paint and seat cover of blue and white ticking edged with white material raveled to make a fringe.

The chipped white enamel that was on the chair was rubbed with coarse and then with fine sandpaper until smooth. Th new seat came next; then flat paint which was allowed to dry 24 hours before applying enamel.

NOTE—This chair remodeling idea is from BOOK 10 which also contains directions for making an adorable padded boudoir chair from an old kitchen chair; a high-back chair from an old rocker and an attractive upholstered chair from odds and ends of wood, a little padding and some chintz. Checks of Steel Canceled With Sub-Machine Gun

A Cleveland company presented the three winners of a contest held in 1932 with their prize money in a form that was symbolic of the firm's welding business — steel checks on which steel letters and figures were welded. Although two feet long, a foot wide and three-sixteenths of an inch thick, the checks were honored and then canceled with a sub-machine gun, the word "Paid" being spelled out with bullet holes.

Firestone
GROUND GRIP TIRES
Give EXTRA TRACTION because THEY CLEAN BETTER!

HAVE you been hearing or reading claims about tractor tire cleaning lately? As a farmer, you are entitled to know the facts. And here they are:

Remember that the Firestone Ground Grip Tread is patented. Its extra-long, triple-braced traction bars do not have "broken center" traction leaks, no trash-catching stubs or buttons. The wide spaces between the bars clean easily, even in soft soil, because there are no corners or pockets for mud to stick or hide. No wonder Firestone Ground Grips clean so much better in ALL soil conditions!

And don't forget that Firestone Ground Grip Tires give you up to 215 extra inches of traction bar length per tractor. That means extra pulling power — and the more pulling power you get, the more time and money you save!

From these facts, it's easy to see why more farm tractors are equipped with Firestone Ground Grip Tires than with any other make. Farmers naturally want the tires that pull better longer — the tires made by Firestone, the pioneer and pacemaker.

Listen to the Voice of Firestone every Monday evening, over N.B.C.

The first railroad locomotive to reach Chicago -- which was destined to become the world's greatest railroad center -- arrived by sailing vessel on October 10, 1848. Named the "Pioneer" it made its first run out of Chicago on November 20.

American railroads in the first six months of 1942 handled 99 per cent more freight than in the same period of 1939 -- and 57 per cent more than in the same period of 1918, the peak world war year.

One farmer's labor-shortage problem was solved by eleven railroad shopmen. After finishing their railroad work on the night shift, they shocked his 35 acres of oats by noon -- and refused payment.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Tests have shown that a single skid may take 100 miles off the life of a tire. The loss will be greater with tires made of synthetic rubber.

A B. F. Goodrich official believes that before natural rubber is again available in quantity the industry will so improve the quality of synthetic rubber that it will be equal to the former for many uses.

It's important to put your spare in service when making periodic tire switches. In that way the wear is distributed over five tires instead of four.

When Your Back Hurts—
And Your Strength and Energy Is Below Par

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won countrywide approval than on something less favorably known. Doan's have been tried and tested many years. Are at all drug stores. Get Doan's today.

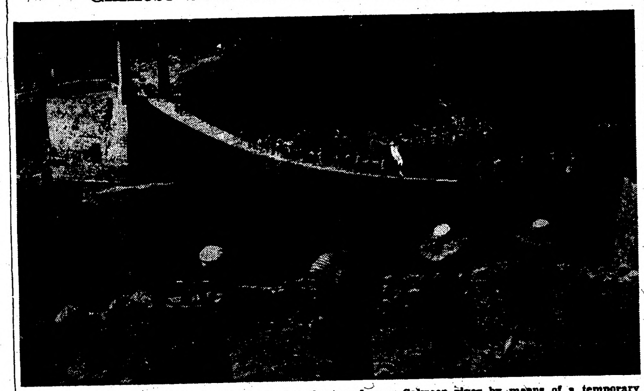
German Road Blocks Fail to Halt Allies

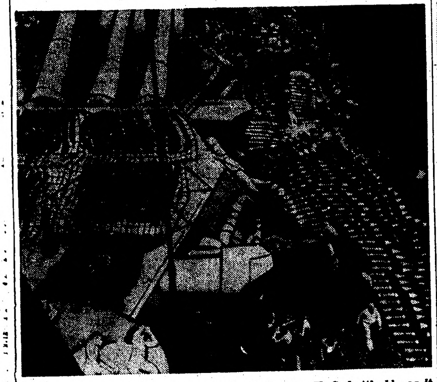
The Germans spend considerable time and supplies in erecting blockades which prevent the rapid advance of the Allied armies. The blockades had little effect as noted by rapid progress being made in France. Left, is a German road block along the water front in St. Raphael, southern France. Another type of block, shown at right, was used in Paris.

Chinese Soldiers Cross Treacherous River



Chinese soldiers march to the front crossing the treacherous Salween river by means of a temporary suspension bridge. The original bridge was blown up by the Chinese as a measure against the Japanese advance. All supplies for the Chinese forces in this district have to be carried by Chinese on their backs or dropped by planes. Increased transport planes have made it possible to begin to furnish the fighting Chinese in the Salween river section with much needed weapons, food and other supplies.

Ship Loaded With Jap Death



Rows of huge shells wind along the decks of a U. S. battleship as it loads up somewhere in the Pacific preparatory to carrying out its assignment of blasting Jap holdings. The inferno loosed by its guns cleared a path for the landing forces, which were then able to send a landing party ashore to capture the base.

Marine Commanders

Lieut. Gen. Holland M. Smith, commanding general of the Pacific fleet marine force (left) and Lieut. Gen. Alexander A. Vandergrift, commandant of U. S. marine corps, inspect a captured Japanese airfield on the Orote peninsula, Guam.

Marine Vets Return Home

Home for the first time in 30 months, some 300 marines of the Second division, heroes of fighting the Japs on Guadalcanal, Saipan, Tarawa and Tinian, shouted with joy as their transport docked in San Francisco. Sixty-five of the returning heroes were casualties, sick or recovering from battle wounds. They display captured Jap flags.

PACIFIC:
Tougher Going

With U. S. forces edging closer to the Philippines and Japan itself through intensive operations against the Bonins lying 600 miles from Tokyo, Navy Secretary James Forrestal warned the country that the going would become increasingly tougher as the enemy concentrated his forces for a fight on a shorter front.

In speaking of the enemy's air force, Forrestal said: "The Japs have obviously been saving their planes for the engagement to come. Except for the battle of the eastern Philippines, they have not risked a big aerial battle for months."

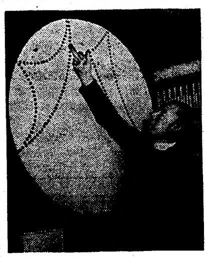
In addition to concentrating numbers, the Japs have also been improving the quality of their planes, Forrestal revealed. Said he: "Jap planes of every type . . . now have greater fire power, armament, speed, range and load capacity. United States navy planes have been improved, too, but we don't now have as big technical advantages . . . as a year ago."

CANNED FOODS:
Remove Rationing

Because War Food Administrator Marvin Jones advised that available and prospective supplies justified the step, the government removed from rationing all canned and processed jams, jellies, fruit butters, asparagus, lima beans, corn, peas, pumpkins, squash, mixed vegetables, baked beans, tomato sauce and puree and all varieties of soups and baby foods.

At the same time, a WFA spokesman declared that heavy runs of cattle may permit the removal of commercial grade beefsteaks and roasts from rationing in October or November. At present, sizable marketings of grass-fed stock have resulted in ample point-free supplies of utility grade meats. Lighter runs of prime cattle, on the other hand, will make continued rationing of top cuts necessary.

Charts Quake



Using a cross-sectional model of the globe, Rev. Joseph Lynch, director of the observatory of Fordham university, charts course of recent earthquake which shook northeast corner of U. S. and extended as far southwest as Wisconsin. According to Reverend Lynch, disturbance centered near eastern end of Lake Ontario.

CATTLE:
War Prices

As the war entered its sixth year this month, price levels of meat animals were from 45 to 105 per cent higher than they were in September, 1939.

On the Chicago market, cattle that brought $12 per hundredweight six years ago sold at $18.35. Steers that averaged $10.30 then drew $15.85.

The rise was equally marked in hogs, with head under 240 pounds, which brought $8 per hundredweight six years ago, selling for the $14.75 ceiling. As a whole, the average of $7 of 1939 was far below the 1944 figure of $14.35.

Against the top of $10 in 1939, lambs drew $14.65 per hundredweight, with the $9.50 average of six years ago below this month's mark of $14.25.

FURLOUGHS:
Shipping Factor

As a demand was made in congress for an investigation of the war department's handling of furloughs, especially in the Pacific, a letter from Gen. Douglas MacArthur stated that the scarcity of shipping hindered a more liberalized policy.

Citing the shipping shortage, General MacArthur said: "The return to the United States without replacement of all men who have served a specified length of time would, of course, halt our offensive against Japan and might indefinitely prolong the war."

While the demand was made for the investigation, Rep. Carl Hinshaw (Calif.) urged that soldiers stationed in Alaska be rotated by units to other posts.

SURPLUS GOODS
Release Vehicles

Excess stocks of war materials are being declared surplus at the rate of 100 million dollars worth a month. Goods "declared surplus" can be sold off as rapidly as possible. Eighty-five per cent of the materials are from the war department at present, and consist of airplanes, motor vehicles, medical supplies and radio equipment. So far, goods sold have brought 83.8 per cent of original cost.

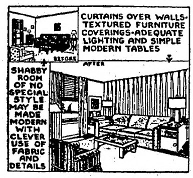
The Use of Fabric and Thread in Decorating Homes of Tomorrow

By Ruth Wyeth Spears



CURTAINS OVER WALLS-TEXTURED FURNITURE COVERINGS-ADEQUATE LIGHTING AND SIMPLE MODERN TABLES
SHABBY ROOM OF NO SPECIAL STYLE MAY BE MADE MODERN WITH CLEVER USE OF FABRIC AND DETAILS

IF YOU are dreaming about redecorating after the war — and who is not—put this in your note book. There will be a more lavish use of fabric in home decoration than ever before. There will be many new types of textiles and many new weaves. Fabrics will be designed to wear longer and to stay clean longer. A feeling of spaciousness will be obtained by blotting out some walls with curtains. Irregular or badly proportioned spaces will be brought into harmony by covering parts of them; and small windows will be made to seem high and wide by covering the wall around them.

The homemaker who can sew a straight seam will save many a dollar for she may have curtains of any length, width, or fullness merely by stitching straight widths together. And here is a decorators' tip for her—allow a hundred and fifty per cent fullness if French pleats are to be used at the tops of curtains; and set the machine for a long stitch for speed. Clip selvages every few inches to avoid puckered seams and hems.

NOTE—You do not have to wait for your home of tomorrow to have the attractive coffee table shown in this sketch. It is easy to make from straight cuts of lumber. A map, a favorite print or a piece of hand work may be placed under the glass top to give a decorative effect. Ask for pattern No. 254 and enclose 15 cents. Address:

Allied Invasion of Yugoslavia Poses Another Threat to Reich; Plan for Small Standing Army

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Entering Chambois, France, the Allies found abandoned, wrecked and burned German equipment, common sights along the enemy's battered retreat route to the Reich.

EUROPE:
New Front

For the little man with the clipped mustache, there seemed to be no end of trouble.

Although his broken armies in the west were reorganizing for a stiffer stand against the U. S. and British onslaught, and although his battered armies in the east were slowing the Russians from the Black sea to the Carpathians, the Allies posed still another threat to his narrowing defensive circle by an invasion of Yugoslavia.

As Russian troops tore across Romania onto the eastern Yugoslav border near the capital of Belgrade, U. S. and British forces landed on the western coast for a drive inland. As the two Allied armies worked forward for a junction, Marshal Josip Tito's Partisans were active in harassing German troops and sabotaging communication lines.

The twin offensive in Yugoslavia doubly imperilled the harried legions of Adolf Hitler.

First, the U. S., British and Russian drives promised to link the Allied armies for a concerted attack against southern Austria and Hungary, and, also to outflank the Nazis manning the Gothic line in Italy to the west; and, second, an Allied junction would cut off an estimated 260,000 enemy troops remaining in lower Yugoslavia, Greece and the Aegean islands.

Stiffen at Border

Bleated the German radio to fanatical Nazi rearguards resisting the U. S. and British drives to the Reich's western frontier:

"Every day gained now amounts to a reinforcement of our national strength for the defense of the Reich itself. . . ."

Partly because of such resistance, partly because the fast-moving Allied armies had outrun their lengthening supply lines, the U. S. and British thrusts in the Lowlands and France temporarily lost their whirling momentum.

Fighting was particularly heavy in northeastern Belgium before the fortress city of Liege and in the rugged Ardennes forest, and directly to the east of Paris, where American troops drew up along the Moselle river for an assault on Nazi defenses guarding the rich industrial Saar basin.

Mounted thickly in the precipitous, wooded heights east of the Moselle, the German artillery maintained a steady drumfire against doughty U. S. troops seeking to establish firm bridgeheads across the river.

Farther to the south, Lieut. Gen. Alexander Patch's Seventh army, driving up from the Mediterranean for a juncture with Lieut. Gen. George Patton's Third army along the Moselle, drove on the Belfort gap, the low-lying plane between the Vosges mountains of France and Swiss border leading into Germany.

Costly Fighting

Reflecting the strong pressure the Russians were exerting to the northeast of Warsaw, the Germans acknowledged their withdrawal across the Narew river, ". . . to avoid the danger of a Russian breakthrough on the southern border of East Prussia."

In withdrawing across the Narew, the Nazis continued their policy of economizing their forces by giving ground when the superior weight of their opponent promised to grind down their manpower.

Because of the proximity of the Russians to German soil, however, the Nazis no longer were free to make wholesale withdrawals, but now faced bloody front-line fighting.

MISCELLANY

OPA VIOLATIONS: In the first half of this year, formal enforcement of Office of Price administration regulations was necessary in 42,000 cases, involving violations of price ceilings, rationing quotas, and rent levels. Action included revocation of 20,634 consumer gasoline rations, 4,265 suits for injunctions, 1,158 triple damage suits, and 2,191 criminal prosecutions.

CIVILIAN GOODS:
Postwar Formula

Manufacture of civilian goods will begin in earnest with the fall of Germany, with war output due to drop about 40 per cent, and 4,000,000 workers freed for other jobs, the War Production board revealed.

At the present time, a limited reconversion program has been instituted, with emphasis placed upon preparation for the eventual resumption of civilian production. Under current regulations, manufacturers are permitted to develop working postwar models and order machinery for civilian output.

Because of the U. S.'s record-breaking production of 79,350,000 tons, world steel output rose to 146,500,000 tons in 1943. While production increased here, it dropped from 28,000,000 to 20,000,000 tons in Germany and from 18,000,000 to 12,000,000 tons in Russia.

In allowing those manufacturers not engaged in war work to start turning out civilian lines after the Nazis' downfall, the WPB will maintain priorities for military production alone and will relax most of its controls over materials. Furthermore, it will provide assistance for manufacturers in switching over to civilian work.

DEMOBILIZATION:
Discharge Plans

Total length of service, time served overseas, combat record and dependency will govern the demobilization of soldiers following the defeat of Germany, the army announced.

Under the army's plans for releasing surplus men, each of the first four mentioned factors will be worth a certain number of points, with release going to doughboys with the highest ratings. However, it was pointed out, men with qualifications needed for the war in the Pacific will be transferred to the Far East regardless of their status.

Because the war in the Pacific will receive first call on shipping, it may take many months for men eligible for demobilization to return to this country, the army said. Since men in camps here are expected to have the lowest priority ratings, they will constitute the principal pool for replacements.

Since the U. S.'s full seapower will be needed in the all-out war against Japan, there will be no demobilization of the navy when Germany falls.

Future Army

Gen. Marshall

Declaring that . . . "a large standing army has no place among the institutions of a modern democratic state," Gen. George C. Marshall told officers planning the postwar military organization to work on a small, efficient force with a reserve of well-trained citizens.

In issuing his directive, General Marshall assumed that congress would pass legislation requiring every able-bodied American youth to undergo training before placement in the reserves.

By advocating a small, efficient force with a large pool of reservists, General Marshall said that there was more opportunity for advancement in such an organization than there was in a big standing army, where the size made it necessary to maintain a large, professional officers' cast at all times.

HELP WANTED

A shortage of 200,000 workers exists in the principal industrial regions of the country, and it can be remedied only by shifting men and women from areas where there is less stringency, the War Manpower commission declares.

Heavy war industries in New England, North Atlantic, Middle West and the Pacific Coast are being hampered by lack of skilled help. Only in the South and Southwest is there an approximately adequate labor supply.

Household Hints

To clean berry stains from the teeth, bite into a cut lemon. (Hope your face straightens out.)

If new tin pans are greased and put into the warm oven before using, they will not rust.

Sprinkle talcum powder on a ribbon knot that you wish to loosen.

Clean stained bronze ornaments with hot vinegar or hot buttermilk rubbed on with a soft brush or cloth. Rinse in warm water and wash in hot water and soapsuds. Wipe dry with soft cloth.

You can boil a cracked egg in the following way: Put a tablespoonful of salt into the water for boiling. Rub common salt thickly on the crack and put at once into the water, which should be boiling fast. You will find that the white will not bubble out and be wasted.

If you have an old windshield wiper, it may be used when washing the windows of your home.

When setting posts, dig the hole a foot deeper and fill the bottom with rocks. This gives ground water a chance to drain away from the post, thereby helping to preserve it.

Boost The 4-H Club Here

Very few people in our community know that we have a 4-H Club. Nevertheless we have, and a very fine group of youngsters they are too. We now have 28 enrolled now and we would like to have some older members came to help the club.

Meetings are held at the Holt School every last Tuesday in each month. Anyone wishing to join may contact Mr. A. E. Nelson or Mrs. Johnnie Nelson, local club leaders. Those who showed at Pennington County Fair and their project are as follows: LaVern Holmos, clothing. Gloria Johnson, garden. Ardelle Larson, garden, homemaking, clothing, style revue. Dorothy Larson, simple foods, homemaking. Shirley Larson, simple foods. Clifford Reierson, pig. Vernon Reierson, pig. Dorothy Sagstuen, clothing, style revue. Delores Sandberg, clothing. Marian Sorum, clothing. Ardell Larson's clothing exhibit was sent to the state fair.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Burtness and son Romal arrived here Saturday from Portland, Oregon where they have spent the past year. They took over their farming interests here.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Peterson and sons who have taken care of A. C. Burtness, have now rented the Haugen farm northwest of Holt and moved there this week.

Luther League Convention

The speaker chosen for the meetings is the Rev. Theodore Heimark of Red Wing who will speak on Saturday evening at a banquet for the Leaguers on the theme, "Jesus Still Lead On." Rev. Heimark will deliver the sermon on Sunday morning at 10:30 and has chosen to speak on, "Jesus Still Lead." He will give an address at the Choral union concert on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock on the topic, "Jesus Still".

Luther Leaguers from all over the circuit will be represented with music and topics related to Christian living.

Officers of the Circuit whose terms expire are: Pres., Rev. E. E. Tollefson; Vice-Pres., Supt. L. E. Wermager; Sec'y., Beatrice Larson; Treas., Evelyn Larson; Program chairman, Rev. G. S. Thompson and Pocket Testament Sec'y., Mrs. Ruth Holmstrom.

THE AVERAGE AMERICAN FAMILY

includes 3½ persons uses ⅗ of a bathtub owns ⅔ of a house
1929
1944
AND gets about twice as much electricity for its money as it did 15 years ago!

STATISTICS are tricky things to toss around.

Obviously, 3/5 of a bathtub wouldn't hold water very well! That figure means merely that some 3 out of 5 American homes have bathtubs.

Obviously, also, the electric figure applies only to homes that have electric service. But as a nation-wide average of all those homes, it is a fact —and perhaps surprising to many people.

Most families own more electric appliances now than they did in 1929. Over the years, as they used more electricity, they earned lower rates—and the rates, too, were steadily reduced.

So—though your bill today may be as much as it was in 1929—or even more—you're probably getting twice as much for what you pay. And remember that the price of electricity has stayed down while most other prices are going up.

That makes it just about the biggest bargain in your wartime budget!

For this you can credit the electric companies, manned and managed by business people, under public regulation. Their hard work has made electric service dependable and cheap.

School Has Large Enrollment

The total enrollment of the Holt school on the opening day was 103, forty-five boys and fifty eight girls, as compared with an enrollment of 90 pupils a year ago. Several grammar grades and high school pupils are absent on account of potato picking. so the enrollment will be increased when they return.

The enrollment by grades is as follows: First grade, 9; Second, 10; Third, 4; Fourth, 15; Fifth, 18; Sixth, 7; Seventh, 9; Eighth, 12; Ninth, 15; Tenth, 3; and the Eleventh, 6. The high school enrollment is 24, and this will be increased to 30 when the potato pickers return.

Eighty seven pupils are being brought to school in the busses. Edgar Horien transports forty-two pupils as his first load and 21 as his second load. Clarence Ness is transporting 13 pupils and Lawrence Reierson 11.

On account of the additional enrollment it has been found necessary to add twelve desks to the intermediate grade room, to order additional text books in most subjects and to permit the high school students to eat their noon lunch in the assembly room.

On Wednesday, the first "War Stamp day" the intermediate grades brought in $4.55; the primary grades, $1.20 and the grammar grade pupils 70 cents for the purchase of stamps. The intermediate grades led the rest of the school last year and are determined to keep up their fine record.

On Tuesday of last week Supt. Nelson attended a meeting in Thief River Falls at which several representatives of the State Department of Education presented matters of interest to the school executives.

High school was not in session on Monday this week as all the high school instructors attended a meeting in Thief River Falls that day. Miss Christenson attended a conference of librarians and Mrs. Dopp and Mr. Nelson met with other instructors of physical education teaching in this part of the state.

—WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS—

Allied Columns Thrust Toward Industrial Belt in Rhineland; U. S. Carries War to Philippines

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Belgian pedestrians stand by as U. S. medical corps men dress wounds of German soldiers caught in withering machine gun fire.

EUROPE:

Sight Rhineland

Quickly catching their breath after their drive across France and Belgium, the valiant U. S. First and Third armies renewed their offensive against a reorganized enemy in a supreme effort to knock the Germans out of the war this year.

While the Nazis regrouped behind their vaunted Siegfried line, or west wall, Lieut. Gen. Courtney Hodges' First army and Lieut. Gen. George Patton's Third rolled forward again, with the former's strong armored forces thrusting against the fortress city of Aachen, gateway to the rich industrial Rhine valley to the northeast, with its great manufacturing centers of Cologne, Dusseldorf, Duisberg and Essen.

As General Hodges' troops gathered strength for their smash into the Rhineland, General Patton's men worked their way beyond the bitterly defended Moselle river against the rich Saar coal and manufacturing country, which curves off sharply to the east with the winding German border.

To the south of General Patton's Third army, Lieut. Gen. Alexander Patch's Seventh drew up its ranks before the historic Belfort Gap, great open plain lying between the Vosges mountains and the Swiss border and leading into southern Germany. As the Seventh army with its complement of French troops smashed at the enemy here, it encountered stiffening resistance and heavy artillery fire from the hills beyond.

As the U. S. First, Third and Seventh armies smashed against Germany's western frontier in a quick move to end the war, British troops worked their way slowly against bitter opposition through southeastern Holland, where the enemy contested their advance in strength in an effort to protect the far northern flank of their Siegfried line, reportedly its weakest link.

Do or Die

As the reinforced U. S. Fifth and British Eighth armies threw their full strength at Germany's Gothic line in northern Italy, guarding the rich agricultural and industrial valley of the Po, Nazi Field Marshal Albert Kesselring went all out in an effort to hold his ground.

With his 19 divisions of roughly 250,000 men outnumbered by the Allied forces, Kesselring was placing his chief reliance on the mountainous terrain, and other improvised obstacles dotting the rugged countryside, such as tank traps and buried tank gun nests, etc.

U. S. officers looked to "tough fighting" ahead.

Utilize Manpower

With manpower always Russia's strategic military trump, the Reds were making full use of it on the eastern front, where four major actions were in progress against the Germans' shortened, but strained, defense lines.

In the north, the Reds were grinding their way forward against the enemy's stiff East Prussian lines, and attacking heavily around Warsaw with armored columns that were drawing a steady stream of Germans into the fight.

To the south, strong Russian forces held up about 100 miles from Germany proper, switched their attack to the mountain passes leading into Czechoslovakia, while deeper in the Balkans, the Reds were pressing on Hungary's Transylvanian wheat fields.

MISCELLANY

EMPLOYMENT: Of the 53,170,000 persons employed in the U. S., 18,440,000 are women, the bureau of census reported. Although 3,000,000 women were added to payrolls during the 12-month period ending in August, 1943, there was no appreciable increase in the following year. As a whole, the civilian labor force decreased 1,000,000 from July to August, 1944.

CROPS:

Huge Harvest

With August rains checking the serious deterioration of the crop in the drought area east of the Mississippi, the U. S. department of agriculture predicted a bumper corn harvest of 3,101,319,000 bushels for 1944, second largest on record.

With the wheat crop set at an all-time high of 1,115,402,000 bushels, oats production at 1,190,540,000, barley at 290,036,000, soybeans at 179,024,000 and sorghums at 149,962,000, a total grain harvest of over 6,000,000,000 bushels was predicted.

Because of the bumper crops and reduced feeding, the live stock and poultry industry should find sufficient grain available throughout the coming months, the USDA declared.

Markets Dip

With the USDA reporting excellent crop prospects, prices on leading grain markets dipped, with only wheat bearing up under purchases of the Commodity Credit corporation and information that the agency was interested in deferred shipments.

PACIFIC:

Homecoming

Adm. Nimitz

Two and one-half years after the Japanese over-ran the Philippines, U. S. naval forces under Admiral Chester Nimitz's command have come back to subject enemy installations on the islands to withering aerial and artillery fire.

At the same time, marine and army assault forces under Admiral Nimitz's command swept ashore on the Palau islands, 600 miles east of the Philippines, while units under Gen. Douglas MacArthur's leadership invaded the Moluccas, 300 miles south of the Philippines, thus establishing a menacing steel ring around the islands.

Presaging major operations against the Philippines guarding the enemy's vital supply lines from the Indies to the west, U. S. naval aircraft swept over the southern string of islands, lashing at enemy planes which had been carefully husbanded to resist U. S. advances. Big battleships, riding with smaller cruisers and destroyers, raked enemy shipping, using water routes to supply the disconnected jumble of islands.

PETROLEUM:

Draw on Stocks

With military requirements approximating 800,000 barrels daily out of total production of 2,000,000, there is little possibility of an easing in gas rationing until after the end of the European war, the Office of War Information declared.

The tightness in the gasoline situation exists even though the output of crude oil for petroleum production has averaged an all-time high of 4,470,000 barrels daily, natural gas output has approximated 269,000 barrels daily, and imports are above the 1941 level.

With demand outrunning supply, the industry has been compelled to dip into reserve stocks at a rate of 2,500,000 barrels of crude monthly, OWI said, bringing holdings to the lowest level since 1922.

Hidden Resources

Although present U. S. oil reserves are estimated at 20 billion barrels, our known oil in the ground actually is nearer 100 billion barrels, much of which could be recovered by some new method or if higher prices were established, this is the opinion of experts.

No nation has been completely explored for all of its oil possibilities, and in countries of greater area, only a small fraction of existing resources have been tapped, the experts added.

Lizard Gunman of Arizona Shoots a Stream of Blood

There exists a lizard "gunman" that shoots with a jet of blood.

This remarkable marksman, the Arizona spiny lizard, when on the defensive, resorts to shooting, projecting with startling suddenness and great force a thin stream of blood from the corner of each eye. Though the reptile's attack is of a comparatively harmless nature, it is, nevertheless, most disarming and the aggressor very seldom stops to make further inquiry.

After this performance the lizard turns on its back and "shams dead," remaining motionless until it has recuperated from its efforts.

"All officers and men will advance to kill or be killed"

THIS IS NO DREAMED-UP HEADLINE—no "tone poem" conceived on an inspired typewriter. It's the way the army explains the command "Fix bayonets—charge!". Only the Infantry has it put to them in these words. As one doughboy said:

"I'll remember those eleven words the rest of my life."

Remember? How can he forget them? They describe the climax of the Infantryman's assault—they describe the most cold-blooded action on a battlefield. Yet Infantry officers and men have advanced, countless times, to kill or be killed . . . at Saratoga . . . at New Orleans . . . the Argonne . . . New Guinea . . . Salerno. There's no rescinding of this order—no retreating—no nothing but plain killing.

Right now, the men of the Infantry are closing in for the final kill. They're advancing every day—advancing to the order of "kill or be killed." Remember this the next time you see a doughboy on furlough. Remember this the next time you almost forget to write that letter. Remember it till your dying day. You can't pay the doughboy back—but at least you can be forever mindful of his role in this fight for freedom.

"Keep your eye on the Infantry—THE DOUGHBOY DOES IT!"

CONGRESSMEN TO LONDON

Without any publicity, the British government has quietly moved to improve British good will by arranging air transportation for six congressmen to London. They will inspect the damage done by the robot blitz and take side trips into France.

The British embassy did not actually invite the congressmen to come to England, but made a point of letting three Republicans and three Democrats know that seats on British planes leaving New York for London were available.

First pair to go were Representatives James Richards, South Carolina Democrat, and Karl Mundt, South Dakota Republican. They were followed by Democratic Congressman Brooks Hays of Arkansas and Republican Walter Judd of Minnesota. The latter trip may be significant since it occurred only a few days after these two had introduced their resolution calling for bi-partisan consideration of the peace terms by this country.

The last pair includes Republican Walt Horan of Washington and Democrat Chet Holifield of California. Holifield, incidentally, was planning a quick trip overseas in order to check on some lend-lease matters for the house Democratic leadership. Each pair consists of one Republican and one Democrat, with the British determined to do all they can to prevent inter-party strife in the U.S.A. from interfering with the peace conference.

The congressmen were told by the British: "We have already been host to several American scientists and educators for brief trips across, and we don't like to discriminate against congressmen."

ALLIED SKI TROOPS

For the first time in the war, Canadian and American ski troops are due to see the sort of action they were trained for.

The first special service force, trained in mountain warfare at Helena, Mont., and in Alaska and the Aleutians, is now in southern France with the forces of General Patch. A thrust across the Maritime Alps into northern Italy will give them their first actual skiing action. This special service force includes both Canadians and Americans, and will probably come up against German rear-guard units as the Allied armies chase the Nazis toward the Brenner pass.

ELECTION IN BRITAIN

British government leaders aren't saying anything about it, but Roosevelt has been tipped off by Churchill that immediately after the fall of Germany a general election will be held in England.

In fact, Churchill's Conservative party leaders have already sent instructions down to their borough leaders to begin organizing for a national election.

Churchill's party strategists have already had conferences with leaders of the Labor party and have sought their support for a continuation of a future coalition government. The Labor leaders of the Churchill cabinet, however, have said no. They believe that after the war, Labor should go on its own.

Conservative leaders, however, figure that the rank and file of the Labor party will not follow their leaders but, instead, will follow Churchill.

Churchill's move in calling the general election immediately after the armistice is considered very shrewd timing. Today he is popular in England. A few months from now he may not be. The British prime minister will stand on his war record, and his cooperation with Roosevelt will not be played down as one reason why he should be returned to power. It is expected that the Conservative party will win without too much difficulty.

NAZIS IN SPAIN

Once again Nazi troops are making for Spanish soil. Members of the army which got its first taste of war seven years ago by putting Franco in Madrid, today are stealing through the French countryside below Bordeaux to be interned in Spain rather than be captured by the Fighting French. This was why the Spanish ambassador in Washington last week issued his statement barring Nazi exiles.

However, a real test of U. S.-Spanish policy is in the making. Some Nazi military men are already in Spain, plus French collaborationists who will later be charged with war crimes against France. It will be up to U. S. Ambassador Carlton Hayes, apologist for the Franco government, to deal with them.

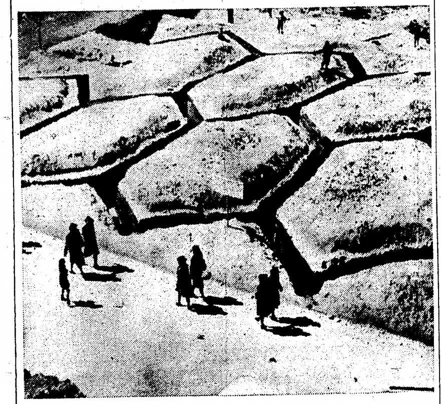
Yanks Enter Germany as Siegfried Fort Falls

Two spearheads of the U. S. First army, under Lieut. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges, enter Germany south of Aachen and beyond Trier, as Siegfried fort falls to the allies. Photo shows the spearhead of tanks stretching out into the horizon across Flanders field as they enter German territory. In the first push they reached the outskirts of Aachen, meeting with opposition within the Siegfried line.

France Wrecked as German Troops Retreat

When the American Seventh army moved into Marseille, France, they found ships scuttled in the harbor as well as the city looted and buildings, bridges and rail terminals destroyed. In Paris the women and children had ripped up the paving blocks from the streets to build barricades behind which they fought for liberation of their capital before Allied forces entered the city to help them.

Italian Waffle-Like Trenches



The slit trenches that cut up an area "some place in Italy" in a waffle-like pattern are being used by the Air WACs stationed near the headquarters of the 12th air force in Italy. This new type of trench is said to offer considerable more protection, and is harder to hit from air.

Liberators Who Came Home

Among the British forces that liberated Brussels, capital of Belgium, was a brigade of Belgians, members of which are being given an enthusiastic welcome home here by the populace of Brussels as they drove into the city. They had escaped to England, and there had been organized and trained under their own colors.

First in Germany

Making Work

Proper steps taken soon enough will assure plenty of jobs, after the war, in peaceful pursuits for men busy today with war work and for those in uniform as fast as they are discharged from the armed forces. To say these men will deserve good jobs is saying far too little. Having saved this country from foreign foes, they will deserve to possess and enjoy their own prosperous land.

It is for the good of the country and every family in it that plenty of well-paid employment be provided after the war. It is not a mere matter of justice to the deserving; not at all a matter of pity for the unfortunate. It is patriotism; it is self-preservation. If America is to remain the land of liberty and opportunity, our first postwar step must be toward firm footing: Work for willing workers.

Industry Must Lead

The first move in post-war prosperity therefore is industry's move, putting some 7 to 10 million men to work at gainful employment. It is no small matter. The average investment necessary to make a job in American industry is $6,000 which means that industry must put up 40 to 60 billion dollars for plant equipment and working capital to make all these jobs good, that is, make them pay wages and interest on investment.

Soon after V-Day some 16 million men will start making their personal adjustments from war to a peacetime manner of life. About six million of them will get out of industry after the war; young people returning to school, married women resuming their home-making, etc. But some now in war-industries will want to keep working.

Others From Battle

The United States likely will keep a large standing Army and a more powerful Navy than ever before. Probably anybody who wants to remain in the armed forces will have a chance to stay, but millions of fighting men will want civilian jobs right after the war. These two groups combined make 7 to 10 million workers and there is not much disagreement among statisticians about the figure.

Putting all these men to work, of course, is only one side of industry's big post-war responsibility. The other half of it is providing people the things they want and need at prices they can afford to pay. Both undertakings require some high-powered planning. Popular retail prices have to start with low production costs which depend on volume, but overproduction is a calamity in any plant, a big calamity in any industry.

Cooperation Needed

This sketchy outline should show what a colossal job of master precision American industry must accomplish, or else. It is stupendous, but it is possible. It will require accurate market forecasting, balanced production, economical operation and good selling. All must plan well.

If Private Enterprise does its share for national prosperity by investing 40 to 60 billion dollars to create 7 to 10 million jobs, industry will be obliged to have security of investment and hope of profit—a green light and a clear road. Labor and government both have a necessary part to play in post-war prosperity, and the next two chapters of this column will deal with them, one at a time. "Labor's Lever" next week.

New Plastic Paints Make Decorating Easy

Amateur with brush or applicator can do professional job.

THE new war-born plastic wall finishes make redecorating these days a far cry from old-style painting, when rooms were unusable for days while 2 or 3 coats of slow-drying paint were applied, Dora May Talcott writes in the Rural Home section of Capper's Farmer, a magazine read by 1,250,000 farm families.

With these new paints that can be applied by an amateur and that dry in an hour, rooms can be lived in the same day. There's no paint odor.

"You can paint right over the wallpaper with these new flat paints," Miss Talcott writes. "One coat covers most any wall and ceiling surface, including painted walls, plywood, wallboard, brick and basement walls.

"Employing a plastic base that makes it extremely durable and washable, this paint comes in paste form and is thinned with water—1 gallon of paste makes 1½ gallons of paint. It dries to a perfectly flat finish without lap marks or streaks, yet it can be washed with soap and water to remove finger marks and smudges."

MINNESOTA NEEDS ALL ITS INDUSTRIES

There are two main reasons why Minnesota needs all its industries at this time.

First: In a short time the war in Europe will be over and jobs must be found for all of the returning service men . . . unemployment may become a serious problem. We are glad to report that the Brewing Industry in Minnesota supplies jobs for approximately 35,000 people in the manufacturing, distribution and sale of beer.

Second: The tax load on every individual following the war will be stupendous and Minnesota needs all its industries to help pay the bill. It is interesting to know that one industry, The Brewing Industry, pays nearly two million a year in excise taxes to the state, besides several millions in personal, real estate, and income taxes. In addition to this, approximately thirteen million dollars are paid each year to the Federal Government by Minnesota Brewers.

After your day's work is done, you'll find a bottle of cold beer refreshing and economical. Patronize only Taverns that obey all local laws.

The Brewers of America pay daily approximately $2,000,000.00 to Federal and State Governments. This amount would purchase 20 medium tanks each day.

Rural Schools Get Health Books

Schools of Marshall county have received Christmas Seal Health libraries this week from the County Tuberculosis Association, according to Judge Nels M. Engen, chairman.

With an increasing emphasis on physical fitness by both military and civilian authorities, several of the books are devoted to instruction and training for fitness. Other books deal with subjects from first aid to the story of the Christmas Seal. The libraries range from one to ten books, according to the size of the school.

These books, of practical help to both teechers and pupils, have been purchased with Christmas Seal funds as a part of the education program for health. They are a part of the library project of the Minnesota Public Health Association, which is co-operating with the State Department of Education agencies in the statewide physical fitness program.

Maxine and Robert Olson have left our high school and will return to Hastings, Nebraska.

The following pupils entered high school on Monday of this week: Delores Engen, Lois Larson, Blanche Erickson and Irvin Larson.

Needless to say, the average attendance of the school for the past three weeks is alarmigly low, due to the number, not only in the grades but in the high school, who have been absent while at work. It would seem that pupils should be ready to return so as not to miss any more school time. More alarming, however, is the low average attendance record for those who have already enrolled. This has been caused by sickness in many cases, though a few have been kept home to assist with work in connection with threshing. It is hoped that we can begin next week with a still larger enrollment and that parents will not permit unecessary absence.

People of the community are welcome to become patrons of our school library. We have a splendid collection of books of all kinds, and will be glad to lend them to people of our school community, including those in rural districts.

The enrollment of our school at present is 111 of whom 62 are girls and 49 are boys.

Pick Milkweed Pods Now

Milkweed pods are now ripe and are in excellent condition for picking, County Agent Frank W. Forbes has reported in urging boys and girls to gather the pods the fluff from which is used in the manufacture of life jackets for the U. S. Armed Services.

More than 200,000 bags have been distributed throughout the state of Minnesota for pickers and one county in the state has already collected and turned in 15,000 bags. So far the collection in Marshall county has been slow.

In practically every county where collections have been good the work has been done by youngsters in the rural and village grade schools. Here is an opportunity for small boys and girls to make good spending money, as they will be paid 15 cents for every bag of pods turned in said Mr. Forbes. For dry pods, an additional 5 cents is paid.

The need for the pods is urgent at this time and it would be shameful to let them go to waste, he said. Milkweed is common throughout the county, so a sizeable collection should be made within the next few days. Bags are available at the county agent's office or from most rural schools or 4-H club leaders.

Forum Meeting Discusses Relief Foods

Roy Hendrickson Lee Marshall Herbert W. Parisius

Washington, D. C. (Special)—Seven hundred Washington officials and diplomats had their first taste of relief foods here at the Food Forum dinner meeting recently. The meeting was a down to earth proposition with every factor of relief feeding placed under a verbal microscope.

"Six years ago tonight, the first unprovoked bombing of civilians in the history of warfare took place in Barcelona, Spain," announced Bob White, executive chairman of Food Forum, as he opened the meeting. "So this is a unique anniversary, almost a forgotten one. Yet, tonight, this meeting of Food Forum is in a certain sense a recognition of that tragic incident. It has been called to discuss how America can come to the aid of the civilians who have been bombed and starved into submission by the Axis powers."

American civilians today are enjoying greater per capita supplies of food than they did during the 1935-39 periods, the so-called surplus years, Lee Marshall, director of food distribution for the War Food administration, told the assembly, which included 175 members of Congress and representatives of 18 foreign countries. This has been due in a large extent to the rationing system in effect and the outstanding food production which has permitted us to supply the army completely and still send quantities of food to our allies, he stated.

"This allocation system is an essential part of our food economy in time of war," Marshall maintained. "I also see it as a possible and to some extent, essential part of our food economy during the reconstruction period that will follow the war."

The sacrifices being made by the American consumer and those of the United Nations must continue during the transitional period between war and peace, Roy Hendrickson, deputy director general of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation administration, asserted. Even then, it is doubtful if food needs of future liberated countries in Europe and the Far East can be fully met, he said.

"The stream of food to the liberated areas, counting both that which UNRRA will finance and that which some of the nations will finance themselves, will be very large for 12 to 24 months after the surrender," Hendrickson predicted.

"A new chapter in the broad story of wartime food is coming up, nobody knows just how soon," Herbert W. Parisius, director of the office of food programs for the Foreign Economic administration, anticipated. "The inevitable alternatives to a good job would be either failure to feed millions of dangerously hungry people, or an intolerably heavy drain upon food supplies here and in other food-surplus areas. In addition to food itself, some production facilities will be essential as we help these needy people to help themselves. It will be wise and economical to move seed, fertilizers, hand tools, replacement parts and other necessary items into devastated areas."

by GRANTLAND RICE

UNFORTUNATELY (for its rivals), all this 1944 Navy football squad has is speed, skill, spirit, power, experience, abundance and able coaching. We have no thought of putting coach Commander Oscar Hagberg, the submarine leader, on the spot by saying he has an unbeatable team. There is no such animal, as even Notre Dame discovered last fall. But in line and backfield he has about all that a head coach needs, which the cool, quiet commander cheerfully admits.

Grantland Rice

For one detail the Navy squad carries along at least 12 fine backs, including such stars as Bob Jenkins, late of Alabama, and Ralph Ellsworth, one of the best backs Texas has ever sent to the field. And we have no idea of overlooking Hal Hamberg, an all-around ball of fire.

Fast hard-hitting backs flit up and down the field in profusion and they will be working back of a strong line, headed by Don Whitmire, the 220-pound tackle, better known as the Decatur Destroyer. In Ellsworth and Jim Pettit, Navy has two backs who can hit around 9.6 or 9.7 for the 100-yard dash, probably the two fastest in the country. Two-hundred pound Bob Jenkins is sure to be one of the stars of the autumn highway.

There isn't space enough to name them all—Barron of Vanderbilt, Earley of Notre Dame, Ambrogi of Penn, Duden, Finos, Barksdale, Sullivan and others.

The eligibility of Whitmire, Jack Martin and one or two others has given the Gold and Blue line just what it needed. I watched Rip Miller's countenance for some time without discovering a single salty tear coursing down either cheek. Rip is the line coach and one who knows his trade.

Hagberg Optimistic

Commander Hagberg came from somewhere near the bottom of the Pacific to take over Captain Whelchel's job. While talking with him who should pop up but Commanders Slade Cutter and Dorning, also just from the Pacific's depths with its wreckage of Japanese ships. Both were former Navy stalwarts.

"I am forced to break down and admit that we have a good squad," Coach Hagberg said.

"It is certainly all that any coaching staff could expect to find. We have 10 or 12 fast, hard-hitting backs. We have a good first line in front of them—possibly a pretty good second line. We certainly have our share of speed and two good passers in Hamberg and Ellsworth. You won't find a better tackle than Don Whitmire who is not only big and active, but always keen to go. It would be foolish, however, to say we won't be beaten.

"We also know what Army has," the commander said. "We know the type of football that such backs as Glen Davis, Douglas Kenna, Sensanbaugher (Ohio State) and six or eight others can turn out.

"This is sure to be a strong, fast Army team, looking for revenge after what has happened in the last five years. But tell Red Blaik I had nothing to do with this."

Classy Coaching

"This is a good Navy football squad," Rip said. "It can turn on the smoke and it has the punch. But among others don't let anybody tell you that N. C. Pre-Flight, Notre Dame and Army don't have good teams—not overlooking Duke, Ga. Tech and Purdue. What about Notre Dame? I can tell you something about this—it isn't the wrecking outfit of 1943, but Ed McKeever has a great bunch on hand, one of the strongest squads of the year. He hasn't what Frank Leahy had last fall, but he has plenty, including a fine passer to work with his T-formation. Every team which happens to face this Irish line-up will have trouble. All I can say is that any team that can take this Navy squad will have to be extra good on that one day. You can't always tell about football. But we have good stuff here, including a few that I think are standouts. We have more good backs than we have linemen so far, but we still have our share in the line."

All of this would indicate that Navy is likely to have a pretty fair season and possibly win a few of its games, despite the fact that Captain Humphries, graduate manager, has arranged the strongest schedule he could get.

Detroit's Wakefield

"Before Wakefield rejoined the Tigers, York was the only hitter that the enemy pitchers were afraid of in a pinch. They could pass him and settle down to get the next man and have little worry about the men on base getting home. They can't now, for Wakefield is dangerous. He may not hit as many home runs, but he is even more likely to smash a timely game-winning hit over second base." Charley Hughes, headman at the Detroit Athletic club, was speaking.

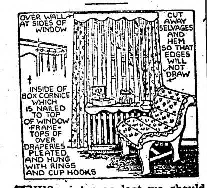
Matching Cornice And Radiator Shelf



OVER WALL AT SIDES OF WINDOW
CUT AWAY SELVAGES AND HEM SO THAT EDGES WILL NOT DRAW
INSIDE OF BOX CORNICE WHICH IS NAILED TO TOP OF WINDOW FRAME
TOPS OF OVER DRAPERIES PLEATED AND HUNG WITH RINGS AND CUP HOOKS

THIS winter as last we should remember that the purpose of a radiator is to radiate heat and that we are not getting the maximum from fuel if we box the radiator in with a tight cover. The shelf shown here is built well above the radiator and curving up under the shelf is a metal heat reflector which also covers the wall back of the radiator. The front and end of the shelf are trimmed with cut-out wooden scallops repeating the curves of those used for the cornice shelf above the curtains.

There is a trick about the cornice too. It fits over the top of the window frame but is considerably wider to allow the over-draperies to hang straight at the sides of the radiator which is the width of the window. The sketch at the left shows how nails hold the box-like cornice in place and how the draperies are held inside with cup hooks.

NOTE—The attractive chair beside the radiator shelf is made with pattern No. 265. Scallop pattern No. 207 illustrates the steps in making cornices and also gives actual size pattern for scallops for cornice and edging of the shelf. Patterns are 15 cents each. Address:

Western Front Aflame as Nazis Strive to Hold Allied Advance; Congress Shapes Postwar Aid

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

As war comes to their soil, German civilians pack belongings and move from battered villages in war zone to safety.

EUROPE:

Battles Rage

In some of the bloodiest fighting since D-Day, the whole western front from Holland down to Switzerland was aflame, with Allied forces slugging through stubborn enemy defenses and then holding their own against German counter-attacks.

Especially bitter fighting occurred on Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's Third army front, where U. S. tanks spearheaded a drive on Germany's famed coal and industrial Saar basin, and the enemy lashed back with strong armored forces. As Patton's men edged forward, the enemy fell back on the rugged and wooded slopes of the Vosges mountains, where they were expected to make a stand before retiring to the Siegfried line to their rear.

Stiff German resistance and repeated armored counter-attacks also slowed progress of Lieut. Gen. Courtney Hodges' First army to the north of Patton's Third. In this sector, enemy strength concentrated about Trier and Stolberg in an effort to throttle Hodges' drives to the great Rhineland industrial cities of Cologne and Coblenz.

In Holland, an estimated 100,000 Germans fought against entrapment by Allied ground forces driving up the eastern border of the country toward the Zuider Zee, and paratroopers dropped in their rear.

Effect of the Allies' drive not only was to threaten the pocketing of these six divisions in western Holland, but also to put them into position to drive around the Siegfried line ending to the south of this sector and burst out into the Ruhr valley.

Clawing through the battered "Gothic line" under the cover of the rolling barrage of their massed artillery, Allied forces looked out onto the rich Po valley in northern Italy, as German armored formations sought to stem their rolling advance in this great agricultural and industrial region.

Russ Break-Through

Heaviest fighting on the eastern front centered in the north, where the Germans claimed more than 600,000 Russian troops were attacking to clear out the Baltic states of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania.

Despite the Germans' hard defense of their lines, built up in the swampy lake country of Estonia and Latvia, the Reds punched out sizeable gains.

The old Polish capital of Warsaw was a fiery inferno as the Reds pumped shells into the German defenses of the city, and Red troops surging across the Vistula river came to grips with enemy units.

Armistice Terms

Calling on the nation to ". . . stick to reality and try to build up . . . existence with the opportunities that are left to us," Finnish Acting Prime Minister Ernst von Born disclosed Russian armistice terms to a heavy-hearted people.

Including restoration of the 1940 Russo-Finnish border; cession of Petsamo to the Reds; leasing of the Porkkala peninsula on the Gulf of Finland for a Russian naval base, and reparations payments of $300,000,000, the armistice terms were described as "the hardest . . . in our history" by Von Born.

Restoration of the 1940 border meant Finland's surrender of its most highly developed industrial region containing 10 per cent of its population, and cession of Petsamo meant the country's surrender of rich nickel mines.

GAS TEST

Five hundred officers and enlisted men have been commended by the chemical warfare service of the army services forces for voluntarily exposing themselves to lethal gases in order to test a new anti-gas protective ointment.

As a result of the tests, during which men entered gas-filled chambers and contaminated areas, medical officers and research scientists have conclusive evidence that the M5 protective ointment will be effective against gas warfare.

PACIFIC:

No Pause

Even as U. S. marines and doughboys cleaned up resistance in the Pala islands, 600 miles east of the Philippines, American airmen were on the go softening up other enemy strong-points.

Again the Philippines were the principal targets. Hopping off from New Guinea, army bombers blasted the southern port of Davao, shuttle point for enemy troops and supplies in the area, and carrier planes operating in the Third fleet hammered shipping, airfields and military installations around Manila bay, nerve center of the islands.

In striking the southern Palaus, whose conquest placed U. S. forces closer to the vital enemy water route from the Indies to Japan, American troops encountered fanatical resistance, more than 7,000 Nipponese soldiers out of a force of 10,500 fighting to the death on the main island of Peleliu.

FIGHTING SHIPS:

Allied Might

Recognized naval manual of the world, the 1943-'44 edition of "Jane's Fighting Ships" noted the increasing strength of Allied might on the high seas and the continued decline of Axis strength.

Indicative of the growing power of the U. S. navy, "Jane's" revealed that it numbered 4,167 ships last January, exclusive of thousands of landing craft, with high watermarks including the scheduled launching of two new 45,000-ton battleships this year, the development of a fleet of 100 aircraft carriers, and the construction of new 2,200-ton flotilla leaders.

Referring to Axis naval strength, "Jane's" reported that disablement of Germany's Tirpitz and Gneisenau removed its last big capital ships from service, and despite the launching of two new 45,000-ton battleships, Japanese shipbuilding facilities were running behind demands.

CONGRESS:

Charts Reconversion

With the fall elections rapidly approaching and congressional leaders pressed to assemble sufficient quorums, the house and senate made preparations for handling the post-war economic crisis and then moved toward a recess until November.

First bill to get an O.K. and be sent up to the White House for the President's signature was the one providing for a three-man administrative board to supervise the disposal of an estimated 100 billion dollars of surplus war goods, with no discrimination to be shown against little business and sale of all war plants over $5,000,000 subject to congressional approval.

The second bill passed called for establishment of an office of reconversion, which would coordinate the work of all government agencies in the switch-back to peacetime conditions, and also authorized the lending of funds to states if needed to meet unemployment compensation payments.

As the first major step to enable the automobile industry to prepare for peacetime manufacture, the War Production Board authorized Chrysler, Ford and General Motors to permit technicians to plan correction of weaknesses in 1942 models; bring material specifications to date; map plant layout, and design minor changes in 1942 models. None of the companies are permitted to spend more than $25,000 monthly for labor or material in this work.

But Few Ancient Obelisks Remain Standing in Egypt

Between 2,000 and 4,000 years ago, more than 50 large obelisks were erected in Egypt to preserve, for all time, through their hieroglyphs, the achievements of the Pharaohs. Yet today, only 19 of these monolithic monuments are still standing and only five are in Egypt.

New York has one, London one, Paris one, Istanbul two, and Italy nine, including the largest known, which is 106 feet high, weighs 455 tons and stands in the piazza of St. John Lateran in Rome.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER
Rationing of tires and gas has its headaches, but government agencies estimate that it has been responsible for cutting in half the annual scrapping of used cars.
In 1941 the U. S. consumed some 766,000 long tons of natural rubber, an all-time peak, but in 1944 the country is expected to use only 164,000 long tons. Added to that, of course, is an enormous tonnage of synthetic rubber.
Talking of tire conservation, city driving, with "stop and go" conditions, causes seven times as much wear on tires as 25-mile-per-hour driving in rural sections. Also misalignment of wheels may cause 10 times normal tire wear.

Proposed Amendment to the Constitution of Minnesota

To be submitted at 1944 General Election

STATE OF MINNESOTA
Legal Department
J. A. A. BURNQUIST
Attorney General

Saint Paul, Minnesota
February 28, 1944

Honorable Mike Holm
Secretary of State
State Capitol
Saint Paul, Minnesota

Dear Sir:

In compliance with the provisions of Mason's Minnesota Statutes of 1927, Section 46, as amended by Laws of 1941, Chapter 186, I make this statement of the purpose and effect of the amendment proposed to the Constitution of the State of Minnesota to be voted on at the November 7, 1944, General Election, in accordance with Laws 1943, Chapter 666.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT

By the enactment of Laws 1943, Chapter 666, the legislature has proposed an amendment of the Constitution by adding thereto a new article, to be know as Article 19. The proposed amendment, if adopted, will not alter the form of any existing section of the Constitution. The proposed amendment reads as follows:

"ARTICLE 19.

"Section 1. The state may construct, improve, maintain, and operate and may assist counties, cities, towns, villages, boroughs, and public corporations in constructing, improving, maintaining, and operating airports and other air navigation facilities.

"Sec. 2. For the purpose of carrying on or assisting in carrying on such work it may expend monies, including such monies as the legislature may see fit to appropriate, may incur debts, and may issue and negotiate bonds to provide money therefor. The provisions of Section 5 of Article 9 of the Constitution shall not apply to the provisions of this Section, and the purposes for which the credit of the state may be given or loaned as herein provided are declared to be public purposes.

"Sec. 3. The state may levy a state excise tax upon any fluid or other means or instrumentalities, or the business of dealing in, selling, or producing any or all thereof, used in producing or generating power for propelling aircraft of any kind now known or hereafter invented, or for propelling or operating motor or other vehicles, or other equipment used for airport purposes and not used on the public highways of this state.

"Sec. 4. The legislature is hereby authorized to provide, by law, for the taxation of aircraft using the air space overlying the State of Minnesota and the airports thereof, including any contrivance, now known or hereafter invented, used or designed for navigation of or flight in the air, on a more onerous basis than other personal property; provided, however, that any such tax on aircraft shall be in lieu of all other taxation thereon, and except that the legislature may impose such tax upon aircraft of companies paying taxes under any gross earnings system of taxation, and upon the right to use such aircraft in the air space overlying the State of Minnesota and upon the airports thereof, notwithstanding the fact that earnings from such aircraft may be included in the earnings of such companies upon which such gross earnings taxes are computed. Any such law may, in the discretion of the legislature, provide for the exemption from taxation of any aircraft owned by a nonresident of the state and transiently or temporarily using the air space overlying the State of Minnesota or the airports thereof."

PURPOSE AND EFFECT

The purpose and effect of the proposed amendment is as follows:

1. To permit the state to construct, improve, maintain, and operate, and to assist counties, cities, towns, villages, boroughs, and public corporations in constructing, improving, maintaining, and operating, airports and other air navigation facilities and, for the purpose of carrying on, or assisting in carrying on, such work, to expend monies, including such monies as the legislature may see fit to appropriate, to incur debts, and to issue and negotiate bonds to provide money therefor and excepting such expenditure of monies, incurring of debts, and the issuance and negotiating of bonds from the provisions of Section 5 of Article 9 of the Constitution. Because of the provisions of Section 5 of Article 9, there is now a question as to the right of the State to expend monies and incur debts for the purpose of airport construction, improvement, maintenance, and operation or for the purpose of assisting municipalities in such work. The proposed amendment specifically grants such power.

2. To permit the state to levy an excise tax on fluids and other means or instrumentalities used for aircraft and airport power purposes, or the business of dealing therein, thus permitting the imposition of an excise tax on fuels used in air navigation which are not now subject to such a tax, in the same manner as gasoline used in motor vehicles and the sale thereof are now taxed.

3. To permit the legislature to provide by law for the taxation of aircraft on a different basis from other personal property, thus permitting the imposition of taxes on aircraft similar to those now imposed on motor vehicles, in lieu of the personal property tax now imposed on aircraft.

Very truly yours,
J. A. A. BURNQUIST,

Gov't. Drive for Timber Crews

Representatives of the U. S. Employment Service and the U. S. Forestry Service will be in Warren on the Morning of Oct. 18 and in Newfolden in the after noon to recruit men for work in northern Minnesota's timber areas. All persons interested in this kind of employment during the late fall, winter and early spring months are urged to get in touch with these government services.

The demand for woods workers is among the highest priorities at present, according to advice from the War Manpower Commission. Vast amounts of timber for the manufacture of lumber and pulpwood to supplement dwindling supplies of vital boxing and crate material, timber for the proper loading of ocean going vessels, paper, and hundreds of other items important in the conduct of war must be produced in order to properly protect the steady flow of war material that is now being manufactured in the nation's busy war plants.

As quickly as the war is over in Europe, vast shipments of supplies will begin moving into the central Pacific and Chinese areas. Unless this material is adequately crated, much of it will be lost before it ever reaches the fighting front.

The timber industry, right now, has unfilled orders for 2,510 workers. This employment is available to men physically qualified for this type or work. Under new regulations, persons holding an agricultural deferment may take these jobs as tem porary employment without affecting their deferred status. If interested workers are unable to contact the special recruiters next week, it is suggested that they immediately get in touch with their nearest USES office.

In addition to men to work in the woods, the USES is searching for workers in other categories that are equally essential. Information as to more than 28,000 unfilled jobs in the state can be obtained from WMC's special representatives while they are here.

Write to the men in Service.

WOODS WORKERS WANTED

Saw logs and pulpwood are a "must" in the war effort.

Special recruiters, with complete information as to vital war jobs, will be at Warren, A. M., on October 18, and at Newfolden same day in the afternoon.

Mrs. Leiran states that she wishes her successors the same kind considerations and patronage that she enjoyed while she had the Eat Shop.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

John L. Collyer, president of The B. F. Goodrich Co., believes that it will be at least two years after the first recapture of Far East rubber-producing territories before normal operations can be restored. Meanwhile, synthetic and the constantly decreasing amount of natural rubber in the U. S. will have to take care of our requirements.

Every time an escort of 1,000 fighter planes goes into action on the battle front or on bombing raids, some 50 tons of rubber are being carried into the air. The U. S. War Department figures show that the average fighter plane has 105 pounds of rubber somewhere in its construction.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

Household Hints

To reheat bread, place in a paper sack, fasten tightly and warm for five minutes in a moderate oven.

A medium-sized gold fish bowl is excellent for use in whipping cream. Does away with splattering.

If you have difficulty in getting sonny boy to wash his neck and behind the ears, try giving him an old shaving brush and let him apply the soap.

Wax the metal wastepaper basket inside and out to prevent rusting.

Some homemakers serve raw turnips in strips to be eaten with salt, like celery.

Some carpenters bore a small hole in the end of their hammer handles and flow in melted beeswax or paraffin. By working the ends of nails in this, danger of splitting hard or thin wood is reduced. The hole will contain quite a supply of wax and doesn't, of course, interfere with the use of the hammer.

PRICE CONTROL:
Must Stay—Byrnes

Until total victory is achieved in the Pacific, price and wage controls must be maintained to prevent an under supply of goods and overly stuffed pocketbooks to set off a dangerous inflationary cycle, War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes declared.

Stating that figures of the bureau of labor statistics showed only an increase of 25 per cent since January, 1941, Byrnes said that farm income rose 81 per cent and the average weekly pay of workers 51 per cent during the same period.

"The stabilization program has hurt neither the farmer nor the worker," Byrnes asserted. "The white collar workers and the people with small fixed incomes have fared less well during the war, but the only way to help them is to continue to hold the line against inflation."

Seek Higher Wages

Even while Byrnes spoke, organized labor pressed for revision of the government's stabilization program, urging that the formula for limiting wage increases to 15 per cent over January, 1941, levels be junked.

In appearing before the War Labor board, CIO Chieftain Philip Murray argued that public members of a WLB panel had found living costs increased almost 30 per cent since January, 1941, rather than 25 per cent as claimed by the bureau of labor statistics.

Declaring that both labor and management were entitled to a quick settlement of the wage question so as to be able to solve immediate and reconversion problems, AFL leaders joined the CIO in the assault upon present wage stabilization.

Pictures proves parents' boast little Evelyn can stand up. In addition, she can raise herself while lying on her tummy and take three steps while holding her mother's hand.

RADIO TUBES:
Small Surplus

With such scarce radio tubes as the 12SA7 and 12A8 commanding as much as $10 in black markets, army release of 1,000,000 surplus tubes for civilian use will tend to only slightly ease the tight supply situation.

To be returned to manufacturers for testing and packing before distribution to customers on an "equitable basis," the 1,000,000 tubes will not even approximate the production of 1,754,000 in July, which met only a fraction of the demand.

Because of the services' extensive use of radio equipment for communications between units on the fighting fronts, trade circles saw little hope for increased civilian supplies until Germany's defeat permitted a cutback in military orders.

FOOD STOCKS:
Orderly Disposal

With the War Food administration already feeding the government's excess stocks of food to civilian outlets without disrupting the markets, U. S. officials will make every effort to maintain orderly disposal of surpluses with the war's end, WFA distribution director Lee Marshall said.

"We must maintain specified war reserves no matter how favorable the war may be going," he said, "but I, for one, don't think it necessary to build a separate stockpile of the same foods for postwar relief feeding."

In disposing of surpluses, Marshall said, salable goods would first be offered to companies which furnished the government with the products. Others in the same business would be given second choice.

WOMEN WORKERS

Tasting well the fruits of boomtime employment, with many adjusting themselves to industry since 1941, seven out of ten women war workers intend to stay at work after hostilities cease, a survey by the Northwestern National Life Insurance company revealed.

Nearly two-thirds of the married women and four-fifths of the single women declared their intention to remain in industry, the survey showed. Only 19 per cent planned to return to housework

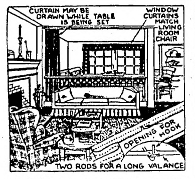
How to Remove Partition Between Rooms, Yet Have Separate Units

By Ruth Wyeth Spears



CURTAIN MAY BE DRAWN WHILE TABLE IS BEING SET WINDOW CURTAINS MATCH LIVING ROOM CHAIR
OPENING FOR HOOK
TWO RODS FOR A LONG VALANCE

HAVE you ever thought of removing the partition between your living and dining room but feared the ceiling would sag if supports were removed? Or, perhaps you have considered the idea and decided that after all it might not always be convenient to have the two rooms in one? Here is an answer to both of these questions.

The sketch shows the partition removed to give a greater feeling of space but the main supports have been left in. A balustrade between the two rooms makes a division without spoiling the light airy effect and a draw curtain matching the living room draperies make it possible to shut the dining room off when desired. By the clever use of curtaining throughout the two rooms are drawn together though they are still separate units.

NOTE—Here is news for homemakers. This sketch is from a new booklet by Mrs. Spears called MAKE YOUR OWN CURTAINS. This 32-page book is full of smart new curtain and drapery ideas with illustrated step-by-step directions for measuring, cutting, making and hanging all types from the simplest sash curtains to the most complicated lined over-drapery or stiffened valance. Saint Paul, Minnesota

Dear Sir:

In compliance with the provisions of Mason's Minnesota Statutes of 1927, Section 46, as amended by Laws of 1941, Chapter 136, I make this statement of the purpose and effect of the amendment proposed to the Constitution of the State of Minnesota to be voted on at the November 7, 1944, General Election, in accordance with Laws 1943, Chapter 668.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT

By the enactment of Laws 1943, Chapter 668, the legislature has proposed an amendment of the Constitution by adding thereto a new article, to be know as Article 19. The proposed amendment, if adopted, will not alter the form of any existing section of the Constitution. The proposed amendment reads as follows:

"ARTICLE 19.

"Section 1. The state may construct, improve, maintain, and operate and may assist counties, cities, towns, villages, boroughs, and public corporations in constructing, improving, maintaining, and operating airports and other air navigation facilities.

"Sec. 2. For the purpose of carrying on or assisting in carrying on such work it may expend monies, including such monies as the legislature may see fit to appropriate, may incur debts, and may issue and negotiate bonds to provide money therefor. The provisions of Section 5 of Article 9 of the Constitution shall not apply to the provisions of this Section, and the purposes for which the credit of the state may be given or loaned as herein provided are declared to be public purposes.

"Sec. 3. The state may levy a state excise tax upon any fluid or other means or instrumentalities, or the business of dealing in, selling, or producing any or all thereof, used in producing or generating power for propelling aircraft of any kind now known or hereafter invented, or for propelling or operating motor or other vehicles, or other equipment used for airport purposes and not used on the public highways of this state.

"Sec. 4. The legislature is hereby authorized to provide, by law, for the taxation of aircraft using the air space overlying the State of Minnesota and the airports thereof, including any contrivance, now known or hereafter invented, used or designed for navigation of or flight in the air, on a more onerous basis than other personal property; provided, however, that any such tax on aircraft shall be in lieu of all other taxation thereon, and except that the legislature may impose such tax upon aircraft of companies paying taxes under any gross earnings system of taxation, and upon the right to use such aircraft in the air space overlying the State of Minnesota and upon the airports thereof, notwithstanding the fact that earnings from such aircraft may be included in the earnings of such companies upon which such gross earnings taxes are computed. Any such law may, in the discretion of the legislature, provide for the exemption from taxation of any aircraft owned by a nonresident of the state and transiently or temporarily using the air space overlying the State of Minnesota or the airports thereof."

PURPOSE AND EFFECT

The purpose and effect of the proposed amendment is as follows:

1. To permit the state to construct, improve, maintain, and operate, and to assist counties, cities, towns, villages, boroughs, and public corporations in constructing, improving, maintaining, and operating, airports and other air navigation facilities and, for the purpose of carrying on, or assisting in carrying on, such work, to expend monies, including such monies as the legislature may see fit to appropriate, to incur debts, and to issue and negotiate bonds to provide money therefor and excepting such expenditure of monies, incurring of debts, and the issuance and negotiating of bonds from the provisions of Section 5 of Article 9 of the Constitution. Because of the provisions of Section 5 of Article 9, there is now a question as to the right of the State to expend monies and incur debts for the purpose of airport construction, improvement, maintenance, and operation or for the purpose of assisting municipalities in such work. The proposed amendment specifically grants such power.

2. To permit the state to levy an excise tax on fluids and other means or instrumentalities used for aircraft and airport power purposes, or the business of dealing therein, thus permitting the imposition of an excise tax on fuels used in air navigation which are not now subject to such a tax, in the same manner as gasoline used in motor vehicles and the sale thereof are now taxed.

3. To permit the legislature to provide by law for the taxation of aircraft on a different basis from other personal property, thus permitting the imposition of taxes on aircraft similar to those now imposed on motor vehicles, in lieu of the personal property tax now imposed on aircraft.

Very truly yours,
J. A. A. BURNQUIST,
Attorney General.

Coal - Wood Stoves Unrationed

Coal and wood heating and cooking stoves are removed from rationing effective October 15. and purchasers need no longer apply at local boards for a ration certificate.

Oil and gas stoves remain on the ration list, however, OPA said. Since September, 1943 when stoves were first rationed, the supply has not been sufficient to meet the demand for replacements of wornout stoves. Quotas of rationed stoves will not accomodate all applications, and OPA urges the purchase of non-rationed coal and wood stoves for heating and cooking.

Labor's Lever

America's 39 million non-farm employees last year drew about 90 billion dollars in their pay envelopes—three-fifths of our national income. These people have power to make their country prosperous or plunge it into chaos. They hold the lever and the best thing they can ever do for this nation is to act for their own best interests, seriously.

American workers will not toil for a few cents a day like Japs; they must not. Lowering Labor's living standards always damages American prosperity by just that much. Industry's only hope to compete in all markets, at home and abroad, is on a basis of manufacturing efficiency. Producing more marketable merchandise per worker per day spells prosperity to employer and employee both.

Making Jobs Pay

Last week in this column I showed how employment might be put at a safe, economic level after the war. Briefly the achievement will cost industry about $6,000 per job plus some good, sound planning. But this will be only a start. The jobs themselves must pay good wages and interest on investment. Otherwise they will be temporary jobs, not worth providing, not worth accepting. Only secure jobs are good jobs.

Cheap foreign labor has long been a challenge to American efficiency. There was a time when American workers felt directly the competition of immigrants glad to work for less than an American's living wage. The world was at peace then and immigration easy. Those conditions have changed, but cheap foreign labor still exists and it constitutes a serious threat.

Indirect Competition

Aliens may never under-bid American citizens for work on U. S. soil again; their competition will be indirect. The hazard is that European and Asiatic manufacturers will use their cheap help to imitate American goods and then sell the rubbish in America and elsewhere. Such a degrading of world markets will mean less business for American plants and fewer jobs for American workers.

The American workman's answer to such a challenge is easy: Less costly merchandise. This does not mean lower wages. It means higher wages. It means maximum yield—more and better products turned out faster and at less cost. It does not mean long hours. It means more workers on the job fewer hours with American efficiency, more yield per hour per worker. Whoever cuts production bleeds labor.

Wages Follow Volume

What a workman earns in a year is in proportion to what he produces. An employer's investment in tools increases volume, and the worker's earnings accordingly. High wages and high living standards for workers depend, therefore, on two things: (1) The employer's investment in equipment, previously discussed, and (2) workmen who can and will make that equipment do its best while in use.

If management buys tools to make things people want and thus creates jobs, if workers help crash the gates of world markets with prices lower than the drivers of slave labor can quote, doing so with good American things made faster to sell for less, then nothing can stop our prosperity but government itself. Next week, "Moral Courage," which is government's part in post-war prosperity.

To Relieve Bad Cough, Mix This Recipe, at Home

Big Saving. No Cooking. So Easy.

You'll be surprised how quickly and easily you can relieve coughs due to colds, when you try this splendid recipe. It gives you about four times as much cough medicine for your money, and you'll find it truly wonderful.

Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. No cooking needed—it's no trouble at all. (Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.) Then put 2½ ounces of Pinex (obtained from any druggist) into a pint bottle. Add your syrup and you have a full pint of medicine that will amaze you by its quick action. It never spoils, and tastes fine.

This simple mixture takes right hold of a cough. For real results, you've never seen anything better. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and eases the soreness.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its prompt action in coughs and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

Musterole brings such prompt relief from coughs, sore throat, aching muscles of chest colds because it's MORE than just an ordinary "salve." It's what so many Doctors and Nurses call a modern counter-irritant. It actually helps break up congestion in upper bronchial tract, nose and throat. Buy Musterole for your family!

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

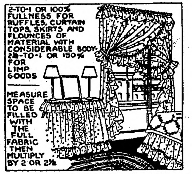
What You Should Know About Frills

If you have a power machine and have learned to use the attachments there is quite a saving in making your own frilled curtains, dressing table skirts and bed valances.



2-TO-1 OR 100% FULLNESS FOR RUFFLES, CURTAIN TOPS, SKIRTS AND FLOUNCES OF MATERIAL WITH CONSIDERABLE BODY. 2½-TO-1 OR 150% FOR LIMP GOODS
MEASURE SPACE TO BE FILLED WITH THE FULL FABRIC THEN MULTIPLY BY 2 OR 2½

If you do not have a power machine or the use of one, by all means buy your frills. Sometimes an extra pair of curtains makes a skirt for a dressing table with very little waste. Curtains that are ruffled all the way around may often be split for bed valances. Also, it is possible to buy ruffled material by the yard. Avoid skimpy fullness.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Economic conditions in the Latin-American countries have been greatly influenced by the demand for natural rubber. This is evidenced by the report that Nicaragua shipped to the U. S. 1,267 tons of rubber in 1943 as compared with only 60 tons sent us in 1941.

The B-29 Super fortress, our largest aerial weapon, has built into it some 5,000 pounds of rubber, covering more than 200 items. Thirty bullet-sealing fuel tanks alone account for nearly two tons of rubber.

Rubber Director Dewey is authority for the statement that heavy-duty military tires made with 70 per cent synthetic rubber and rayon cord are better than the best military tires made before the war.

FARM INCOME:
High Level

With an increased volume of crops marketed as the harvesting season advanced, September farm income jumped up 24 per cent from the preceding month to approximate $1,880,000,000 and total $13,848,000,000 since the first of the year, 6 per cent over 1943.

The 6 per cent increase in income for the first nine months of the year approximated the boost in farm production, with crops up 7 per cent and livestock 6 per cent.

Gains in cash receipts from tobacco and cotton were especially pronounced while, substantial increases also were shown in oil-bearing crops, with only flaxseed failing to keep pace. With greater sales of meat animals anticipated, the seasonal decreases in marketings of dairy products was expected to be offset.

Reflecting a boost in valuations of real estate arising from higher prices, farmers' equities have increased by $30,000,000,000 since the start of the war, according to H. R. Tolley of the U. S. bureau of agricultural economics.

At the same time, Tolley said, the accumulation of $12,000,000,000 of cash or liquid assets gives the farmers a sizable nest-egg with which to readjust operations in the post-war period.

Future equities will be greatly influenced by prevailing price levels, the amount of debt incurred and the uses made of accumulated wartime assets, Tolley asserted.

Under the impetus of wartime conditions, Tolley said, agriculture grew into a $70,000,000,000 industry in 1944 from $49,000,000,000 in 1940. If cash, deposits and savings bonds were added, the total value of the farm plant would approximate $83,000,000,000, he said.

Battle Royal

President Roosevelt

Even in the excitement of wartime, this year's presidential election promises to develop into an old-fashioned political dogfight.

As both candidates warmed up, President Roosevelt declared: ". . . "Some political propagandists are now dragging red herrings across the trail of this national election. For example, labor baiters and bigots and some politicians use the term "communism" loosely, and apply it to every progressive social measure and to the views of every foreign born citizen with whom they disagree . . ."

Gov. Dewey

The same week, Governor Dewey proposed to ". . . Revise the personal exemption so that the man who makes $11 a week no longer has an income tax taken out of his envelope . . . Reduce personal income tax rates . . . Change and lower the income tax on incorporated business companies so that it no longer acts as a drag upon production . . . Shorten the present endless list of nuisance taxes.

WAR PRODUCTION:
Labor Shortages

As a result of the War Manpower commission's system of referring job applicants to important war industries, employment problems in the heavy-tire, artillery, ammunition, rayon, aviation gas, rockets and mica plants throughout the country have been relieved.

On the other hand, the WMC reported, radar, tire cord, explosives and ammunition loading plants, and certain critical shipyards, lost workers despite the need for additional numbers.

WMC reported smaller labor turnover in recent months in essential industries, with 4.9 per cent of the total now quitting compared with 5.6 per cent last June.

With employment in the nation's mines falling to the lowest level in years, domestic and industrial coal consumers were warned to continue fuel conservation and buy whatever kind of coal was available instead of waiting for preferred grades.

With one man out of every six having left the mines since Pearl Harbor, employment in the industry has dropped from 558,000 to 463,000, with a shortage of 32,500 men expected by the end of the present coal year.

As a result of labor losses, employment in anthracite mines is the lowest since the 1870s, while the number of workers in the bituminous pits is the smallest since 1902.

Useful Crop

Coconut is the only great crop which from a common source supplies man's needs for food, clothes, and housing. With the possible exception of rubber and timber no other harvest meets so great a variety of mortal needs.

Throughout Middle America, both green and mature coconuts are an essential food providing an invaluable vegetable milk as well as a staple protein and oil.

Proposed Amendment to the Constitution of Minnesota

To be submitted at 1944 General Election

STATE OF MINNESOTA
Legal Department
J. A. A. BURNQUIST
Attorney General
Saint Paul, Minnesota
February 28, 1944

Honorable Mike Holm
Secretary of State
State Capitol
Saint Paul, Minnesota

Dear Sir:

In compliance with the provisions of Mason's Minnesota Statutes of 1927, Section 46, as amended by Laws of 1941, Chapter 136, I make this statement of the purpose and effect of the amendment proposed to the Constitution of the State of Minnesota to be voted on at the November 7, 1944, General Election, in accordance with Laws 1943, Chapter 666.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT

By the enactment of Laws 1943, Chapter 666, the legislature has proposed an amendment of the Constitution by adding thereto a new article, to be know as Article 19. The proposed amendment, if adopted, will not alter the form of any existing section of the Constitution. The proposed amendment reads as follows:

"ARTICLE 19.

"Section 1. The state may construct, improve, maintain, and operate and may assist counties, cities, towns, villages, boroughs, and public corporations in constructing, improving, maintaining, and operating airports and other air navigation facilities.

"Sec. 2. For the purpose of carrying on or assisting in carrying on such work it may expend monies, including such monies as the legislature may see fit to appropriate, may incur debts, and may issue and negotiate bonds to provide money therefor. The provisions of Section 5 of Article 9 of the Constitution shall not apply to the provisions of this Section, and the purposes for which the credit of the state may be given or loaned as herein provided are declared to be public purposes.

"Sec. 3. The state may levy a state excise tax upon any fluid or other means or instrumentalities, or the business of dealing in, selling, or producing any or all thereof, used in producing or generating power for propelling aircraft of any kind now known or hereafter invented, or for propelling or operating motor or other vehicles, or other equipment used for airport purposes and not used on the public highways of this state.

"Sec. 4. The legislature is hereby authorized to provide, by law, for the taxation of aircraft using the air space overlying the State of Minnesota and the airports thereof, including any contrivance, now known or hereafter invented, used or designed for navigation of or flight in the air, on a more onerous basis than other personal property; provided, however, that any such tax on aircraft shall be in lieu of all other taxation thereon, and except that the legislature may impose such tax upon aircraft of companies paying taxes under any gross earnings system of taxation, and upon the right to use such aircraft in the air space overlying the State of Minnesota and upon the airports thereof, notwithstanding the fact that earnings from such aircraft may be included in the earnings of such companies upon which such gross earnings taxes are computed. Any such law may, in the discretion of the legislature, provide for the exemption from taxation of any aircraft owned by a nonresident of the state and transiently or temporarily using the air space overlying the State of Minnesota or the airports thereof."

PURPOSE AND EFFECT

The purpose and effect of the proposed amendment is as follows:

1. To permit the state to construct, improve, maintain, and operate, and to assist counties, cities, towns, villages, boroughs, and public corporations in constructing, improving, maintaining, and operating, airports and other air navigation facilities and, for the purpose of carrying on, or assisting in carrying on, such work, to expend monies, including such monies as the legislature may see fit to appropriate, to incur debts, and to issue and negotiate bonds to provide money therefor and excepting such expenditure of monies, incurring of debts, and the issuance and negotiating of bonds from the provisions of Section 5 of Article 9 of the Constitution. Because of the provisions of Section 5 of Article 9, there is now a question as to the right of the State to expend monies and incur debts for the purpose of airport construction, improvement, maintenance, and operation or for the purpose of assisting municipalities in such work. The proposed amendment specifically grants such power.

2. To permit the state to levy an excise tax on fluids and other means or instrumentalities used for aircraft and airport power purposes, or the business of dealing therein, thus permitting the imposition of an excise tax on fuels used in air navigation which are not now subject to such a tax, in the same manner as gasoline used in motor vehicles and the sale thereof are now taxed.

3. To permit the legislature to provide by law for the taxation of aircraft on a different basis from other personal property, thus permitting the imposition of taxes on aircraft similar to those now imposed on motor vehicles, in lieu of the personal property tax now imposed on aircraft.

Very truly yours,
J. A. A. BURNQUIST,
Attorney General.

Ultra-Violet Light

Ultra-violet light in sunshine is largely filtered out by the cornea, the lens and the aqueous humor in the eye before the light rays reach the retina, points out the Better Vision institute. The cornea, the tough outer covering of the eye, absorbs about two-thirds of the short ultra-violet rays. When a person's eyes become irritated from over-exposure to strong sunlight, as at the beach, the soreness is usually in the cornea, or its external covering membrane, the conjunctiva.

HOW MUCH WOULD YOUR TAXES BE?

If Minnesota Industries were not taxed your taxes would be materially increased. Just take one industry to illustrate. The Brewing Industry paid to the State of Minnesota from June 30, 1943, to July 1, 1944, the sum of $1,745,690.50 in excise taxes alone. This does not include license fees, real estate taxes and corporation income taxes. The Minnesota breweries paid the Federal Government approximately 13 million dollars in excise taxes during this period.

You and all the other individuals in Minnesota paid a total of $11,673,923.00 to the State in income taxes. The corporations of Minnesota paid the State $9,267,189.00 in income taxes.

It is readily apparent from the above figures that Minnesota needs all its industries and especially the Brewing Industry, if you are to avoid shouldering extra tax burdens.

In addition, when the service men come back, continuing the approximately 35,000 jobs in the manufacture, distribution and sale of beer in Minnesota will help relieve the employment problem.

After your day's work is done, you'll find a bottle of cold beer refreshing and economical. Patronize only Taverns that obey all local laws.

The Brewers of America pay daily approximately $2,000,000.00 to Federal and State Governments. This would purchase 40 pursuit planes daily.

Sixth War Loan Coming Soon

With heavy fighting on all fronts, the need for further financing of America's war effort will again be stressed during the Sixth War Loan when Marshall county residents will be asked to raise $565,600 as its share of the $14 billion national goal, O. M. Mattson, county chairman, announced today.

The Sixth War Loan will officially open on November 20 throughout the nation and will continue through the month of December, with all bonds purchased during the two months counting in the total quota to be raised.

Preliminary plans for Marshall county's participation in the campaign will be learned at a Minnesota War Finance Conference on Saturday.

Marshall county residents have maintained an enviable record in all war loan drives since the war started and have comfortably over-subscribed every quota assigned, said the county chairman. During the Fifth War Loan, the county was assigned a quota of $675,000 and during the campaign residents purchased over $750,000 worth of bonds.

The Dorcas sale held Friday at the schoolhouse was a decided success. A large crowd was present. O. H. Nohre was auctioneer and H. O. Hanson, Clerk. The proceeds were $88.00.

Plans for the school Carnival provide for an unusual program in addition to refreshments, beauty parlors, novelty stand, musieum, bingo, dart throwing and guessing contests. Watch next week's Holt Weekly News for a display advertisement and plan to take in this annual event

Viola Knutson entered the 9th grade and Royal Mattson enrolled in the 8th grade. At present, there are 18 enrolled in the 9th grade, 5 in the 10th grade and 8 in the 11th grade, making the total high school enrollment 31. The total enrollment for the school being 118.

This week's war stamp purchases amounted to $12.60, making the total purchases up to date amount to $78.05. Miss Olson's pupils still lead, with $31.25 worth of purchases.

The Freshmen Initiation party was a success in every way. The Freshmen entered whole heartedly into the spirit of the occasion, and their hosts, the Juniors, were quite merciful in the program of stunts which the Freshmen so willingly performed. The Sophomores had decorated the lunch room very nicely and supervised the Freshmen in the washing of the dishes.

The teachers and Mrs. Alton Carlson, a former teacher, were honored guests. The boys of last year's Junior class were also in evidence, but found themselves on the outside, looking in.

Mr. and Mrs. Art Lufkin and children, Adeline Hanson, Dwight Darkow and Esther Lufkin all of Crookston, Mr. and Mrs. Orville Lufkin of Storm Lake, Iowa, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Reierson of Thief River Falls, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Larson and Fred Lufkin were dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Nohre on Wednesday evening.

Low Cost Relief Food Diet Announced

A DAY'S food for 13 cents! Three complete meals for the cost of a wedge of pie in the average American restaurant!

Since the outbreak of the war the United States Department of Agriculture and the food processors of the nation have been working towards just such an achievement. Recently in Washington, D. C., they proved that it has been accomplished.

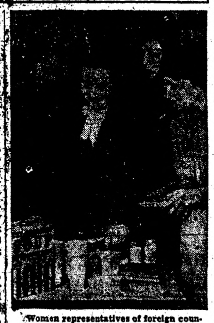
Relief foods sent to the reconquered countries must not endanger this country's essential domestic supplies. At the same time, they must be of a high, nutritive quality to sustain and to rebuild populations, weakened and depleted by long-term starvation. Last, but not the least consideration, these foods must be produced and processed at a minimum of cost to the nation.

The latest results of experiments, balancing all three factors, were revealed at the dinner meeting of Food Forum before 700 federal, state and foreign officials in the Hotel Statler, Washington, D. C., a short time ago. It was shown that a complete high protein diet for one individual for one day's consumption can be produced, processed and packaged at the low cost of 13 cents.

This diet, largely the result of experiments instigated by the War Food administration, in cooperation with food producers, is simple fare but it is highly palatable, easy to prepare and easy to distribute.

The foods were also tested in a unique manner. In connection with the important, morale-building factor of flavor, they were given to first and second generation families of foreign extraction. Each dish has been made acceptable to these groups thru modifications according to their suggestions. One of the products, a succulent "stew" mix, containing no meat, is the direct answer to a request by old country folk from a southern European area for a "chewy" dish.

A day's meals, made from these foods, might include two ounces of wheat-soya cereal, one ounce of pea-soya or cheese soup, one pound of bread and six ounces of stew mix. The nutritive value of the dishes is estimated at 108 grams of high quality protein, 9.44 grams of fat and 2,000 calories.



Women representatives of foreign countries, now members of the International Service group of the American Women's Voluntary Services, recently sampled and approved the 13 cent a day relief diet. Pictured with Miss Betty Leaming of the Department of Agriculture who prepared the foods are Mrs. John Hader of Norway, Mrs. G. N. Macready of France and England, and Mrs. Karel Cervenka of Czechoslovakia.

The Weather

The weather the past week has been beautiful. Sunshine and dry every day.

Never in all history have the farmers been so busy to catch up with the fall work as they have been the past two weeks after the weather cleared up.

Mr. and Mrs. Torrance Lillevold and Gary and Mrs. T. J. Lillevold of Grygla were supper guests at the H. O. Hanson home Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Paskewitz left Friday for Seattle to resume their work there after a months vacation here.

Mr. and Mrs. Orville Lufkin left Friday for their home at Storm Lake, Iowa after spending a week's vacation at the Henry Nohre and Lloyd Larson homes.

More War Workers Needed

The pressing need for war workers at the Gopher Ordnance plant in Rosemount where propellent powder, a vital war need, is to be made, has increased the unfilled war job openings on file at U. S. Employment Service offices in Minnesota to 32,000, from 29,000 in September and 20,000 in August.

Active recruitment drives to staff this and other essential war plants in the state are being made by USES offices. In Willmar, more than 2,000 persons attended a meeting at which war heros urged non-essential and unemployed workers to take war jobs at Gopher Ordnance. War films showing actual battle scenes, filmed under fire, were shown. These flms are available through WMC at 369 Cedar St., St. Paul, or by contact with any USES office, to any community where a representative audience will be arranged by local leaders.

A routine announcement from Washington that as soon as Gopher Ordinance has served its purpose it will be declared surplus and sold. will have no effect on the recruitment of workers needed now at the plant, nor on its operation at the earliest possible date.

Mr. and Mrs. Julius Borchert and Bonnie of Mentor and Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Hanson were entertained for supper at the G. Sanoden home on Sunday.

To Build Milk Plant Here

Another large construction job planned here is the large addition to be built to the local creamery for taking care of the whole milk that is to be processed here when that part of the creamery gets going.

Mrs. Bill Werner of Pontiac, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Larson and Ethel, Mrs. Nettie Peterson, Mrs. Ella Carlson and Oscar, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Knutson were Sunday dinner guests at the Carl Surmo home at St. Hilaire.

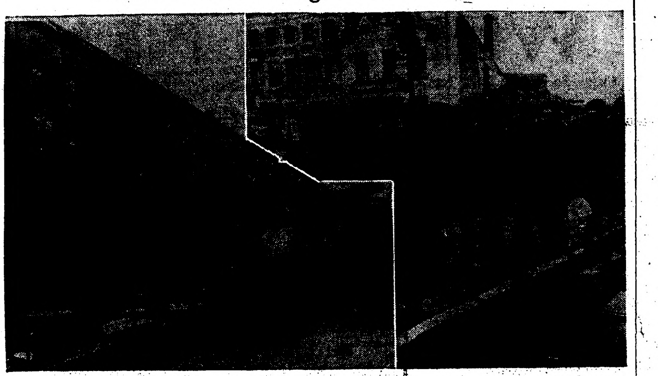
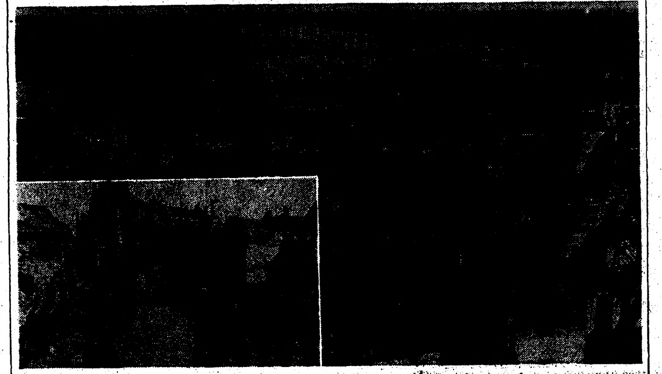
Truce Clears Battleground of Civilians



When Dunkirk became the center of operations, Allies and Germans agreed to a truce in order that civilians could leave the city. Views showing them leaving are typical of other cities along the route of the advancing Yanks. Allied headquarters say that the Dunkirk truce plan may not be followed in all other cities. Individual commanders will decide in the future.

Holland in Ruins as War Rages Toward Berlin

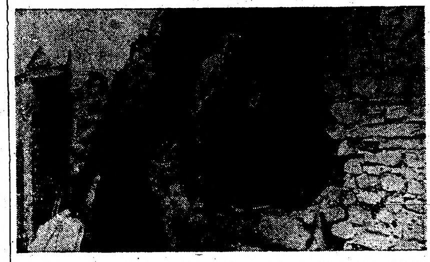


Typical of most Holland cities, Nejmegen, hit by German and Allied bombardment and shelling, shows the effect of the war upon that country. American soldiers aid in cleaning up the city as well as take care of snipers left behind by the retreating Nazis. Cooperation of organized Holland underground has made it possible for Allied troops to advance rapidly. Nothing remains standing in wake of Nazi retreat.

Coastguardsmen Cast Ballots

Coastguardsmen at a replacement pool in the South Pacific exercise their right to vote along with millions of American servicemen all over the world. These men are awaiting new assignments to coast guard fighting ships in the Pacific and will win back the Philippines and carry fighting troops in Japan. Early reports indicate considerable interest on the part of oversea veterans, with considerable soldier, sailor and marine individual campaigners at work.

No Place Like Our Old Home



Even when it is in ruins like this one at Scarperia, near the Gothic line in Italy, there is no place like home. Using a shell hole in the wall for a door, the couple return and lay plans on building a new home without fear of further oppression from the Nazi yolk as was their lot in the past.

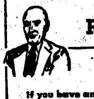
SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER



If you have any doubts about the shortage of new passenger car tires, a recent statement by a government agency that knows the situation should clear your mind. It points out that less than one new tire for each car on the road will be produced in 1944, even if the industry is able to achieve the goal of 22 million passenger car tires.

Tire care is imperative now, particularly with users of truck and bus casings. Stocks are low, and it is estimated that during the latter part of the year there will be a shortage of 25,000 tires a month to meet replacement requirements on vehicles using tires of the 8.25 size and over.

Nazis Fight From City's Ruins; Batter Gateway to China Coast; "Big Four" Chart Postwar Peace

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Arrows indicate direction of Allied drive on Germany (See: Europe).

EUROPE:
City of Death

Black and pinkish smoke curled above the charred ruins of the once busy city of Aachen as massed U. S. artillery and fleets of bombing planes poured their volley of death into it to rout out the 1,500 defenders.

But hidden deep in underground shelters beneath the rubble like moles, their spirits reportedly bolstered by wine and brandy, the stubborn enemy stood up under the bombardment to come up with machine-gun and rifle fire to plague the stout-hearted doughboys, working their way through the rubble after the heavy salvos of the big guns.

Even as fighting went on inside of Aachen, the Nazis massed for counterattacks in an attempt to break the Americans' pincer closing on the city from the north and south, throwing in sizable armored formations in the teeth of withering U. S. artillery fire.

A smoking and deserted ruin, the Nazis fought desperately for Aachen to use it as a symbol of fanatical German resistance, and to delay its capture because its fall would give the Americans an important road hub, with a broad network of superhighways leading to the Rhineland, 20 miles away.

Fanatical as Nazi resistance was at Aachen, it was no more rabid than on the Third army front from Metz to Nancy, where the enemy continued to fight strongly to bar Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's pathway to the Saar basin, and on the Seventh army front about the foothills of the Belfort Gap, 25 mile break in the mountains leading to Bavaria.

By landing behind enemy lines and outflanking their defensive positions, the Canadians steadily pushed the Nazis from southwestern Holland, while the British 2nd army threatened to close in on them from the north near Arnhem.

In Italy, heavy rains sent shallow, gravelled mountain creeks careening over their banks, and muddied up the hilly terrain, slowing the 5th and 8th armies advance on the Po valley.

As Allied troops knocked the Germans off of one slope, they bucked up against fresh opposition on the next, and occasionally the Germans threw in counterattacks in an attempt to exploit the difficulty of bringing up supplies over mushy roads or sagging mountain shoulders.

With most of its crack troops strung to the northeast and east, and no strong defensive system organized in the south where Russian troops were hammering forward after their dash through fallen Romania, Hungary's early collapse was expected by the Allies.

Massing 1,000,000 men, the Reds developed a three-pronged drive on East Prussia, aimed at slicing up the German province from the north, east and south.

Land at Harvest

British forces in the Peloponnesus who landed at Patras, fourth city of Greece, are on hand for the harvest of the No. 1 crop of the region.

The Greeks have a word for it, which we translate as currants. They grow profusely on the Ionian Islands and for many miles inland along the Gulf of Corinth shores. In fact, Corinth gives them their name. These currants of Corinth are small, seedless grapes. Harvested and dried, they become raisins of the same type that California produces.

PEACE MACHINERY:
Draw Blueprint

Having assumed the major share of defeating the Axis on the field of battle, the U. S., Britain, Russia and China, and later France, proposed to assume an equally major responsibility in maintaining the peace through a postwar security organization outlined at the Dumbarton Oaks conferences in Washington, D. C.

With other United Nations acting as an advisory assembly, the "Big Four", and later France, would hold permanent positions on an executive council, to which would be entrusted the task of maintaining order through peaceful settlements, or the use of force, if necessary.

To assist the permanent council, an economic and social committee would be organized to promote trade, and an international court of justice would be set up to settle cases which could be determined on legal grounds.

Points left unsettled by the Dumbarton Oaks conferences included:

1. Whether any of the nations represented on the permanent council shall be allowed to vote on the question of applying suppressive measures if charged with aggression;

2. Whether the U. S. representative's vote for such measures should be cast at the direction of the President or congress;

3. What forces or facilities should be placed at the disposal of the permanent council;

4. What constitutes aggression.

To Moscow flew Prime Minister Churchill and Foreign Minister Eden of Great Britain to confer with Marshall Stalin and Foreign Affairs Commissar Molotov on knotty Balkan problems posed by the Russian armies' lightning occupation of these countries.

Also on the conferees' agenda was discussion of the critical Polish situation, brought about by the exiled Polish regime's resistance to Russian claims to the country's eastern territory, and the soviet sponsored Polish Committee of National Liberation's demands for an important voice in the future government of the nation.

PACIFIC:
Strike China Coast

Even as Admiral Chester Nimitz declared that ". . . We must make landings on the China coast . . . to enable us to employ the air forces which will be at our disposal . . ." U. S. planes bombarded the Ryukyu islands and Formosa guarding that vital shoreline.

As hundreds of American planes sought to soften the enemy's defenses shielding the Chinese coast, the Japanese pressed their drive to seal off the whole eastern shoreline to prevent a juncture of U. S. and Chinese forces in the event of landings.

Recognizing the character of the enemy drive, Admiral Nimitz said: ". . . To the extent that the Japanese improve their situation in China, our task will become more difficult . . ."

Principal target of the U. S. aerial attacks was the glittering green island of Formosa, serving as a huge air base covering the sea lanes to China, and staging point for the enemy's South Pacific operations.

MISCELLANY

Milk is the largest single source of gross farm income and was 15 per cent of all farm income in 1943—larger than cattle or hogs, twice eggs, over twice cotton, four times wheat, six times tobacco. One out of every 15 U. S. families is dependent on milk for a livelihood.

Milk and its products comprise over 25 per cent of the 1700 pounds food consumed annually by individuals.

Soldier of the Soil

VICTORY begins with the American farmer, working from long before sunset until long after nightfall. Upon him falls the burden of feeding the fighting forces . . . the civilian population . . . and hungry mouths in war-torn countries.

To the challenge of producing more food than ever, American soldiers of the soil have responded with heroic effort. Despite shortages of help and equipment, they have established records. They have contributed mightily towards winning the war.

Now you are asked to help your fellow-men in another way . . . to contribute money to give men in the armed forces needed recreation, to give books and sports equipment to prisoners of war, to give nerve-shattered men in the merchant marine a chance to recuperate. To give unfortunate people abroad and at home a chance to have life, liberty, and happiness.

The dollars you can give are needed more than ever this year. Please give generously.

Plans Made for Sixth War Loan

Plans for conducting the Sixth War Loan in Marshall county will be disscussed at a meeting of the Marshall County War Finance committee at a dinner at Hotel Warren on Friday evening, O. M. Mattson, county chairman announced today.

The general meeting will follow a meeting of the executive committee at four o'clock at which the county quota of $565,000.00 will be broken down into quotas for each township, village and city in the county. Members of the executive committee include a representative from each bank in the county.

The importance of the drive was again stressed at the state conference where it was pointed out that Minnesota must raise $215,000,000 as its share of the National $14 billion goal. The war is still far from being finished and it will be up to everybody to continue to help finance the country during these trying times.

Members of the county committee include the following: J. A. Hilden and M. J. Swanson, Oslo district; Dan Dahlstrom, Alvarado district; O. Tollefson, Argyle district, J, Forrest Yetter and Odin T. Olson, Stephen district; Olger S. Green, Newfolden district; W. W. Barr and H. C. Hanson, Viking district; George Fricker, Holt district; E. M. Evans, Middle River district; C. E. Engelstad, Gatzke district; Sofus H. Bjertness, Grygla district and R. E. Melbo, Warren district.

Chas. Kranz serves as chairman of the agricultural division of the county committee.

More than 300 solicitors are expected to conduct the drive in Marshall county. These solicitors will make a personal contact with every family residing in the county to again place Marshall county over the top.

A series of solicitor training meetings will be held in various parts of the county the week preceding the drive. Motion picture films are being planned for showing at these meetings.

Holt School Notes

Report cards were issued on Wednesday with the usual indications with regards to industry, attitude, deportments and study. We have many pupils of whom we are proud, and others who have not obtained good grades for one reason or other. Parents are urged to examine these grades carefully and to cooperate in making improvements.

The seventh and eighth grades held a Halloween party on Monday evening and the high school held theirs on Tuesday evening. The school authorities wish to announce that pupils are supposed to leave the building no later than 11 o'clock when such function are held, and that the continued infraction of this rule will put a ban on school parties.

Plan to attend the Carnival this evening. Not only will we have the same attractions as last year, but we are adding a museum of curosities which will be much worth inspecting. Some of these are local and others have been brought in from abroad.

The program given in connection with this years carnival will be far different than last year. Miss Christianson is putting on a style show of costumes which were purchased in different countries of the world, and she will give an explanation as each costume is shown. Miss Loomis is responsible for a two-act play which has the title "Blondie" and is put on by the pupils of the 7th and 8th grades. The script was written by the pupils and eight characters will, we are sure, make an interesting presentation.

Three door prizes will be offered including five dollars in war stamps.

The bank here has charge of another farm auction sale to be held next week. This is the H. B. Ekman sale southwest of Newfolden, on Monday, Nov. 6. Read the ad in this issue.

There are also thousands of ducks there yet and deer running wherever you may look as you drive thru the reserve. It is the lieveliest place in this area of the state when it comes to seeing game in the wild.

NAZI MASS EXECUTIONS

Underground observers coming out of Germany have reported that the Nazis already have begun the systematic elimination of the vast army of slave labor imported from Russia, France, Czechoslovakia and various occupied countries.

Details of the story are so ghastly that they hardly can be believed. Yet the accuracy of the observers has stood up in the past; also the wholesale slaughter methods of the Germans at Lublin is already a matter of official record.

It is estimated that the imported slave labor inside Germany totals about 10,000,000. Either because Hitler fears their sabotage and rebellion, or else because they are a drain on Germany's food resources, machinery has been devised to kill them off. The number killed so far is estimated at around 1,500,000, though this is a very rough estimate. Absolutely definite, however, is the fact that mass execution depots, such as that at Lublin, already are set up in various parts of Germany. These have been witnessed.

Reason for the cold-blooded system of mass executions is explained as follows by underground observers who have come out of Germany: Originally, storm troopers were given a list of 15 to 20 persons and told to shoot them with their revolvers in the night. Sometimes this included whole families with children. So not even the S. S. men could take it. They suffered nervous collapses, had to be sent to sanitoriums.

As a result, the mass execution system was worked out at Lublin, and now at other places. It takes only a few men to handle the lethal chambers, and enough personnel can be found to perform the gruesome work without becoming insane.

LOST BATTALIONS

Of all soldiers in the U. S. army, the most distressed over the war department's demobilization plan are the men over 35 years of age. They get no extra retirement points because of age. In fact, some of them, because of bad health and inability to get overseas, may be among the last to leave the army following V day.

Stranded in camps throughout the U. S. A., they have become the "Army's Lost Battalions." Many were snapped up by selective service in the early days of the war despite deafness, blindness in one eye and shortage of fingers—all at a time when the army was in a rush to get almost anyone. Now many of these men are doing semi-menial tasks.

At Fort Meyer, Va., one group is daily assigned to grave digging at the National Cemetery. Others count socks and shirts for the quartermaster corps, are now becoming psychological problems for the army. Some found that infirmities when they entered have become aggravated since, but will never be recognized as having received disabilities in service.

The war department points out that "theoretically" men over 38 had an opportunity to leave the army more than a year ago, if they had job opportunities in war industries. But the war department also admits that it had to stop somewhere, and that since the WAC recruiting program failed, it is now necessary to retain the 35-year-olds to make up for the scarcity of WACs.

ARKANSAS FARMER IN LONDON

What most impressed alert young Congressman Brooks Hays of Arkansas during his London trip was the farm miracle the British have performed during the war. Hays was Arkansas head of the Farm Security administration before coming to congress, so traveled widely in rural England, was amazed by the economy of land use.

"Here's an island about one-third as large as the state of Texas," Hays said, "but with 50,000,000 people. And it is growing two-thirds of all its food.

"The British won't keep on growing so much food after the war," Hays says, "but what they're doing with their land right now is miraculous. And they like it, even though most of them never worked in the fields before. I didn't talk to a single one who wasn't tickled that we had sent them less food and plenty of fertilizer and farm machinery. They're really proud of what they were able to do and glad they haven't had to eat nothing but handouts from this country."

CARTEL MYSTERY STORY

Last month, FDR wrote a letter to Secretary of State Hull, told him: "Keep your eyes on this whole subject of international cartels. . . ."

Now Wendell Berge, assistant attorney general in charge of trust-busting, has written quite a detective story of his own. It is a book entitled: "Cartels Challenge to a Free World." If you want to understand some of the major traps into which the coming peace may find itself ensnared, it's worth reading.

Our Best Hope for the Future

THOMAS E. DEWEY
For President

JOHN W. BRICKER
For Vice President

Governor Dewey does not believe that America is through, that its industrial plant is built and we must be content to support a large part of our population at public expense, as the New Deal spokesmen have contended. He does not think it necessary to have 10,000,000 men out of work, as we did in 1940, after seven years of the present administration. America has not even begun to build its industrial plant, Dewey has said. There can and must be jobs for all, he insists. With faith in America and the vision to look ahead, he says:

"No living man has yet dreamed of the limit to which we can go if we have a government which believes in the American economic system and in the American people."

We must have more jobs after the war than we have ever had in any peace-time year in our history. Without reasonably full employment, without an expansion of peace-time production, there can be no adequate markets for our farmers, nor any progress for any of us.

Governor Thye says:

"Tom Dewey is the best hope, I think, for all the millions of our people who want to see America go ahead and grow and provide new opportunities. Instead of dividing the people, he will seek to unite all groups, and will be able, better than his opponent, I think, to get the forward action that will be essential if we are to have the jobs that will be needed after the war, proper markets for our farmers and reasonable opportunities for our people."

Choice of the People IN EVERY COUNTY

GOVERNOR THYE

First farmer ever to become Governor, Ed Thye already has become, in only a year and a half, one of the most popular Governors in Minnesota's history. Not merely because of his sincerity and innate humanness, but because of his careful and efficient management of the affairs of the Governor's office, coupled with the plain and common-sense approach with which he meets all problems.

No problem is too small to occupy his attention. No question is too big. When farmers could not market their hogs because of a glut in the market, he was ready to act and obtained a concession which aided the farmer. When potato growers could not get cars, he got the cars. When a labor dispute threatened to tie up some vital service, he has been ready to step in, and time after time has helped to bring about a solution. Fair to all, he has been able to wipe out differences and unite the people in an exceptional degree.

In the recent primary, he got a bigger vote, in every county in the state, than his opponent, the fusion nominee representing elements of the old Farmer-Labor and Democratic parties. His vote averaged 3½ to 1 for his opponent, and in many counties the margin was as high as 16 to 1. Among the farmers in his own precinct, he got every vote cast for Governor. In communities all over the state the people have rallied to Ed Thye's support. Applauding his straight-forwardness and down-to-earth commonness, men everywhere have said: "He is just one of us."

• • • • • •

On the Republican ballot with Governor Thye this year are six men, with long and effective service as state officials; nine outstanding Congressmen, and two of the nation's foremost leaders for President and Vice-President. For progress in state and nation—

VOTE FOR THESE MEN

Thomas E. Dewey for President and John W. Bricker for Vice-President; Edward J. Thye for Governor; C. Elmer Anderson for Lieutenant Governor; Mike Holm for Secretary of State; Julius A. Schmahl for Treasurer; J. A. A. Burnquist for Attorney General; Frank W. Matson and Ray P. Chase for the two positions as Railroad and Warehouse Commissioner; and your Republican nominee for Congress, August Andresen, 1st District; Joseph P. O'Hara, 2nd District; Richard P. Gale, 3rd District; Melvin J. Maas, 4th District; Dr. Walter H. Judd, 5th District; Harold Knutson, 6th District; H. Carl Andersen, 7th District; William A. Pittenger, 8th District; Harold C. YOU Can Keep Taxes Down with the Right Move

The right move for you is to encourage Minnesota Industries in order to avoid shouldering extra tax burdens. Minnesota corporations paid income taxes to the State of $9,267,189.00 for the fiscal year ending July 1st, 1943. The individual income taxes for the same period were only $11,673,923.00.

Among Minnesota's Industries one of the most heavily taxed is the Brewing Industry. For the fiscal year ending July 1st, 1944, the Brewing Industry paid the State $1,745,690.50 in excise taxes alone, not to mention the income tax, real estate tax and license fees paid to State, County and Municipal Governments. Moreover, the Minnesota Brewing Industry paid the U. S. Federal Government approximately 13 million dollars from June 30th, 1943, to July 1st, 1944.

With the European war's end near and the return of the service men it is well to keep in mind that the manufacture, distribution and sale of beer give employment to approximately 35,000 people.

After your day's work is done, you'll find a bottle of cold beer refreshing and economical. Patronize only Taverns that obey all local laws.

The Brewers of America pay daily approximately $2,000,000.00 to Federal and State Governments. This amount would purchase 2,000 reconnaissance cars daily.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Nazi Armies Fall Back in France; Hitler's Hold on Balkans Shaken; Lend-Lease Totals 28 Billion

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Carried on ox-carts, wounded Allied soldiers arrive at Myitkyina airstrip, Burma, for transfer to hospital plane.

EUROPE:
Nazis Pull Back

As fast-moving Allied forces pushed the Nazis back throughout all of France, German spokesmen hinted that Hitler's high command planned a withdrawal to the Reich frontier so as to concentrate the greatest number of men on a short line.

But even as the Nazis fell back, swift armored thrusts by the U. S., British and French continued to slash at the harassed enemy's flanks and threaten his encirclement from the rear, and clouds of Allied planes roared over the battle-lines to dip low and gun the retreating German columns.

With the bulk of their forces crowded in the area immediately north and south of Paris, the Germans put up their stiffest rearguard resistance in this region. In southern France, Lieut. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's Seventh army fanned out quickly in all directions, with only scattered bands of enemy troops standing up briefly to slow the Allied drive.

After capture of the great French Mediterranean port of Marseille, American engineers went to work quickly to restore facilities damaged by the Germans and enable the Allies to funnel supplies quickly to their armies in the south. Use of Marseille's installations would relieve the troublesome practice of landing supplies on the sandy beaches in shallow-draft craft.

Armistice arrangements for the German evacuation of Paris having fallen through, Free French armored columns were compelled to fight through a screen of Nazi defenders to liberate the city, with heavy U. S. howitzers backing up Gen. Charles de Gaulle's troops, and helping to break enemy resistance. Occupation of Paris with its 3,000,000 people in need of food and fuel for utilities, posed a supply problem for the Allies.

Turbulent Balkans

With formation of a peace government in Rumania, Adolf Hitler's unsteady grip on the turbulent Balkans grew unsteadier, with Rumania's defection threatening to topple Germany's whole southeastern front.

As young King Michael announced his country's willingness to accept Allied peace terms, Russia called for Rumania's expulsion of German troops from her homeland, or a war against Hungary to clear the latter from Transylvania, as the price of armistice terms.

Even as Rumania acted to quit Germany, Bulgarian peace proposals reportedly were forwarded to the Allies, who were said to have insisted upon the Bulgars' withdrawal from all occupied Grecian and Yugoslav territory as one of the armistice terms.

To prevent any peace factions from obtaining a grip in Hungary, the Nazi-inspired regime dissolved all political parties, including the conservative elements.

Russ Pressure

Figuring in the Balkan countries' swing toward the Allied camp was the Russians' power-house drive bearing down from northern Rumania.

As the Reds hurled their might at the enemy lines, they bored down on the Galati Gap between the Transylvanian Alps and Black sea, barring the way to the heart of Rumania and the Ploesti oil fields. From this region, there was short going before the Reds would reach the Bulgarian frontier.

POSTWAR PEACE:
Powers Confer

Meeting in the quaint, old Dumbarton Oaks estate in Washington, D. C., representatives of the U. S., Britain and Russia began momentous conferences on preserving postwar peace, with emphasis on the need of force as an ultimate resource. China was to join the conference after the Reds had finished their talks, since Russia is not at war with the Japanese and is unwilling to discuss repressive measures against them.

John F. Dulles

Accepting the invitation of Secretary of State Cordell Hull to discuss postwar peace plans, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey sent John Foster Dulles, his advisor on foreign affairs, to the capital to consult on the conferences. Hull issued his invitation after Dewey expressed concern that the major powers might overlook the interests of the smaller nations.

Although the conferees were said to agree on the principle of employing force to suppress future aggression, plans under discussion called for the use of force only after measures for peaceful settlement had failed.

ANTI-TRUST:
Railroads Named

Charging maintenance of noncompetitive rates, prevention of improvements and facilities of western lines, and suppressing development of other forms of transportation, the government filed an antitrust suit against the Association of American railroads; the Western Association of Railway Executives; 47 railroads; and the investment houses of J. P. Morgan and Company and Kuhn, Loeb and Company.

Focusing its attention on western rail operations, the government declared that establishment of higher rates in that territory than in the east placed it at a competitive disadvantage, retarding its economic growth. The government also claimed that movement of perishable commodities has been delayed by unwillingness to speed up schedules, and efforts have been made to stunt the development of truck and water transport.

In naming J. P. Morgan and Company and Kuhn, Loeb and Company in the suit, the government charged that they controlled major railroad financing and possessed substantial industrial interests in the East.

LEND-LEASE:
Aid Mounts

Declaring that continuation of lend-lease was essential for speedy victory until both Germany and Japan were brought to their knees, President Roosevelt revealed that the U. S. share of such assistance approximated 28 billion dollars up to July 1, while other countries contributed in excess of 3 billion.

Of the 28 billion dollars, Britain received over 9 billion; Australia and New Zealand, 1 billion; Africa, the Middle East and Mediterranean, 3 billion; Russia, almost 6 billion; China and India, 1½ billion, and Latin America, 172 million.

As an indication of the gigantic contribution U. S. industry has made to the war, figures showed that this country lend-leased 11,000 planes and 300,000 trucks and other vehicles to Russia; 6,000 planes and 9,900 tanks to Great Britain, and 4,800 planes, 51,100 tanks and 73,000 trucks and other vehicles to the Mediterranean area.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

USE OF AUTOS: A recent survey discloses that 74 per cent of car owners are driving their autos less than half the peacetime mileage. This reduction has come about through shorter and fewer trips rather than the laying up of cars for the duration. Gasoline and tire rationing have combined with patriotic motives to lessen car use, the survey continued.

TRAP SHOOTING: Capt. Joseph Hiestand of Hillsboro, Ohio, has once again won the North American clay target championship in the 45th Grand American Trapshooting tournament held at Vandalia, Ohio. This is the fourth time he has captured the award, the previous occasions being in 1935, '36, and '38. He broke 200 straight targets to lead the field of entrants.

Household Hints

Common sandpaper is good to use in cleaning suede purses, shoes or jackets. It removes the dirt and freshens the fabric.

Cut off just enough of the corner of the soap box to allow a thin stream of soap to pass through. The larger the opening, the more likely it is that more soap will pour out than is needed.

For crisp bacon that is juicy within, dust lightly on both sides with flour before frying slowly.

Two common causes of failure in pastry are too much working, and the addition of too much water. Flaky pie dough requires only enough water and handling to hold it together.

Next time the cream won't whip try this: add the white of an egg to the cream, chill and try again.

A half teaspoon of oil of peppermint added to the filling for chocolate pie gives a new and different flavor.

In grinding an ax on a motor-driven emery wheel or grindstone, keep the fingers on the ax-head to test its temperature. If the metal gets uncomfortably hot in the hand, stop grinding to keep the ax from losing its temper.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Normally there are 20 per cent more tire failures during the summer months than others. Tests have shown that at a temperature of 90 degrees tires wear out twice as fast as at 60 degrees and that at 100 degrees they wear out five times as fast as at 40 degrees.

Even with production being restored at Far East rubber plantations and our synthetic plants working at peak, authorities believe there will be a tight rubber situation for some time following the end of the war.

MacArthur's Forces Close In to Cut Off Japs' Pacific Empire; Set Up Military Rule for Reich

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

EUROPE:
Press Through Mud

As American forces extended their holdings about rubbled Aachen, and other Allied units pressed against the reich through fall mush, the U. S. and Britain laid down regulations for strict military government of occupied German territory and Adolf Hitler called on every able-bodied male between 16 and 60—and "if need be, women and girls"—for guerrilla warfare against the conquerors.

Focal point of fighting continued around Aachen, where Doughboys rooted out German defenders house by house in the once proud, now shattered, city of 165,000, and strong enemy units assembled to the east of the metropolis in an effort to prevent the Americans from bursting into the vital Rhineland.

Action also flared on the Dutch frontier to the north, where British troops pressed toward the German border below the pivotal Siegfried bastion of Kleve, gateway to the industrial Ruhr valley. So bitter was the fighting in this sector, that desperate Nazis made every house around the village of Venray a stronghold, with hand-to-hand struggles even carrying into the hallways framed with miniatures of Dutch masters.

Fighting was equally intense on the lower end of the 460-mile front, where the U. S. Seventh army edged up the foothills of the Vosges mountains guarding the Bavarian border, and lashed at approaches to the 25-mile-wide Belfort Gap to the south.

Strict Control

In extending military government to occupied German territory, the Allies demanded strict obedience to regulations, and decreed death for espionage, armed resistance, unauthorized possession of firearms or a wireless transmitting set, looting or pillage, destruction of records and sabotage. Further, travel within Germany will be forbidden except by special permission, and all political prisoners, Jews and foes of the Nazi regime will be released.

Churning through muddy roads, jeeps carry U. S. troops to rain-soaked battle-front.

Pending establishment of Allied control, postal, telegraph and telephone service will be suspended. Radios will be permitted.

'By Every Bush'

In calling up the guerrilla army to operate behind Allied lines, Hitler said:

"Just as in 1939 we are facing the enemy alone. In a first enormous effort of our German people's strength, we succeeded then; Germany's second all-out effort must and will succeed. Relying on our own force, we will not only break the enemy's will of destruction, but we will throw him back again . . ."

Addressing the reich from a barracks in East Prussia, under siege of Russian forces driving in from the north, east and south, Home Front Commander and Gestapo Chief Himmler ordered the defense of Germany ". . . by every village, every house, every farm, every ditch, every forest and every bush. . . ."

Massed Attacks

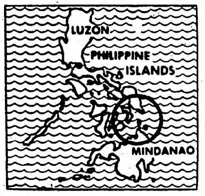
With the Russians attacking in force in East Prussia, driving into Czechoslovakia through the northern Carpathian mountain passes and battering enemy armored columns on the Hungarian plains, the Germans were hard pressed to hold their lines in the east.

Referring to the bitter fighting in East Prussia, where the Reds were employing upwards of 600 tanks, the Nazi radio exclaimed: ". . . The country is enveloped in smoke and belching flames and above it hangs the never ending din of battle. . . ."

PACIFIC:
Return to Philippines

Pursuing the tactics he employed in the Solomons, New Britain and New Guinea in separating enemy forces, General Douglas MacArthur struck at Leyte island in the center of the Philippines.

As the general's grand strategy shaped as the U. S. Sixth army, supported by the U. S. Third and Seventh fleets and carrier planes, not only were the Japanese on the main island of Luzon in the north divided from their units on Mindanao to the south, but the Americans' foothold put them in position to threaten the enemy's supply lines farther to the west carrying vital raw materials from the Indies region up to the foe's home industries.



Circle indicates region of U. S. invasion of Philippines.

Under cover of an extensive air umbrella and the big guns of the U. S. warships, supplies were poured ashore to the American troops, who held a wide strip reaching southward from the principal port of Tacloban, and who girded for a showdown fight with an estimated 225,000 Japanese in the Philippines under Field Marshall Count Juichi Terauchi.

General MacArthur's invasion of the Philippines, fulfilling his pledge to return after the Japanese conquest of the islands less than three years ago, followed in the wake of the Third fleet's continued aerial attack on enemy shipping and aviation units in the Formosa and Manila regions, which prevented their free dispatch to counter the big invasion of Leyte.

The presence of substantial elements of the Third fleet in these waters, with warships as well as aircraft carriers in full array, also scared off the vaunted Japanese navy's incursion into the invasion waters, the enemy turning tail before large-scale action could develop.

General MacArthur's return to the Philippines was personal, the commander having directed the operation from a warship and then set up headquarters ashore.

FUEL:
Warm Winter

Due to a combination of high production of coal and efficient transportation, U. S. homes will be well warmed this winter, even though the government continues to advise conservation to assure orderly consumption to meet wartime needs.

With production having passed the 500,000,000 ton mark so far, soft-coal output is running 25,000,000 tons over last year. Not only are rail deliveries moving up to snuff, but careful planning has permitted the transport of great quantities of coal over the Great Lakes for distribution to adjacent territories.

How much foreign countries may draw on U. S. coal supplies remains undetermined, with British production lagging and miners threatening to strike for higher wages, and uncertainty existing as to what extent output may be resumed in liberated nations to help meet some of their own needs.

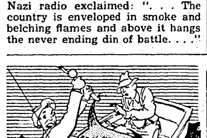
Oil Output

Rich in coal, the U. S. is equally rich in petroleum, with oil production estimated at approximately 5,500,000 barrels daily.

With its western and coastal fields alone yielding over 1,000,000 barrels daily, Texas, with its seven producing areas, leads the U. S. in output with over 2,000,000 barrels. With almost 900,000 barrels daily, California runs second.

Other big producers with their approximate daily output include Louisiana with 360,000 barrels; Oklahoma 340,000; Kansas 265,000; Illinois 200,000; New Mexico 100,000; Wyoming 98,000 and Arkansas 80,000.

With 50 barrels daily, Florida is at the bottom of the list.



While casting in the west fork of the Chippewa river near Hayward, Wis., Frank Shriner of Chicago, Ill., drew on a 3½ foot musky.

Twice the musky bumped into the spoon, then, enraged, really charged it a third time as Shriner pulled it in. Coming in hard, the musky crashed right into the flat side of Shriner's boat as he nailed the spoon and lay nearby belly up!

Then the musky rolled right side up, shook the spoon out of his jaws, and was off.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Check your tire pressure before inflating and save tire mileage and troublesome flats urges the Office of Defense Transportation. A passenger car tire that is 3 pounds below the lowest of its running mates can be suspected of having an undisclosed puncture. Five pounds' variance is allowed in truck tires.

Ordinarily statistics are dull, but here are some that are significant when you consider that a 6.00 x 16 passenger car tire weighs about 22 pounds: There are 60,000 pounds of rubber in a battleship; 55,195 pounds in an aircraft carrier without plane complements; 4,358 pounds in a destroyer; 65,000 pounds in a submarine.

Hagen Voted Against Farmers

Congressman Harold C. Hagen says he is for the farmers. Do you believe him?

On the question of "Parity Payment" on Dairy Products he is recorded as opposed to the farmers receiving these payments.

If his vote had decided this question, farmers of Marshall County would not have received the $90,806 they did from October 1, 1943 to June 30, 1944, which on this basis will amount to $121,072 for the year ending October 1, 1944. Farmers of the Ninth Congressional District would not have received the $1,557,039 or a total of $2,076,051 for the year ending October 1, 1944.

Let's see why the appropriaton passed — in whose interest Hagen voted when he voted against it.

At the beginning of the war prices were set on most all commodities, including butterfat. A year ago feed was high and scarce. Appropriation was made to off-set the high price of feed some of Hagen's friends said they should raise the price of butter as the war workers could afford to pay more. That might be true as far as the war workers are concerned, but the Ninth District hasn't many of those. The Ninth District has a lot of aged people—some receiving old age assistance, some with a small income, women and orphans, men and women with large families to support. This appropriation benefits the consumer as well as the dairy farmer and insured the Armed Forces of a supply of dairy products.

When Hagen voted against this bill, who was he trying to protect? The big tax payers principally from the East.

His vote on other bills is just as bad as the one I have mentioned, but space won't permit explanation.

I think he should be defeated regardless of what ticket he is on. He is not an honest Republican. He is what you would call "a political opportunist".

HAGEN ANSWERS OPPONENTS

The political managers for my opponent are basing in desperation their last minute campaign on false and libelous charges. They say for instance:

"Mr. Hagen voted against appropriation to make possible 'parity payments' on dairy products"

The above statement is untrue! It is False.

The record will show that I voted for the Agriculture Appropriation Bill, (Public Law 367) which included funds for butter subsidies. This bill passed the House on June 22, 1944.

What my opponents' managers fail to say is that I fought vigorously for 70c to 75c a pound for butterfat and full parity for all farm crops and eggs too.

Yes, I opposed the reduction of the price of butterfat. This move, and the subsidy program made it impossible for Congress to provide a REAL parity program for butterfat.

The official public record tell the TRUE story!

FOR PROGRESS
In State and Nation

Marshall County, and this whole territory, is primarily an agricultural territory. People make their living fron the soil. The farmers' problems affect every one of us, and in view of this fact, we are reprinting here an editorial which recently appeared in the Farm Journal, a national farm magazine which most of you know. We quote:

A Day For Ideals!

The Hilman-CIO attempts to gain control of the United States govenment depends upon two things—the casting of every possible city vote, and the failure of rural people to go to the polls.

The attempt has not been inspired by devotion to the principles of the Democratic party. Sidney Hillman is not a Democrat; he belongs to that wing of the New York American Labor Party in which the Communitst influence is uppermost.

Neither the Hillmans nor the Browders, nor their new accomplices, the old-line city bosses — the Hauges, Pendergasts and Kellys—are concerned about the party principles, nor are they moved by regard for Franklin D. Roosevelt. Their alliance supports the Fourth Term in the cold expectation that it will pay off for them in places and power.

Neither the city machine bosses, nor the Communist back-room boys, nor Sidney Hillman have a shadow of agricultural interest. Through the CIO-Political Action Committee and other agencies they are waging a tremendous campaign to get out the biggest vote ever cast in great cities. Their hope is that enough of the good people of rural America will neglect to vote on election day to permit them to determine the result.

If they succeed, and a Fourth Term Administration follows, that administration will be in their debt. They will own it body & soul.

The corruption of the boss-ridden machine has long been notorious. None ever worse than the Pendergast regime in Kansas City. Pendergast went to prison for his crimes, only to be pardoned by President Rousevelt, as was Browder, the Communist leader. Pendergast's St. Louis imitator is Bob Hannegan, now national chairman for the Fourth Term campaign, Pendergast's protege, Harry S. Truman, is the vice-presidental candidate.

A clean and honest American cannot survive with machine-boss ideals in control of the national government.

The coalition of the machine bosses with the spokesmen of radicalism and Communism is ominous for freedom, and a challange to all American ideals both of liberty and decency.

There are morals to communism. It is the avowed enemy of human freedom and of human rights of property. Its record of purges and murder, of sabotage and deceit, is written in recent history. It has even "disolved" its American branch to hide under the cloak of others. Anything for the power to destroy the principles of freedom under which our people have grown great and prosperous.

The tremendous problems ahead of the American people will not be solved by radicalism, nor by its dishonest men. They will not be met by an administration indebted to such corrupt and un-American forces.

The idealism of America cries out for the leadership of clean men who stand up for honesty, of forthright men who have faith in American ways and belief in an American tomorrow.

Farmers of America! You are laboring 365 days this year so help protect American ideals from foriegn aggression. Will you give one day, on November 7, to preserve these ideals at home.

To continue and carry forward the advances in government Minnesota has enjoyed the last six years—

To assure our state of leadership that will be sound and forward-looking, alert and capable to meet the critical problems ahead—

To place at the head of the national government men who will give the nation the kind of constructive, helpful leadership Minnesota has enjoyed—

No Open Season For Muskrats This Winter

There will be no open season on Muskrats in Minnesota this winter, according to an announcement made by Chester Wilson, commissioner of conservation.

'Information furnished Verne E. Joslin, director of game and fish, by the game reseach men, as a result of their annual fall muskrat census, shows that there has been a decided reduction in the rat population as compared with last year", states Mr. Wilson. "With this marked reduction in the population which possibly has resulted from a number of factors such as extreme high waters during the early breeding season, excessive drought for the past two months, and the possibility that the muskrat populations are cyclic in nature, it has been decided advisable this year to keep the season closed to trapping."

This decision is concurred in by the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service as it relates to the Mississippi River Wildlife Refuge, where the rat population is also greatly reduced. Those in charge of that unit had previously recommended to the district office that there be no open season on rats in the Mississippi Refuge.

There may be a few locations where muskrats are actually doing damage to property or a few shallow sloughs where the muskrats are likely to freeze out during the winter but in instances local game wardens are authorized to issue permits for the trapping of these rats.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY GEORGE S. BENSON
President-Harding College
Searcy, Arkansas

Citizenship

A farmer of my acquaintance has a knife he wouldn't sell for a ransom, although he is not wealthy. The knife is of a kind that could be manufactured in quantity to retail for less than two dollars. The farmer's son took it from a Jap in a hand-to-hand fight. Wounds the boy received however left him maimed for life. The father prizes the trophy for its cost, not its worth.

One of the strangest quirks of human nature is the hook-up between cost and value. People so often appreciate things according to what they cost instead of according to what they are worth. A man who falls heir to a fortune without effort is much more liable to squander than his neighbor who may have acquired a similar amount the hard way; his wealth cost him too little.

A Thing of Value

It's like American citizenship, a thing of great value that costs too little. The fee exacted from an immigrant when he "takes out his papers" is not a drop in the sea compared to what he gets. Moreover, the vast majority of Americans acquired citizenship rights with their first conscious breath. We grew up with citizenship. We have always had it and consequently don't appreciate it as we should.

You may have read stories of how British citizenship, about the time America was being colonized, was keenly coveted by noble Huguenots who fled France as refugees. Almost everybody in Christendom is familiar with New Testament accounts of how Saul of Tarsus' life was spared more than once because he, although an Israelite, was born a privileged citizen of Rome.

An Expensive Item

Roman citizenship in Bible times could be bought, and it cost a great price. It had a great value, too, but it wasn't worth nearly as much as our American citizenship, that costs so little. I think everybody in the United States ought to be educated for citizenship. Not many are, either natives or naturalized citizens. Not everybody needs a college degree but everybody needs to appreciate his freedom.

Americans were conscious of their citizenship for a long time back of a century ago. Government held the spotlight of youth's attention. In the last hundred years, however, invention has intrigued the interest of more and more American boys. Unfortunately a keen interest in something spells relative indifference to something else, and engineering has hid government in almost total eclipse.

History's Very Heart

John Tyler was President a century ago. In 1844 Louisa M. Alcott was ten, enjoying the placid childhood she so beautifully preserved in print. But wait . . . the people were agog that year at the world's first telegraph line, one ticker in Washington and another in Baltimore. Little boys were eagerly flattening their noses against window panes to see that new invention, a bicycle, pass by.

These five generations of high, scientific achievement are not to be despised. In them, our wage levels and national income have made America the envy of a mercenary world. But the foundation for all this was laid between George Washington's day and John Tyler's.

The science of self government must regain its rightful place in the field of learning if we Americans are to hold up our living standards. Our youth must better appreciate the rights and privileges of citizenship, its cost and its value.

County Sold Bonds At Low Interest Rate

Marshall county bonds were sold at the lowest rate in county financial history on October 26th when the county commissioners sold $189,000.00 worth of Refunding Bonds at a rate of 1.04 per cent, thereby saving taxpayers 2.85 per cent interest rate over the 4½ per cent to be refunded.

The sale was made to the First National Bank of Minneapolis, represented at the advertised sale by Carl J. Call of the bank bond department. T. G. Evenson, Minneapolis investment broker, handled the transaction for the county.

The Refunding Bonds will retire from 1945 to 1949, with the interest payable semi-annually on the first days of April and October. The annual payments will be from $35,000 to $45,000.

Marshall county has made an enviable record in its financial status since 1927 when the bonded debt of the county reached the large staggering figure of $1,848,541.68 to a low of $408,000.00 on August 31, 1944. The present bonded debt includes a debt for Drainage Funding Bonds totaling $302,553.87 and Road & Bridge and Revenue Funding Debt totaling $105,446.13. All bonds are scheduled for maturity by 1953, including the present refunding issue.

The county, as of August 31, had cash on hand totaling $175,542.28 and $80,000.00 in cash invested in U. S. War Bonds. There are no outstanding warrants, and tax payments reveal but small delinquencies. The county mill rate is 48.09.

All other tax units in the county have also been making steady progress in reducing their outstanding debt from 1930 to 1943. Village debts have been cut from $163,889.33 to $79,515.65; City debt from $43,385.88 to $10,295; School debt from $426,291.97 to $168,162.41 and Township debt from 30,293 to 1,987.

There has been no default in Marshall county in payment of either principal or interest on any of its bonds since 1933, after which the state ligislature appropriated $750,000 in special law to relieve the ditch bond burden in the eastern part of the county. W. O. Braggans was the county attorney at the time and engineered the proceeding which resulted in this assistance from the state legislature.

County commissioners who have served during the interval have outstanding service for the taxpayers and residents of the county in insisting upon continued debt reduction and are largely responsible for the splendid financial condition the county now holds. Ole Bergman present chairman of the board, is the lone member of the group who has held his position continuously since the dark days of 1939 when the debt reached the staggering figures. Present members of the board in addition to Mr. Bergman are V. F. Kruta, Arthur Anderson, John Rapacz and Leslie Grange, with Levi Johnson, county auditor during most of the period.—Warren Sheaf.

To the People of this Community

The Victory Volunteer goes by many names in the Sixth War Loan. Sometimes he or she is called a Gallant, sometimes a Blue Star Brigadier or perhaps a Bondadier. Whatever the designation, he or she is performing a practical patriotic service. In this community in the next few weeks you will meet many of them at work, in the theatres, at your workshop, in the banks and in your home.

Remember one thing: you do not do them a favor when you buy an extra War Bond. You help your country, your fighting relatives and friends and yourself. The Victory Volunteer gives his time and his energy in a great cause. He or she makes it easy for you to do your duty by buying at least one extra $100 War Bond over and above your regular Bond purchases.

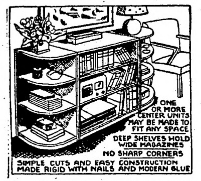
Unit Shelves Easy For You to Build

WHETHER you have a house of your own or whether you move often, unit book shelves are the answer to many a problem. They may be scaled to fit almost any space; you may add to them as needed and they may be shifted from one place to another according to your mood. They may start in the living room and end in the children's room or in the kitchen. The units may be divided, multiplied or used in various combinations.

You need no special skill to make the three units shown. These well proportioned shelves were designed especially for amateur homecrafters to make, with the simplest tools. A compass saw from the five-and-dime will cut the curved shelves of the end units. Because the shelves were designed by a homemaker, a simple method of constructing them with no open dust space at the bottom was worked out and special thought was given to the width and depth of shelves so that they would have the maximum usefulness and still be made of stock sizes of lumber.



ONE OR MORE CENTER UNITS MAY BE MADE TO FIT ANY SPACE
